MAKING A PLACE ON THE TEAM.

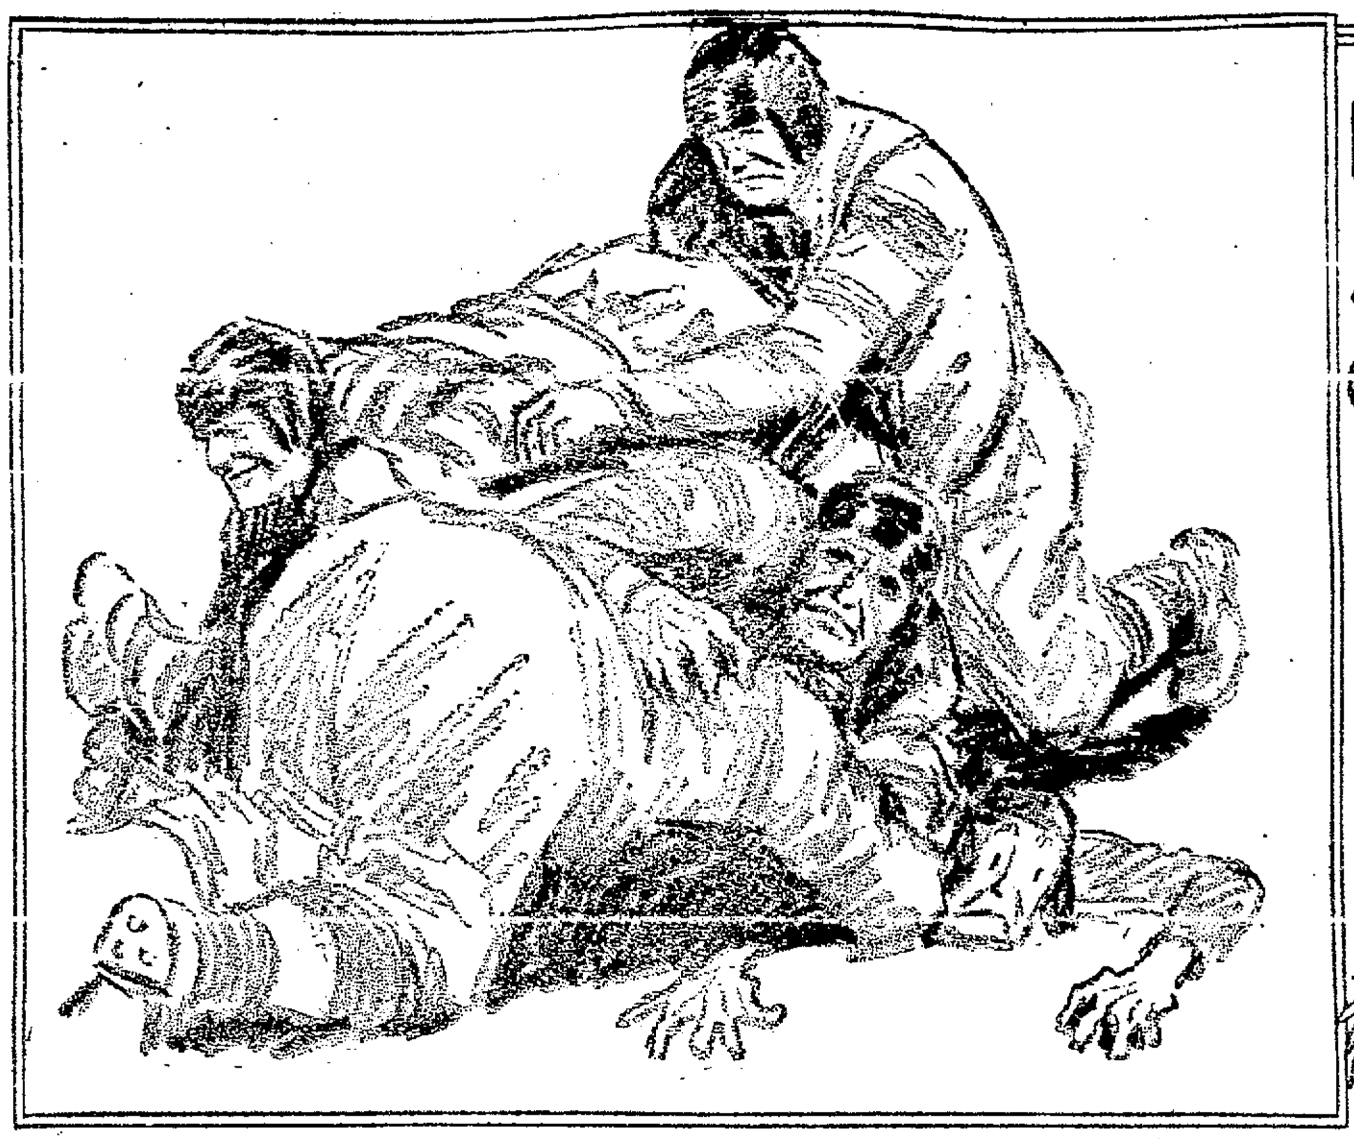
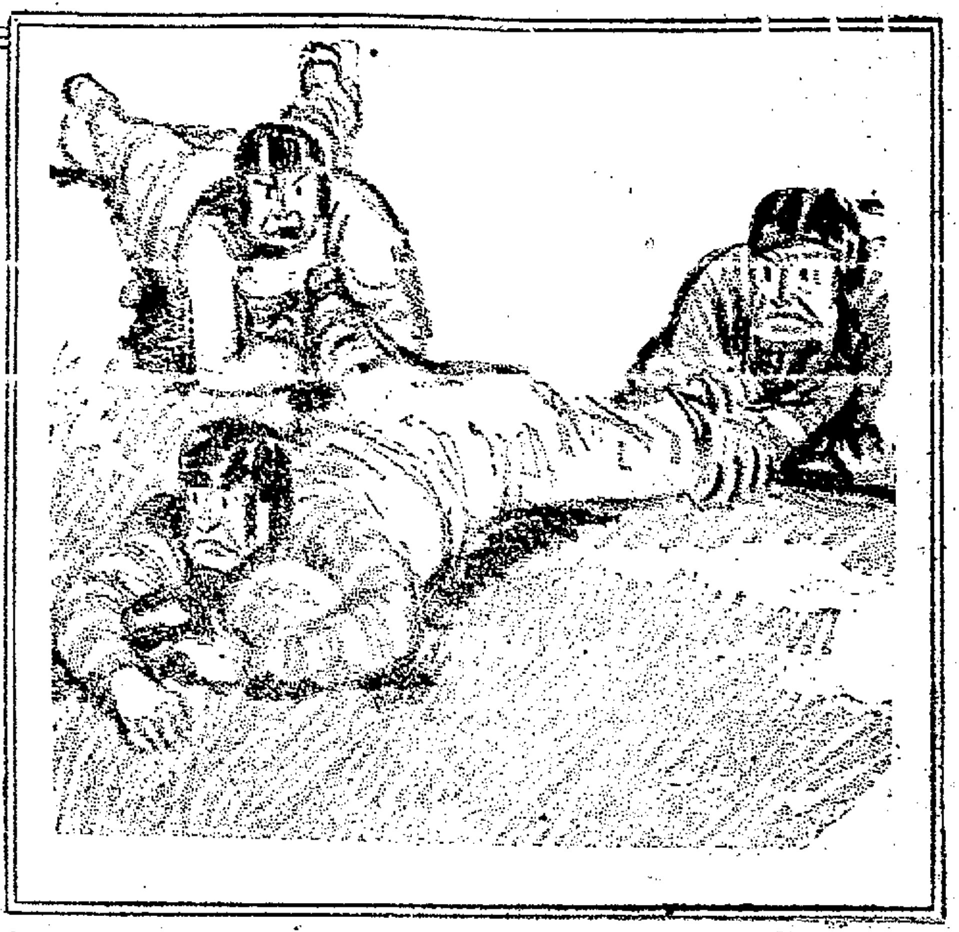
Sketches from life by Westerman.

COPYRIGHT 1920 BY McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE.

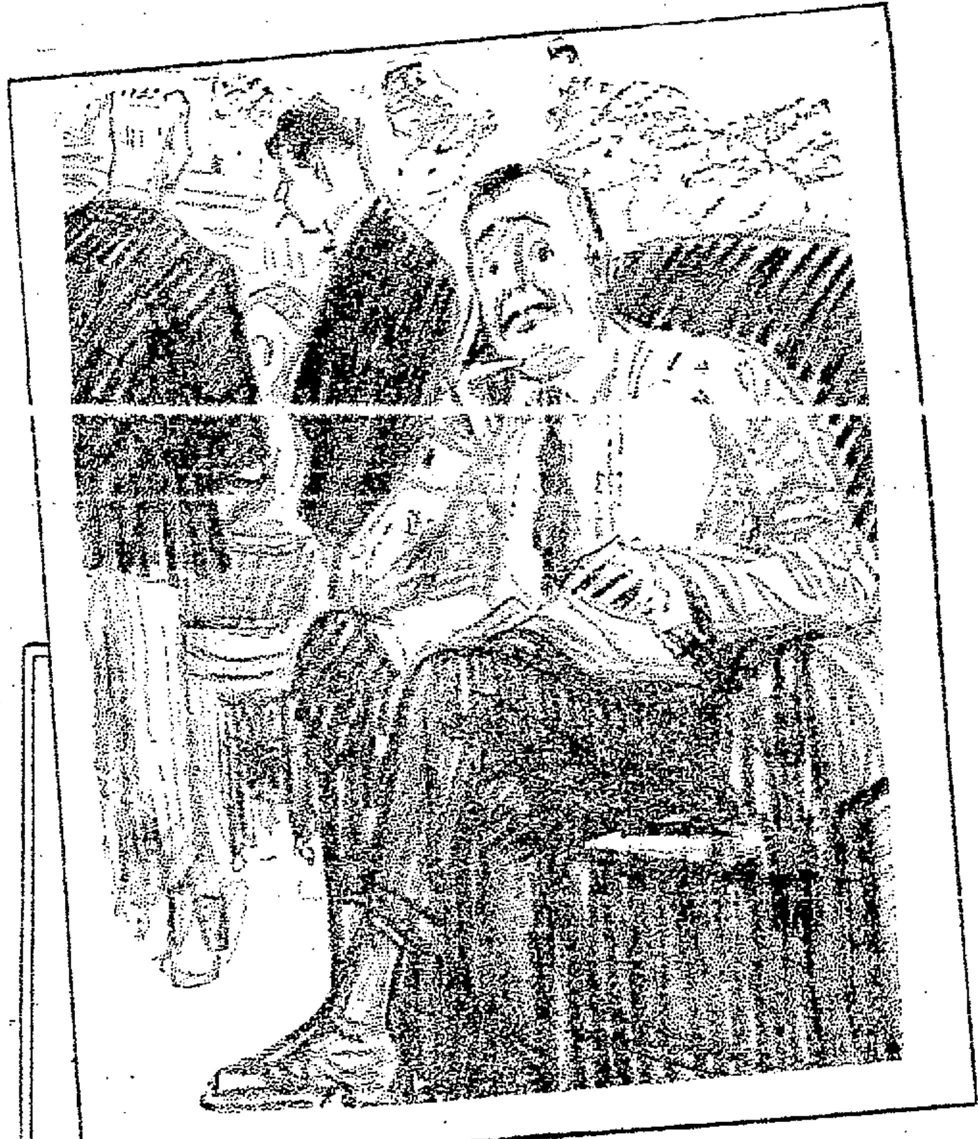


For a year or two he must be the goat for the first team to practice on. If he is a shining light the regulars try just that much harder to put his light out.

And half the time the poor guy has somebody's foot in his face or knee in his stomach

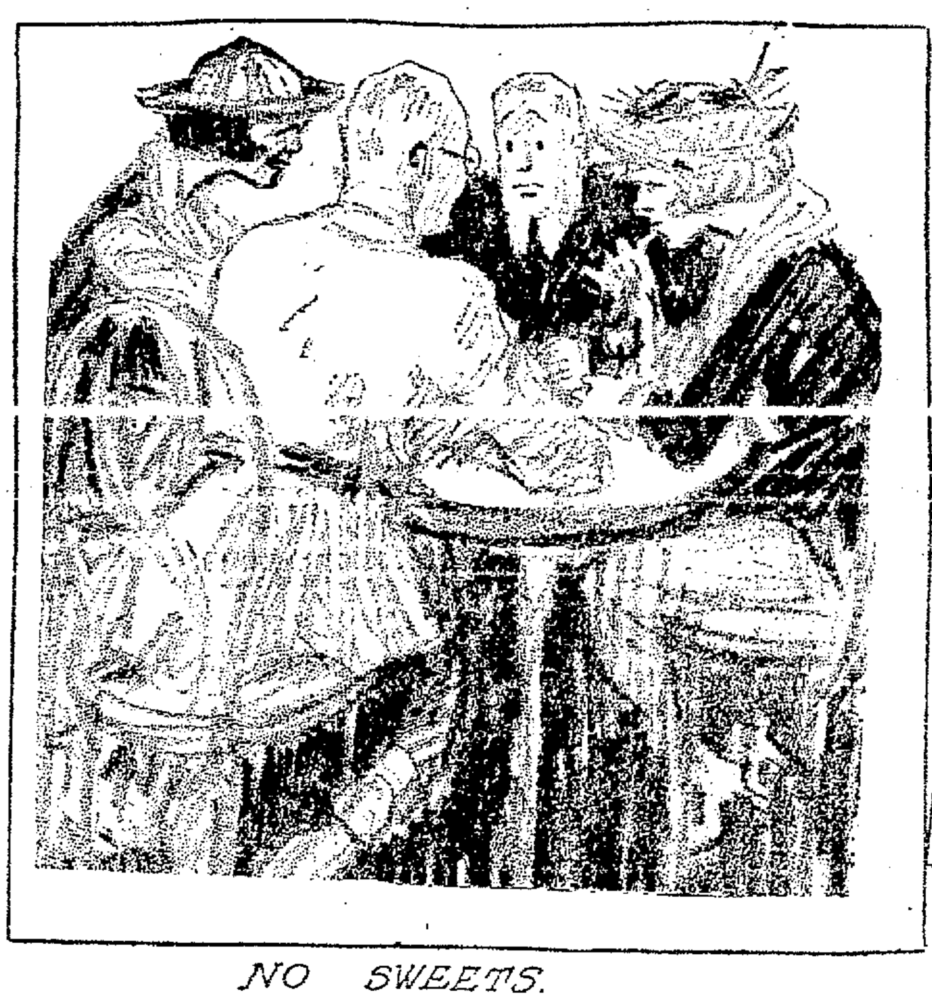


The way he is slammed around the field by the fellows whose place he's trying to make would make a traveling man's trunk's life seem like that of a patient rocking in a chair on the veranda of a rest-cure sanitarium.



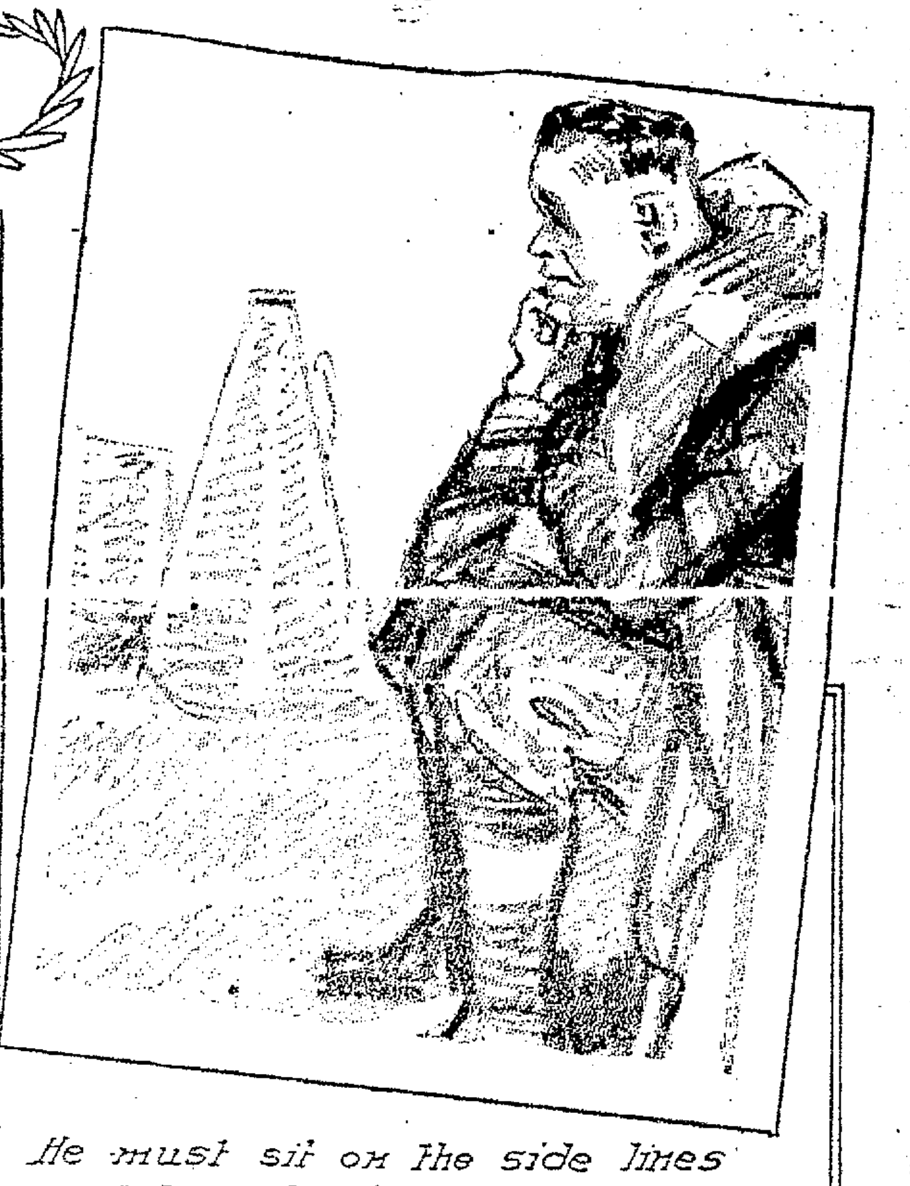
NO SMOKING.

Trying to study at the Frat house while the rest of the gang saturate the atmosphere with a combination of Fatimas, Lucky Strikes, Camels, Chesterfields, Turkish and Bull Durham

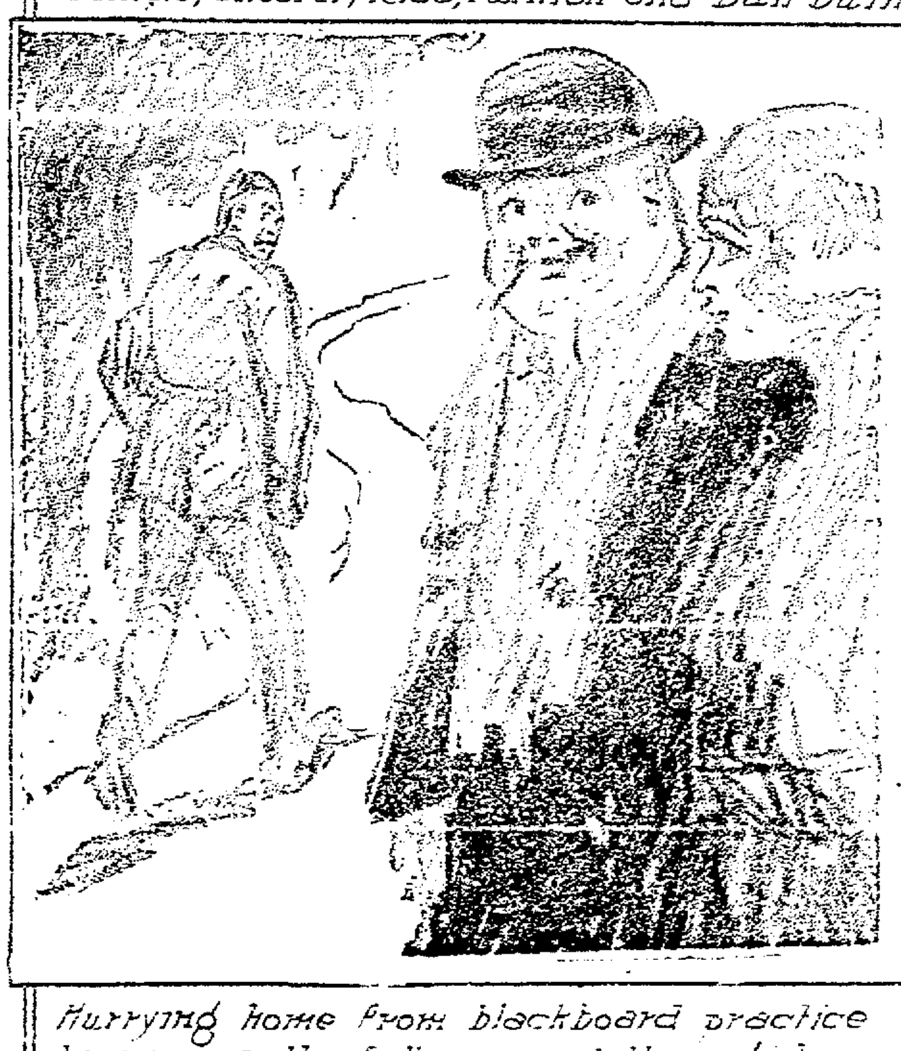


NO SWEETS.

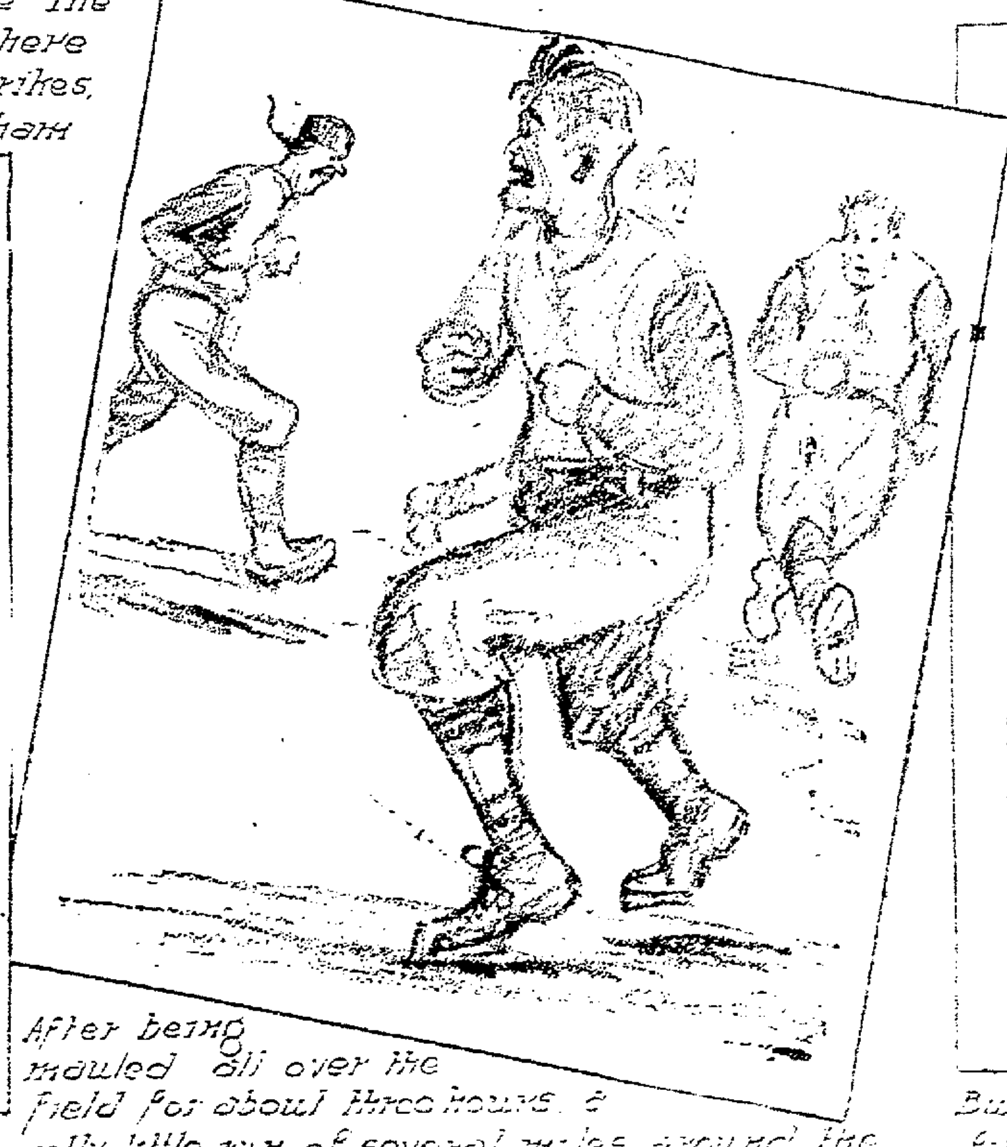
At a hot fudge dive he's about as happy over his glass of milk as an ex-bartender addressing envelopes in the Anti-Saloon league mailing room.



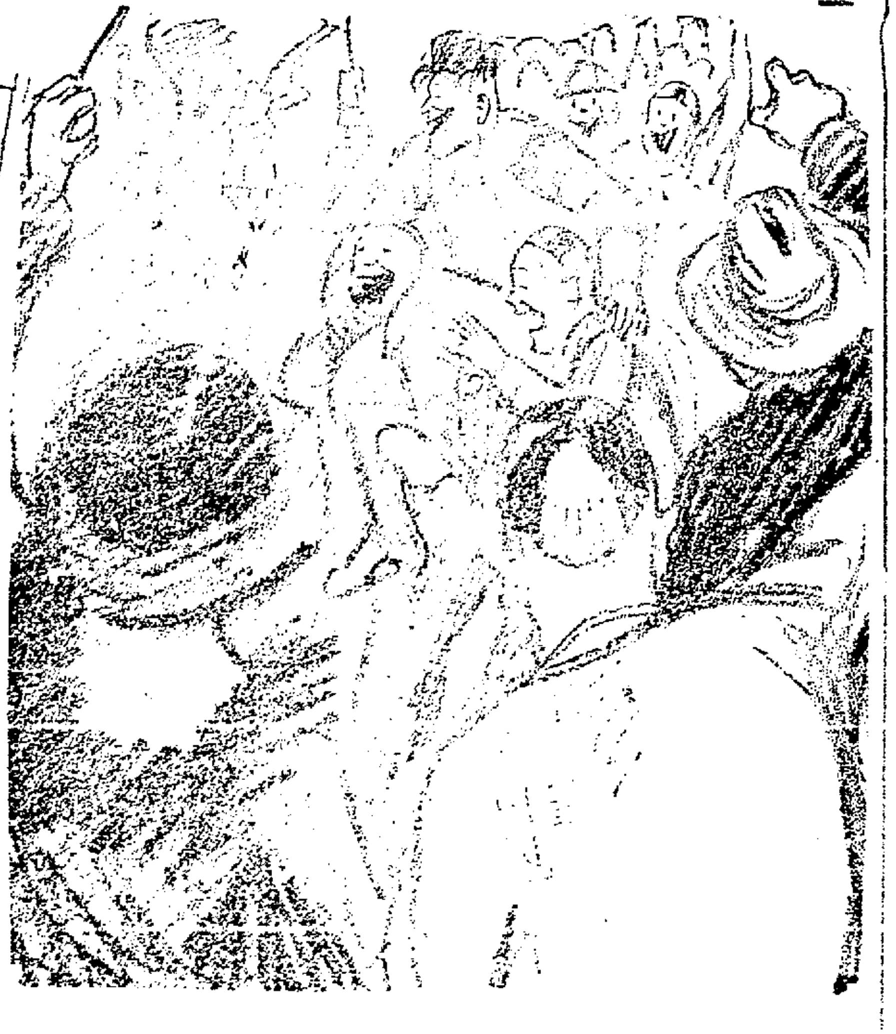
He must sit on the side lines and hear the girl he is nutty about cheer the fellow whose place he thinks he ought to have



Hurrying home from blackboard practice he passes the fellows and their girls hustling away to the jazz, shimmy and tickle-toe parties.



After being mauled all over the field for about three hours, a jolly little run of several miles around the field after which a shower, a rub down, lots of liniment, tape, patches, massage and you're ready to be biffed around again next day



But when he finally lands a berth on the first team and pulls off a play that brings its usual reward he realizes it was worth the price he paid.

THE ABANDONED ROOM

by WADSWORTH CAMP.

They went to the hall. Without speaking, Katherine climbed the stairs. Graham drew a chair between Paredes and the doctor. Bobby lounged against the mantel, trying to find in the Panamanian's face some clue as to his real feelings. But Paredes's eyes were closed. His hand dropped across the chair arm. His slender, pointed fingers held, as if from mere habit, a lifeless cigarette.

"Asleep," Graham whispered.

Without opening his eyes Paredes spoke: "No; I feel curiously awake." He yawned.

Doctor Groom glanced at his watch. "The powers of prosecution," he grumbled, "ought to be here within the next fifteen or twenty minutes."

Bobby glanced at Graham. Then it wasn't safe to delay too long. More and more as he waited he shrank from the invasion of the room of death. The prospect of reaching out and touching the still, cold thing on the bed revolted him. Was there anything in that room capable of forbidding his intention? Was there, in short, a surer, more malicious force for evil than his unconscious self at work in the house? He was about to make some formal comment to the others, to embark on his distasteful adventure, when Paredes, as if he had read Bobby's mind, opened his eyes, languidly left his chair, and walked to the foot of the stairs.

"Where you going?" Graham asked sharply.

Paredes waved his hand indifferently and walked on up. There was something of stealth in his failure to reply, in his cat-like tread on the stairs. Graham and Bobby stared after him, unable to meet this new situation audibly because of Groom. Yet five minutes had gone. There was no time to be lost. Paredes mustn't rob Bobby of his chance. With a sort of desperation he started for the stairs. Graham held out his hand as if to restrain him, then nodded. Bobby had his foot on the first step when Katherine's cry reached them, shaping the moment to their use. For there was no fright in her cry. It was, rather, angry. And Bobby and Graham ran up while Doctor Groom remained in his chair, an expression of blank amazement on his face.

A candle burned on the table in the upper hall. Katherine and Paredes stood near the entrance of the old corridor. Paredes, as usual, was quite unruffled. Katherine's attitude was defensive. She seemed to hold the corridor against him. The anger of her cry was active in her eyes. Paredes laughed lightly.

"Sorry to have given the household one more shock. Fortunately no harm done."

"What is it, Katherine?" Graham demanded.

"I don't know," she answered. "He startled me. He entered the corridor."

Paredes nodded.

"Quite right. She was there. I was on my way to my room. If your house had electricity, Bobby, this incident would have been avoided. I saw something dark in the corridor."

"You may not know," Graham said, "that ever since we found Howells, one of us has tried, more or less, to keep the entrance of that room under observation."

"Yet you were all downstairs a little while ago," Paredes yawned. "It's too bad. I might have taken my turn. At any rate, since I was excluded from your confidence, I overcame my natural fear, and, for Bobby's sake, slipped in, and, I am afraid, startled Miss Katherine."

"Yes," she said.

His explanation was reasonable. There was nothing more to be said, but Bobby's doubt of his friend, sown by Graham and stimulated by the incidents of the last hour, was materially strengthened. He felt a sharp fear of Paredes. Such reserve, such concealment of emotion, was scarcely human.

"If," Graham was saying, "you really want to help Bobby, there is something you can do. Will you come downstairs with me for a moment? I'd like to suggest one or two things before the police arrive."

Without hesitation Paredes followed Graham down the stairs.

Katherine turned immediately to Bobby, her eyes eager, full of the tense determination that had dictated her plan in the library.

"Now, Bobby!" she whispered. "And there's no time to waste. They may be here any minute. I won't see you go, but I'll be back at once to guard you against Paredes if he slips up again."

She walked across the hall and disappeared in the newer corridor. Without witness he faced the old corridor, and with the attempt directly ahead his repugnance achieved a new power. The black entrance with its scarcely dared memories reminded him that what he was about to do was directed against more than human law, was an outrage against the dead man. He had to remind himself of the steely purpose with which Howells had marked him as the murderer; and the man's power persisted after death. In such a contest he was justified.

He took the candle from the table. Through the stair-well the murmur of Graham's voice, occasionally interrupted by Groom's heavy tones or the languid accents of Paredes drifted encouragingly. Trying to crush his premonitions, Bobby entered the corridor. Instead of illuminating the narrow passage the candle seemed half smothered by its blackness. For the first time in his memory Bobby faced the entrance of the sinister room alone. He pushed open the broken door. He paused on the threshold. It impressed him as not unnatural that he should experience such misgivings. They sprang not alone from the fact that within twenty-four hours two men had died unaccountably within these faded walls. Nor did the evidence pointing to his own unconscious guilt wholly account for them. At the bottom of everything was the fact that from his earliest childhood he had looked upon the room as consecrated to death; had consequently feared it; had, he recalled, always hurried past the disused corridor leading in its direction.

Through its wide spaces the light of the candle scarcely penetrated. No more than an indefinite radiance thrust back the obscurity and outlined the bed. He could barely see the stark, black form outstretched there.

The dim, vast room, as he advanced, imposed upon him a sense of isolation. Katherine in the upper hall, and others downstairs, whose voices no longer reached him, seemed all at once far away. He stood in a place lonelier and more remote than the piece of woods where he had momentarily opened his eyes last night; and, instead of the straining trees and the figure in the black mask which he had called his conscience, he had for motion and companionship only the swaying of the curtains in the breeze from the open window and the dark, prostrate thing whose face as he went closer was like a white mask—a mask with a fixed and malevolent sneer.

The wind caught the flame of the candle, making it flicker. Tenuous shadows commenced to dance across the walls. He paused with a tightening throat, for the form on the bed seemed moving, too, with a sly and scarcely perceptible gesture. Then he understood. It was the effect of the shaking candle, and he forced himself to go on, but a sense of a multiple companionship accompanied him—a sense of a shapeless, soundless companionship that projected an idea of a steady regard. There swept through his mind a procession of figures in quaint dress and with faces not unlike his own, remembered from portraits and family legends, men and women to whom this room had been familiar, within whose limits they had suffered, cried out a too-powerful agony, and died. It seemed to him that he waited for voices to guide him, to urge him on as Katherine had urged him, or to drive him back, because he was an intruder in a company whose habit was strange and terrifying.

He forced his glance from the shadows which seemed more active along the walls. He raised his candle and stared at the dead man. The cast was undoubtedly there. The coat, stretched tightly across the breast, outlined it. He stood at the side of the bed. He had only to bend and place his hand in the pocket which the cast filled awkwardly. The wind alone, he saw, wasn't responsible for the shaking of the candle. His hand shook as the shadows shook, as the things on the bed shook. The sense of loneliness grew upon him until it became complete, appalling. For the first time he understood that loneliness can possess a ponderable quality. It was, he felt, potent and active in the room—a thing he couldn't understand, or challenge, or overcome.

His hand tightened. He thought of Katherine guarding the corridor, of Paredes and Doctor Groom held downstairs by Graham; of the county authorities hurrying to seize this evidence that would [illegible] him; and he realized that his duty and his excuse were clear. He understood that just now [illegible] captured by a force [illegible] terms of the world [illegible] a moment he eluded [illegible] hands of [illegible] surmises. He reached [illegible]ively out to the dead [illegible] about to place his [illegible] pocket which, after [illegible] and done, held his [illegible]

In the light of the candle [illegible] face seemed alive and more [illegible] than it had ever done in life. [illegible] the straight smile was a wider, more triumphant quality.

The candle flickered sharply. It expired. The conquering blackness took his breath.

He told himself it was the draft from the window which was strong, but the companionship of the night was closer and more numerous. The darkness wreathed itself into mocking and tortuous bodies whose faces were hidden.

In an agony of revolt against these incorporeal, these fanciful horrors he reached in the pocket.

He sprang back with a choked, inaudible cry, for the dead thing beneath his hand was stirring. The dead, cold thing with a languid and impossible rebuke, moved beneath his touch. And the pocket he had felt was empty. The coat, a moment ago bulging and awkward, was flat. There sprang to his mind the mad thought that the detective, malevolent in life, had long after death snatched from his hand the evidence, carefully gathered, on which everything for him depended.

CHAPTER V.

The Crying Through the Woods

Bobby's inability to cry out alone prevented his alarming the others and announcing to Paredes and Doctor Groom his unlawful presence in the room. During the moment that the shock held him, silent, motionless, bent in the darkness above the bed, he understood there could have been an ambiguity about his ghastly and loathsome experience. The dead detective had altered his position as Silas Blackburn had done, and this time someone had been in the room and suffered the appalling change. Bobby's fingers still responded to the charnel feeling of cold, inactive flesh suddenly become alive and potent beneath his touch. And a reason for the apparent miracle offered itself. Between the extinction of his candle and the commencement of that movement!—only a second or so—the evidence had disappeared from the detective's pocket.

Bobby relaxed. He stumbled across the room and into the corridor. He went with hands outstretched through the blackness, for no candle burned in the upper hall, but he knew that Katherine was on guard there. When he left the passage he saw her, an unnatural figure herself, in the yellowish, unhealthy twilight which sifted through the stair well from the lamp in the hall below.

She must have sensed something out of the way immediately, for she hurried to meet him and her whisper held no assurance.

"You got the cast and the handkerchief, Bobby?"

And when he didn't answer at once she asked with a sharp rush of fear.

"What's the matter. What's happened?"

He shuddered. At last he managed to speak.

"Katherine! I have felt death cease to be death."

Later he was to recall that phrase with a sicker horror than he experienced now.

"You saw something!" she said. "But your candle is out. There is no light in the room."

He took her hand. He pressed it.

"You're real!" he said with a nervous laugh. "Something I can understand. Everything is unreal. This light—"

He strode to the table, found a match, and lighted his candle. Katherine, as she saw his face, drew back.

"Bobby!"

"My candle went out," he said dully, "and he moved through the darkness. I tell you he moved beneath my hand."

She drew farther away, staring at him.

"You were frightened—"

"No. If we go there with a light now," he said with the same dull conviction, "we will find him as we found my grandfather this afternoon."

The monotonous voices of the three men in the lower hall weaved a background for their whispers. The normal, familiar sound was like a tonic. Bobby straightened. Katherine threw off the spell of his announcement.

"But the evidence! You got—"

She stared at his empty hands. He fancied that he saw contempt in her eyes.

"In spite of everything you must go back. You must get that."

"Even if I had the courage," he said wearily, "it would be no use, for the evidence is gone."

"But I saw it. At least I saw his pocket—"

"It was there," he answered, "when my light went out. I did put my hand in his pocket. In that second it had gone."

"There was no one there," she said, "no one but you, because I watched."

He leaned heavily against the wall.

"Good God, Katherine! It's too big. Whatever it is, we can't fight it."

She looked for some time down the corridor at the black entrance of the sinister room. At last she turned and walked to the banister. She called:

"Hartley! Will you come up?"

The murmuring below ceased. Graham ran up the stairs. Her summons had been warning enough. Their attitudes, as Graham reached the upper hall, were eloquent of Bobby's failure.

"You didn't get the cast and the handkerchief?" he said.

Bobby told briefly what had happened.

"What is one to do?" he ended. "Even the dead are against me."

"It's beyond belief," Graham said, roughly.

He snatched up the candle and entered the corridor. Uncertainly Katherine and Bobby followed him. He went straight to the bed and thrust the candle beneath the canopy. The others could see from the door the change that had taken place. The body of Howells was turned awkwardly on its side. The coat pocket was, as Bobby had described it, flat and empty.

The misshapen shadows danced as Katherine turned and went back to the hall. Graham's hand shook as Bobby's had shaken.

"No tricks, Bobby?"

Bobby couldn't resent the suspicion which appeared to offer the only explanation of what had happened. The candle flickered in the draft.

"Look out!" Bobby warned.

The misshapen shadows danced with a multiple vivacity across the walls. Graham shaded the candle flame and the shadows became like morbid decorations gargantuan and motionless.

"It's madness," Graham said. "There's no explanation of this that we can understand."

Howell's straight smile mocked them. As if in answer to Graham a voice sighed through the room. Its quality was one with the shadows, unsubstantial and shapeless. Bobby grasped one of the bed posts and braced himself, listening. The candle in Graham's hand commenced to flicker again, and Bobby knew that it hadn't been his fancy, for Graham listened, too.

It shook again through the heavy, oppressive night, merely accentuated by the candle—a faint ululation barely detaching itself from silence, straying after a time into the silence again. At first it was like the grief of a woman heard at a great distance. But the sound, while it gained no strength, forced on them more and more an abhorrent sense of intimacy. This crying from an infinite distance filled the room, seemed finally to have its source in the room itself. After it had sobbed things into nothing, its pulsations continued to sigh in Bobby's ears. They seemed timed to the renewed and eccentric dancing of the amorphous shadows.

Graham straightened and placed the candle on the bureau. He seemed more startled than he had been at the unbelievable secretiveness of a dead man.

"You heard it?" Bobby breathed.

Graham nodded.

"What was it? Where did you think it came from?" Bobby demanded. "It was like someone mourning for this—this poor devil."

Graham couldn't disguise his effort to elude the sombre spell of the room, to drive from his brain the illusion of that unearthly moaning.

"It must have come from outside the house," he answered. "There's no use giving way to fancies where there's a possible explanation. It must have come from outside—from some woman in great agony of mind."

Bobby recalled his perception of a woman moving with a curious absence of sound about the edges of the stagnant lake. He spoke of it to Graham.

"I couldn't be sure it was a woman, but there's no house within two miles. What would a woman be doing wandering around the Cedars?"

"At any rate, there are three women in the house," Graham said, "Katherine and the two servants, Ella and Jane. The maids are badly frightened. It may have come from the servants' quarters. It must have been one of them."

But Bobby saw that Graham didn't believe either of the maids had released that poignant suffering.

"It didn't sound like a living voice," he said simply.

"Then how are we to take it?" Graham persisted angrily. "I shall question Katherine and the two maids."

He took up the candle with a stubborn effort to recapture his old forcefulness, but as they left the room the shadows thronged thickly after them in ominous pursuit, and it wasn't necessary to question Katherine. She stood in the corridor, her lips parted, her face white and shocked.

"What was it?" she said. "That nearly silent grief?"

She put her hands to her ears, lowering them helplessly after a moment.

"Where did you think it came from?" Graham asked.

"From a long ways off," she answered. "Then I—I thought it must be in the room with you, and I wondered if you saw——"

Graham shook his head.

"We saw nothing. It was probably Ella or Jane. They've been badly frightened. Perhaps a nightmare, or they've heard us moving around the front part of the house. I am going to see."

Katherine and Bobby followed him downstairs. Doctor Groom and Paredes stood in front of the fireplace questioningly looking upward. Paredes didn't speak at first, but Doctor Groom burst out in his grumbling, bass voice.

"What's been going on up there?"

"Did you hear just now a queer crying?" Graham asked.

"No."

"You, Paredes?"

"I've heard nothing," Paredes answered, "except Doctor Groom's disquieting theories. It's an uncanny hour for such talk. What kind of a cry—may I ask?"

"Like a woman moaning," Bobby said, "and, Doctor, Howells has changed his position."

"What are you talking about?" the doctor cried.

"He has turned on his side as Mr. Blackburn did," Graham told him.

Paredes glanced at Bobby.

"And how was this new mystery discovered?"

Bobby caught the implication. Then the Panamanian clung to his slightly expressed doubt of Katherine which might, after all, have had its impulse in an instinct of self-preservation. [illegible] that Graham and Katherine would guard the fashion in which the startling discovery had been made. [illegible] indeed. Graham [illegible]

"This [illegible] for a time to come from the room. We entered."

"But Miss Katherine [illegible] you up," [illegible] she had heard [illegible] in the room."

[illegible]

"Your [illegible] is consistent [illegible]"

Paredes bowed [illegible]ately.

"It is very curious, a woman crying about the house."

"The servants may make it seem natural enough," Graham said. "Will you come, Bobby?"

As they crossed the dining room they heard a stirring in the kitchen. Graham threw open the door. Jenkins stood at the foot of the servants' stairs. The old butler had lighted a candle and placed it on the mantel. The disorder of his clothing suggested the haste with which he had left his bed and come downstairs. His wrinkled, sunken face had aged perceptibly. He advanced with an expression of obvious relief.

"I was just coming to find you, Mr. Robert."

"What's up?" Bobby asked. "A little while ago I thought you were all asleep back here."

"One of the women awakened him," Graham said. "It's just as I thought."

"Was that it?" the old butler asked with a quick relief. But immediately he shook his head. "It couldn't have been that, Mr. Graham, for I stopped at Ella's and Jane's doors, and there was no sound. They seemed to be asleep. And it wasn't like that."

"You mean," Bobby said, "that you heard a woman crying?"

Jenkins nodded. "It woke me up."

"If you didn't think it was one of the maids," Graham asked, "what did you make of it?"

"I thought it came from outside. I thought it was a woman prowling around the house. Then I said to myself, why should a woman prowl around the Cedars? And it was too unearthly, sir, and I remembered the way Mr. Silas was murdered, and the awful thing happened to his body this afternoon, and I—you won't think me foolish, sirs"—I doubted if it was a human voice I heard."

"No," Graham said dryly, "we won't think you foolish."

"So I thought I'd better wake you up and tell you."

Graham turned to Bobby.

"Katherine and you and I," he said, "fancied the crying was in the room with us. Jenkins is sure it came from outside the house. That is significant."

"Wherever it came from," Bobby said softly, "it was like someone mourning for Howells."

Jenkins started.

"The policeman!"

Bobby remembered that Jenkins hadn't been aroused by the discovery of Howell's murder.

"You'd know in a few minutes anyway," he said. "Howells has been killed as my grandfather was."

Jenkins moved back, a look of unbelief and awe in his wrinkled face.

"He boasted he was going to sleep in that room," he whispered.

Bobby studied Jenkins, not knowing what to make of the old man, for into the awe of the wrinkled face had stolen a positive relief, an emotion that bordered on the triumphant.

"It's terrible," Jenkins whispered.

Graham grasped his shoulder.

"What's the matter with you, Jenkins? One would say you were glad."

"No. Oh, no, sir. It is terrible. I was only wondering about the policeman's report."

"What do you know about his report?" Bobby cried.

"Only that—that he gave it to me to mail just before he went up to the old room."

"You mailed it?" Graham snapped.

Jenkins hesitated. When he answered his voice was self-accusing.

"I'm an old coward, Mr. Robert. The policeman told me the letter was very important and [illegible] happened to it I would get in trouble. He couldn't afford to [illegible] the house himself, he said. But as I say, I'm a coward and I didn't want to walk through the woods to the box at the gate. I figured it all out. It wouldn't be taken up until early in the morning, and if I waited until daylight it would only be delayed one collection. So I made up my mind to sleep on it, because I knew he had it in for you, Mr. Robert. I supposed I'd mail it in the morning, but I decided to think it over anyway and not harrow myself walking through the woods."

"You've done a good job," Graham said excitedly. "Where is the report now?"

"In my room. Shall I fetch it, sir?"

Graham nodded, and Jenkins shuffled up the stairs.

"What luck!" Graham said. "Howells must have telephoned his suspicions to the district attorney. He must have mentioned the evidence, but what does that amount to since it's disappeared along with the duplicate of the report, if Howells made one?"

"I can fight with a clear conscience," Bobby cried. "I wasn't asleep when Howells' body altered its position. Do you realize what it means to me? For once I was wide awake when the old room was at its tricks."

"If Howells were alive," Graham answered shortly, "he would look on the fact that you were awake and alone with the body as the worst possible evidence against you."

Bobby's elation died.

"There is always something to tangle me in the eyes of the law with these mysteries. But I know, and I'll fight. Can you find any trace of a conspiracy against me in this last ghastly adventure?"

"It complicates everything," Graham admitted.

"It's beyond sounding," Bobby said, "for my grandfather's death last night and the disturbance of his body this afternoon seemed calculated to condemn me absolutely, yet Howells' murder and the movement of his body, with the disappearance of the cast and the handkerchief, seem designed to have me. Are there two influences at work in this house—one for me, one against me?"

"Let's think of the human elements," Graham answered with a frown. "I have no faith in Paredes. My man has failed to report on Maria. That's queer. You fancy a woman in black slipping through the woods, and we hear a woman cry. I want to account for those things before I give in to Groom's spirits. I confess at times they seem the only logical explanation. Here's Jenkins."

"If trouble comes of his withholding the report I'll take the blame," Bobby said.

Graham snatched the long envelope from Jenkins' hand. It was addressed in a firm hand to the district attorney at the county seat.

"There's no question," Graham said. "That's it. We mustn't open it. We'd better not destroy it. Put it where it won't be easily found, Jenkins. If you are questioned you have no recollection of Howells having given it to you. Mr. Blackburn promises he will see you get in no trouble."

The old man smiled.

"Trouble!" he scoffed. "Mr. Blackburn needn't fret himself about me. He's the last of this family—that is Miss Katherine and he. I'm old and about done for. I don't mind trouble. Not a bit, sir."

Bobby pressed his hand. His voice was a little husky. "I didn't think you'd go that far in my service, Jenkins."

The old butler smiled slyly: "I'd go a lot further than that, sir."

"We'd better get back," Graham said. "The blood hounds ought to be here, and they'll sniff at the case harder than ever because it's done for Howells."

They watched Jenkins go upstairs with the report.

"We're taking long chances," Graham said, "desperately long chances, but you're in a desperately dangerous position. It's the only way. You'll be accused of stealing the evidence; but remember, when they question you, they can prove nothing unless the cast and the handkerchief turn up. If they've been taken by an enemy in some magical fashion to be produced at the proper moment, there's no hope. Meantime play the game, and Katherine and I will help you all we can. The doctor, too, is friendly. There's no doubt of him. Come, now. Let's face the music."

Bobby followed Graham to the hall, trying to strengthen his nerves for the ordeal. Even now he was more appalled by the apparently supernatural background of the case than he was by the material details which pointed to his guilt. More than the report and the cast and the handkerchief the remembrance of that impossible moment in the blackness of the old room filled his mind, and the unearthly and remote crying still throbbed in his ears.

Katherine, Graham and the doctor waited by the fireplace. They had heard nothing from the authorities.

"But they must be here soon," Doctor Groom said.

"Did you learn anything back there, Hartley?" Katherine asked.

"It wasn't the servants," he said. "Jenkins heard the crying. He's certain it came from outside the house."

Paredes looked up.

"Extraordinary!" he said.

"I wish I had heard it," Doctor Groom grumbled.

Paredes laughed.

"Thank the good Lord I didn't. Perpetually, Bobby, your house reminds me that I've nerves sensitive to the unknown world. I will go further than the doctor. I will say that this house is crowded with the supernatural. It shelters things that we cannot understand, that we will never understand. When I was a child in Panama I had a nurse who, unfortunately, developed too strongly my native superstition. How she frightened me with her bedtime stories! They were all of men murdered or dead of fevers, crossing the trail, or building the railroad, or digging insufficient ditches for De Lesseps. Some of her best went farther back than that. They were thick with the ghosts of old Spaniards and the crimson hands of Morgan's buccaneers. Really that tiny strip across the Isthmus is crowded with souls snatched too quickly from torn and tortured bodies. If you are sensitive you feel they are still there."

"What has all this to do with the Cedars?" Doctor Groom grumbled.

"It explains my ability to sense strange elements in this old house. There are in Panama—if you don't mind, doctor — improvised graveyards, tangled by the jungle, that give you a feeling of an active, unseen population precisely as this house does."

He arose and strolled with a cat-like lack of sound about the hall. When he spoke again his voice was scarcely audible. It was the voice of a man who thinks aloud, and the doctor failed to interrupt him again.

"I have felt less spiritually alarmed in those places of grinning skulls, which always seem trying to recite agonies beyond expression, than I feel in this house. For here the woods are more desolate than the jungle, and the walls of houses as old as this make a prison for suffering."

A vague discomfort stole through Bobby's surprise. He had never heard Paredes speak so seriously. In spite of the man's unruffled manner there was nothing of mockery about his words. What, then, was their intention?

Paredes said no more, but for several minutes he paced up and down the hall, glancing often with languid eyes toward the stairs. He had the appearance of one who expects and waits.

Katherine, Graham and the doctor, Bobby could see, had been made as uneasy as himself by the change in the Panamanian. The doctor cleared his throat. His voice broke the silence tentatively:

"If this house makes you so unhappy, young man, why do you stay?"

Paredes paused in his walk. His thin lips twitched. He indicated Bobby.

"For the sake of my very good friend. What are a man's personal fears and desires if he can help his friends?"

Graham's distaste was evident. Paredes recognized it with a smile. Bobby watched him curiously, realizing more and more that Graham was right to this extent: they must somehow learn the real purpose of the Panamanian's continued presence here.

Paredes resumed his walk. He still had that air of expectancy. He seemed to listen. This feeling of imminence reached Bobby; increased his restlessness. He thought he heard an automobile horn outside. He sprang up, went to the door, opened it, and stood gazing through the damp and narrow court. Yet, he confessed, he listened for a repetition of that unearthly crying through the thicket rather than for the approach of those who would try to condemn him for two murders. Paredes was right. The place was unhealthy. Its dark walls seemed to draw closer. They had a desolate and unfriendly secretiveness. They might hide anything.

The whirring of a motor reached him. Headlights flung gigantic, distorted shadows of trees across the walls of the old wing. Bobby faced the others.

"They're coming," he said, and his voice was sufficiently apprehensive now.

Graham joined him at the door.

"Yes," he said. "There will be another inquisition. You all know that Howells for some absurd reason suspected Bobby. Bobby, it goes without saying, knows no more about the crimes than any of us. I dare say you'll keep that in mind if they try to confuse you. After all, there's very little any of us can tell them."

"Except," Paredes said with a yawn, "what went on upstairs when the woman cried and Howells' body moved. Of course I know nothing about that."

Graham glanced at him sharply.

"I don't know what you mean, but you have told us all that you are Bobby's friend."

"Quite so. And I am not a spy."

The automobile stopped at the entrance to the court. Three men stepped out and hurried up the path. As they entered the hall Bobby recognized the sallow, wizened features of the coroner. One of the others was short and thick set. His round and florid face, one felt, should have expressed friendliness and good humor rather than the intolerant anger that marked it now. The third was a lank, bald-headed man, whose sharp face released more determination than intelligence.

"I am Robinson, the district attorney," the stout one announced, "and this is Jack Rawlins, the best detective I've got now that Howells is gone. Jack was a close friend of Howells, so he'll make a good job of it, but I thought it was time I came myself to see what the devil's going on in this house."

The lank man nodded.

"You're right, Mr. Robinson. There'll be no more nonsense about the case. If Howells had made an arrest he might be alive this minute."

Bobby's heart sank. These men would act from a primary instinct of revenge. They wanted the man who had killed Silas Blackburn principally because it was certain he had also killed their friend. Rawlin's words, moreover, suggested that Howells must have telephoned a pretty clear outline of the case. Robinson stared at them insolently.

Biggest Whales In World Are Being Taken in Local Waters

My father's a bedger and ditcher,
My mother does nothing but spin,
While I hunt whales for a living—
Good Lord, how the money comes in!

Trinidad, once county seat of Klamath county, before that county was absorbed by Humboldt, later a leading seaport of northern California and now numbered among the "ghost cities," is about to become the Pacific Coast's leading whaling station.

A company of California capitalists has launched a whaling company which is operating whalers off the California and Oregon coast, and at Trinidad whales are being reduced to blubber and oil, whalebone, fertilizer and a dozen by-products.

Already the whales are being brought to Trinidad for reduction. A great landing platform and factory has been erected where the whales are torn to pieces and divided up into the various products of commercial value. Twenty-five whales have been brought into Trinidad since the plant began operations in September.

BIGGEST WHALE CAUGHT HERE

The biggest whale in the world is among the species being caught off the California coast—the Blue whale, or Sulphur-bottom. Some have reached dimensions of 100 feet in length. The largest caught by the California Sea Food Products company was 76 feet long, a mammoth even for the whale family.

While most of the whale product is fertilizer, oil and whalebone, there is no reason why the meat will not soon be popular food. It is eaten abroad and the U. S. government, department of commerce, bureau of fisheries, has just issued a bulletin, "Whales and Porpoises as Food," with thirty-two recipes. The claim is made by the government experts that whale meat is excellent for food. Among the recipes given are the following: Fresh whale, marine vegetable soup, whale roast with rice, braised whale roast, whale steak en casserole, whale croquettes, whale patty, filet of whale with mushrooms, whale pot roast, whale a la mode, etc.

Then there's a whale meat pie, whale meat chowder and whale stew!

WHALES NOW PLENTIFUL

Great schools of whale may be seen from the Trinidad headlands almost any clear afternoon in summer, sunning themselves or feeding where the many creeks and small rivers empty into the ocean. But, like game birds, they become wary after the first season. Their capture requires the steady nerve and calm demeanor of the men of experience in whaling fields, who steal quietly within harpooning distance of their prey. The shooting of the harpoon, the death struggle of the wounded whale, lashing the sea into foam and imperiling the lives of the boatmen among the many half-concealed rocks, the final landing of the prey onto the carcass platform—all afford more thrills than a tiger or elephant hunt.

A big winch is used to haul the animals from the water to the cutting platform, which is a great height from the ground, enabling the operators to harness the power of gravity, thus reducing the operating cost about 20 per cent. Here the blubber is first removed, then the carcass is torn to pieces by machinery.

USED FOR CHICKEN FEED

The head and upper part of the body are used in chicken food products. The tail, which is highly valued as a food in Japan, is salted and shipped to that country. The oil, used in various food and soap products, is sold mostly to Swift and Company, while the water coming from the blubber is made into glue at the Trinidad plant and the bones are ground into fertilizer.

Larger wharves, additional factories and storehouses and offices will be built as the progress of the town of Trinidad demands under the new conditions.

THE STORY OF TRINIDAD

A few years ago what was called the $13,000,000 spike was driven by the Northwestern Pacific railroad and the 210 miles of rail that connects San Francisco and Trinidad was completed. After years of hard labor this little town became in touch with the outside world by rail. More than 100 years had elapsed since the sailing vessels of some Spanish adventurers were blown amongst the rocks and into the cove or natural harbor of Trinidad, from whom it received the name of The Bay of Trinidad, and from whom Humboldt county also received its name.

The Padres scaled the rocky cliffs of the Big Head, and there placed a wooden cross and thanked God for their deliverance from the storm. A cross of white marble was placed in this historical spot by the Federation of Women's Clubs of Humboldt county, in 1913.

TOWN ONCE FLOURISHED

In the early 'sixties a wharf of considerable size was built along the sheltered cliff of the Big Head, at the very spot the Spaniards had chosen for their landing. Springs of the freshest water, cold and clear, flow in among the rocks of the Big Head, a peninsula on which a government lighthouse has stood since the earliest days. A brick factory, lumber and shingle mills sprang up, only to be abandoned at a later period. Trinidad was in sad need of appropriations from Congress for her harbor. The town asked for enough to dynamite to pieces the small peninsula called the Little Head; the rock was to be used to build a jetty from the eastern extremity of the cove seaward to Pilot Rock (a sentinel of solid rock 200 feet above the sea level), which would secure a harbor into which the largest sea vessel ever built could ride with perfect safety, with no dangerous bar to cross.

STORY OF A TOWN'S TRAGEDY

The story of how Trinidad lost out in the harbor fight and became a "ghost city" is one of the saddest in California. It was charged by the people of Trinidad that when all appropriations were given to Eureka they were given to a dangerous bar of sifting quicksand in Humboldt bay, although many times coast vessels anchor at the old wharf posts of Trinidad until the subsiding of a storm before attempting the lower harbor.

Those who worked and waited for better things lost heart and moved to other fields. Trinidad, like Rip Van Winkle, has been peacefully sleeping for twenty years. The great waves dashing upon her cliffs and many rocks, each of which has a name and story, or Indian legend, disturbed her not. The wind sighed about the old redwood stubs, grim monuments of the past, on the cut-over lands, while three miles inland civilization was lost in the virgin forest of redwoods that stands like an impregnable wall some 200 to 300 feet in height, so close together that neither man nor animal can scarce pass through.

The old lumber camps fell into decay, while over them all grew the schalall berry, huckleberry, wild blackberry, Oregon grape, many other kinds of edible berries and ferns whose fronds reach a length of ten feet. A new growth of redwood sprang up and became small trees, while along the beach the native Indian, still living near Trinidad, fished in turn for rockcod, smelt or salmon, or went in boats and secured the largest of mussels from rock so rich in copper that care must be taken in the eating of the shell fish to avoid becoming poisoned thereby.

THE AWAKENING AT LAST!

Such is the brief and tragic story of Trinidad, now about to be revived and put on the map of Western America by an industry that in itself is revived from a dead industry. The coming of Standard Oil killed the whaling industry throughout the world, the great whaling fleets lay rotting in their harbors from New Bedford to the Antipodes and the elephants of the seas were allowed to multiply until vast herds of them began to be noticeable along the Pacific from the Arctic to the Horn.

Besides the plant at Trinidad the California Sea Food Products Company has another base at Moss Landing, near Monterey. Seven or eight whales a day are brought in to the two stations. The whales are fished along the coast and out into the sea as far as 100 miles from land.

While old methods of whale hunting have been vastly improved, there is still great danger and peril in the business. Today the harpoon that is shot out from the gun on the boat is equipped with a cast-iron bomb, delicately set, so that when the harpoon strikes the monster of the deep it penetrates and explodes at the same time. The explosion so shocks the vitals of the big mammals that their death is more speedy than under the old method, although the struggle that the whale puts up is often enough to give the hunters fear for their lives.

Three types of whales are being killed in commercial quantities along the California coast. The most numerous are the Humpback whales. Another variety fairly plentiful is the famous Finback. The monster of them all, however, is the Blue whale, or Sulphur-bottom. These mammals become 100 years old before they attain full size.

USED FOR BUTTER

One of the profitable by-products of the whale today is the fat that is turned into cooking fats, as a substitute for butter. It is said to be rich in food value and exceedingly clean and wholesome when carefully handled.

Roy Chapman Andrews, in his book, "Whale Hunting With Gun and Camera," refers to the difficulties that have met the whaling industry on the Pacific Coast. He says:

"Strangely enough, if whales are driven away from inland waters they seldom return and others will not take the places of those which have been killed. This has been demonstrated on the American west coast to the considerable financial loss of both the Tyee Company of Alaska and the (former) Pacific Whaling Company of Victoria, B. C.

SOON ALL KILLED

"The Tyee Company erected a station on the southern end of Admiralty island, 60 miles from the open sea, and although when operations were first begun Finback and Humpback whales were there in hundreds, they were soon all killed and the vessels had to hunt 'outside.'

"The Pacific Whaling Company spent many thousands of dollars building a station at Nanaimo, on the east coast of Vancouver island, expecting to capture a sufficient number of whales in the bay and straits to supply their factory. Their hopes were not realized, however, for after two or three seasons' work there were no more whales to kill and the station had to be moved near the open sea.

"It seems to be true that in all parts of the world the Blue and Humpback whales first leave the feeding grounds and that the Finback and Sei whales will remain longer than any other, even when persistently hunted."

BIG INDUSTRY PROMISED

The whales have been so long undisturbed now that they are numerous enough to continue the industry for many years, it is estimated.

The United States Bureau of Fisheries reviews the whale industry thus:

Because of its value for illuminating and lubricating purposes, sperm oil was to be the most important and most valuable of the whale products until about 1860. With the substitution of petroleum products and the development of improved methods for rendering and refining various vegetable oils, the economic value of whale oil decreased, and whalebone became the most important product of the fishery. This is obtained mainly from the right whale and the blue whale or "sulphur-bottom." The bone, which hangs from the roof of the mouth, occurs as a series of thin, horny plates or blades, several hundred in number, and vary in length to 15 feet. These plates are lined on the inner side with bristles which strain from the large quantities of water taken into the mouth in feeding, the shrimp and other small animals on which the whale feeds.

When softened with hot water or by heat, whalebone has the property of retaining any given shape, provided it is kept in the desired form until cold. Upon this property and its elasticity rests its chief value. The uses to which it has been put are numerous: for example, for women's stays, in parasols and umbrellas, as a framework for trunks and traveling bags, in fishing rods, whips, shafts and springs.

THE PRECIOUS AMBERGRIS

Ambergris, a waxy secretion formed in the intestine of the sperm whale, is another extremely valuable substance which is worth approximately its weight in gold. As much as $60,000 worth of this rare substance has been taken from a single whale. As lumps of this substance are occasionally found on the shores or floating on the seas frequented by sperm whales, persons acquainted with its value are on the watch for it. Every year various substances, suspected of being ambergris, are forwarded to the Bureau for identification. It was formerly employed as an incense, in cookery, and as a medicine. It is now used as a fixitive for the fragrance in fine perfumes.

Whales yield many other valued products, such as oils of various grades, whale amber, which is used in dressing leather to make it waterproof, leathers, bone meal, tallow and glue. However, the employment of whale meat for food, including the use of the hardened fat, now gives promise of becoming the most important purpose of the whale fishery.

GREATER THAN MAMMOTHS

The largest of the whales, the blue whale, is said to be not only the largest living animal, but the largest animal that has ever lived. It reaches a length of one hundred feet or more and an estimated weight at least of seventy-five tons. A calf, whose mother was eighty feet long, was twenty-five feet long at birth and weighed about eight tons. Little is known of the length of time and manner in which calves feed upon milk, but, from the rate of growth of the large whales it is estimated that the calves are able to care for themselves within six months. Of the large whales none, except the sperm whale, feeds on fish when other food is obtainable. The baleen whales feed upon small crustaceans, especially a small red shrimp about three-quarters of an inch long. The quantity eaten by a single whale is very great, as many as four barrels full have been taken from the stomach, which was by no means full, of a blue whale.

WHALE HOLDS ITS BREATH

Since the whale breathes air, when the animal is below the surface it must hold its breath. It can do this for a much longer time than the ordinary land mammal—even so long as forty-five minutes or an hour. The highly heated breath, which has been contained in the lungs under pressure, is forcibly expelled into the colder outer air, where it condenses, forming a column of steam or vapor. As the nostrils do not open into the back of the mouth, but are connected directly with the windpipe, a whale can not spout out of the blowholes, water which has been taken into its mouth. This provision enables the whale to swim with its mouth open when feeding, without danger of strangulating.

Since whales and porpoises are warm-blooded animals, it is necessary for them to have some protection from the cold comparable to the hair or fur on land animals. This is supplied by the thick layer of blubber that covers the body of these animals. The blubber acts as a nonconductor and prevents the heat of the animal's body being absorbed by the water.

FLESH IS MEAT, NOT FISH

Historically speaking, whales and porpoises are one-time land mammals, which have taken up life in the water, and their bodily activities, although somewhat modified, are nevertheless essentially the same as those of horses, cows or other land mammals, and therefore their flesh is "meat," not "fish." This meat resembles beef in texture and appearance, and venison in taste; but, nevertheless, it has a distinctive flavor of its own. For some time it has held an important place in the dietary of the Japanese, and is rapidly growing in favor in Norway, the United States and other countries. It may be marketed fresh, frozen, corned or canned. It is cut from the whale in chunks which in turn are cut into smaller strips, chilled and packed in boxes for shipment. As it contains no bone or gristle there is no waste.

EXCELLENT FOR ROASTS

A chemical analysis of some of the canned whale meat showed it to contain about 30 per cent protein, over 6 per cent of fat, and less than 2 per cent ash. It contains a certain amount of oil, the taste of which may not appeal to some. This may be overcome by soaking the meat in boiling water with soda before cooking, or by parboiling. This taste is scarcely noticeable in the canned product. Many prefer the whale meat panboiled in the form of a steak. It is also excellent for soup stocks, roasts and curries. Roy Chapman Andrews says that the humpback whale is probably the best species for eating, and that the sei and finback whales also yield excellent meat; and he adds that from a humpback about six tons of edible meat may be obtained; from a sei whale, five tons; and a finback, eight tons.

LANDING A WHALE

A graphic description of a whale hunt is given by Andrews:

"Almost on the instant a blinding cloud of vapor shot into our very faces, followed by the deafening roar of the gun. I saw the black flukes whirl upward and fall in one tremendous, smashing blow upon the water; then the giant figure quivered an instant, straightened out and slowly sank. For a moment not a sound was heard on the vessel save the steady 'flop, flop, flop' of the line on the deck as the dead weight of forty tons dragged it from the winch.

"Balcom leaned over the side and saw the rope hanging rigidly from the ship's bow. 'I must have caught him in the heart,' he said, 'and killed him instantly.'

VESSEL LEANS OVER

"... the captain straightened up he shouted to the engineer to check the line. Then began the work of bringing to the surface an inflating the dead whale. Taking a hitch about a short iron post, the harpoon rope was slacked and run through a spring pulley-block on the mast just below the barrel, to relieve the strain of raising the great body. As the winch ground in fathom after fathom of line the vessel heeled far over under the tremendous weight. I was clinging to the ship's side looking down into the water and soon saw the shadowy outline of the whale, fins wide spread, nearing the surface. As it came alongside a lead-weighted line was thrown over the tail, a rope pulled after it, then a small chain, by which the carcass was made fast to the bow.

"The Humpback comes up obliquely, and, as soon as the spout has been delivered, arches the back and begins to revolve, finally drawing out the flukes and going down vertically. When hunting the proper time to shoot is when the dorsal fin begins to show above the water—depending, of course, upon the distance. The iron then has a fair chance to reach the lungs or heart and a larger target is presented.

"How far a whale can descend is a matter of conjecture and more or less dispute among naturalists. One writer argues that whales cannot go deeper than 300 feet because of the tremendous water pressure. But all cetaceans have certain specializations in body structure which undoubtedly enable them to withstand high pressure.

HOW DEEP DO THEY GO?

"I have, as personal evidence upon this subject, the fact that a Blue whale, harpooned between the shoulders and but slightly injured, dove straight downward and took over a quarter of a mile of rope. We were, at the time, almost a hundred miles at sea, and so far as could be determined, the animal had gone down to the full limit of the line, which hung from the bows as rigid as a bar of steel. The whale remained below for thirty-two minutes and reappeared not more than a hundred yards away and directly in front of the ship.

"It is the opinion of every whaler with whom I have talked that all the large cetaceans can descend to a considerable depth, and each man will give numerous instances, similar to the one I have cited in the case of the Blue whale, to prove his point. Until further information is available this subject must be an open one. A smooth, circular patch of water is always left at the spot where a large whale dives. This is undoubtedly produced by suction and interrupted wave action, but has given rise to many ingenious and absurd theories in explanation.

ONCE LAND ANIMALS

"When studying whales the most important fact to remember is that they were one-time land mammals which have taken up a life in the water and that their bodily activities, although somewhat modified, are nevertheless essentially the same as those of a horse, cow or any other land mammal.

"Since a whale breathes air, when it is below the surface the breath must be held, for if water should be taken into the lungs the animal would drown. Thus, as soon as the cetacean comes to the surface its breath is expelled and a fresh supply inhaled before it goes down, just as in the case of a man when diving. However, a whale is able to hold its breath for a much longer time than can an ordinary land mammal—even as much as forty-five minutes or an hour.

A WHALE'S STEAM SPOUT

"When the animal comes to the surface the breath which has been contained in the lungs under pressure is highly heated, and as it is forcibly expelled into the colder outer air it condenses, forming a column of steam or vapor. A similar effect may be produced by any person if, on a frosty morning, the breath is suddenly blown out of the mouth. I have often seen a whale blow when its head was still a short distance under the surface and at such times a little water will be thrown upward with the spout."

The Literary Digest of October 9 quotes Dr. Charles H. LaWall, dean of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, as follows:

"The meat of the whale, which closely resembles lean beef in appearance, is now appearing in canned form in our American markets. It has long been eaten in Japan, where it adds variety to the menu of rice and fish upon which so many Japanese live almost exclusively. An average whale will yield eighty thousand pounds of meat, which can be cut out in one-hundred-pound lumps of lean, boneless flesh, and when cooked it can scarcely be distinguished from boiled beef."

AUNT ELSIE'S LETTERS TO HER KIDDIES

BOOM-TA-RA-RA-BANG!!

Wake up! You'll have to hustle like a Merry Mosquito if you're going to read all these stories before sunset. Your letters have piled up in such mountains that both of the Dens are filled to overflowing. So we're going to have another of our famous FICTION NUMBERS today. Every crack and cranny is filled with THRILLS—stories of every sort, jumping and shouting, crawling and whispering—O-O-O-O' how excited my Back Hair feels! So tie on your toes so they won't wiggle off and BEGIN!

This letter is a Scrambled-Chatter-Talk. A little bit of everything, but MOSTLY LOVE.

WILL PEGGY AND PATRICIA PIERCE SEND ME THEIR ADDRESS? They asked for letters and a dearest one has come from Mercedes Philip which I know they'll be delighted to get. Myrtle Smith has also sent them a fat package of her loveliest paper dolls. And I, too, want to write to them and tell them how I love them. So send your address, sweethearts.

Be sure and read the Contest Corner today. This is your LAST CHANCE to try for those jolly prizes. Be SURE to write "CONTEST LETTER" at the top of your story if you wish it entered in the contest. Otherwise it will go into the regular story box and you will not stand a chance of winning a prize.

There's a new idea in the paper doll drawing today. I could not spare room to draw many dresses for you so I am giving you patterns by which you may make many dolls and dozens of dresses for yourself. Paste the doll on cardboard—so that you may use her for an outline pattern. Cut her out neatly and then make as many more dolls as you wish. Give some of them red hair and some black or yellow or brown. You may make a fairyland full of dresses, coloring them up in a thousand ways.

And now here's just a chummy thought to share with you. Someone asked me the other day if I wanted my pals to "do a good turn daily" and then tell me about it. I said "YES-NO!" That's a funny answer isn't it? This is what I meant by it.

I most certainly DO want you to do a good turn daily. I want you to do it because that's the jolliest, healthiest way to live. The spirit that spreads out in helpfulness and friendliness to others is like a river rushing down to the sea, all sparkling and strong with glad adventure, gathering new power every foot of the way. The spirit that doesn't spread out in helpfulness and friendliness is like a dirty, stagnant little pool that breeds sickness.

So do your good deeds, but do them as the river goes down to the sea—BECAUSE YOU LOVE TO AND THEN FORGET THEM. Don't tell me about them. Don't tell ANYONE. Above all, DON'T KEEP TELLING YOURSELF ABOUT THEM. Do you suppose God says "I have done a good deed" every time He opens a flower bud or paints a butterfly's wings or helps a boy win a race? Think what a silly, cluttered up time He would have if He counted all His good deeds, as you would count a basket of eggs! He wouldn't have time for New Adventures. And neither will you, if you keep on counting the old ones.

And now—let's both take a HUGE ENORMOUS BITE OF APPLE PIE and start those stories!

So now I'm through,
But I love you,
Little bottles of glue,
I surely do!

AUNT ELSIE

The Diamond Idol.

Chapter 1.

In the most dense part of Africa, hidden away in the jungle, rules "Sudani." His tribe consists only of African negroes.

"Sudani seems very troubled in his mind," said one of his servants in their language.

Sudani did not like this, so he ordered the servant to be thrown into the jungle to the tigers, who were ravenous for want of food. His commands were obeyed promptly.

But in his mind Sudani was troubled. His tribe had heard of other tribes worshipping idols and they were beginning to make an idol for themselves. Now Sudani was not an African, nor was his real name "Sudani." His real name was Carl Van Off, and he had come from Germany to seek his fortune. One day he went around exploring the jungle and got lost. Soon he came upon this tribe. He made them believe he was a spirit. He was their God and they must worship him or else something would happen to them. He told them all this by means of signs. The negroes believed this. After a short time he learned their language.

Now what was troubling him was that he wanted to get some precious stones and then sneak away and return to Germany. Then he would sell the stones and he would be a multi-millionaire. These were Sudani's plans. But what was troubling him was this—if his tribe finished their idol they would put all their stones and gems in the idol to decorate it. Sudani had no rest for several days as these thoughts were always on his mind.

Soon the idol was finished and precious gems of untold wealth were put in it. There was one large diamond in the head of the idol as large as Sudani's head.

A small house of grass was erected into which the idol was placed. And each day the negroes would visit the idol and worship it.

One day the king, for the first time, sent the whole tribe out hunting, even his bodyguard. And when they returned to show the king what they had got, the king was nowhere to be found. They searched for a long time for him but could not find even a trace. Finally they gave up and went to their idol to pray for him in case something had happened to him. And lo! the diamond was out of the idol's head! Then they [illegible] Sudani. So one of the tribe fixed water and provisions and started out to find him.

In the meantime Sudani was camping on the bank of a small river about 25 miles from where the tribe lived. He did not attempt to travel fast and the negro that was following him came upon him the fourth night. He was hunting for a place to camp for the night when suddenly he saw the smoke from Sudani's fire. He crept closer and peered through the bushes.

Before retiring Sudani went to his bag of provisions and things and took out a leopard skin bag. Then he took from out of the bag, the huge diamond that had disappeared from out of the idol. Then he put it back in the bag and laid it beside his things. Then he laid down and went to sleep.

Now the negro had seen all this through the bushes. And when he thought Sudani was sound asleep he crept slowly up to the bag that contained the diamond and took it out of the bag and put in its place a rock about the same size. After putting the gem in his own bag he sneaked away.

When Sudani awoke in the morning he put his sack with the rest of his things and journeyed on. He traveled for two weeks and then he came to the place where he could take the boat for Germany.

Chapter 2—In Germany.

Upon arriving in Germany he met many old friends. He often related his experiences for his club members. But his treasure he put in a security box in a bank although he did not look at it.

Soon he found himself out of money and he went to get his diamond and sell it. Imagine his surprise to find it WAS gone! And most mysterious of all, the rock in its place. So he reported it to the police and no trace of it could be found. Soon the news crept through Germany and it was decided that Mr. Carl Van Off and about 50 other men would take a trip to this place and maybe establish a Mission and teach the natives. They started off with high spirits.

Chapter 3—Arriving.

The natives were much startled at their arrival but all was explained by Sudani. The natives grew very fond of the white men and when asked if they would like to learn of a real God, they all agreed. So a Mission was established and the natives were given education.

Chapter 4—Forgiveness.

Sudani sought forgiveness and was forgiven in a real way. All the natives got together and mumbled something meaning that all was forgiven between Sudani and the tribe. They all lived happy, until—

Chapter 5—Death.

One day Sudani and some natives were out hunting when he and some men saw a tiger jump in the bushes and run in the opposite direction from them. They all ran after it with their spears, ready to thrust into it. Suddenly Sudani stumbled onto a snake tree, a certain kind of a tree that when anyone touches it, it reaches out is branches and hugs you in so tight you smother. There is no way of escaping its clutch.

The men with Sudani tried their best to save him, but their attempts were in vain. So the men burnt the tree and carried him home.

Sudani was given an extra fine burial and in the minds of the natives for generations, the memory of "Sudani" did not vanish.

Dear Aunt Elsie—

I got an idea from "Pollyanna," written by Mrs. Porter. The kiddies that haven't read or seen it might like to know. It is "The Glad Game."

It is a game, not running or hopping or skipping, but it is to be Glad, Glad, Glad about everything, no matter what comes up. If you have to do the dishes and don't like to just be glad because you have dishes to eat off of, or if you have to run on an errand and don't like to, you can be glad you can walk, or if you can't walk you can be glad you can use your hands or eyes or that you can talk. We can always be Glad, Glad, for everything, little or big. We can be glad it isn't worse whatever it is.

There lived in Italy a millionaire who had three sons. He fell sick and died. About a year after he died the war broke out.

The eldest son fought with the Germans against America, for he thought he would win great victories. The next to the oldest son fought for the Turks against America for he thought he would have Armenian slaves. But the youngest son fought for America.

The two eldest sons were killed in battles, the youngest was wounded and sent to America to get well, where he soon recovered. He married a pretty American girl and lived happy with his wife and only child.

Kidnaped.

Hazel was a girl 11 years of age. She had brown hair and pretty merry brown eyes.

Hazel lived in a very fine home in New York. Her father being very rich, gave her all she wanted.

One day Hazel was out with her nurse, a Chinaman passed them. Hazel saw him go in the park and thought nothing more of it. That evening when Hazel was playing in the garden she happened to pick a flower on which was written:

"Pick one of the flowers and bring it to the gate. I will pay you. (Signed) A Friend." Hazel picked the flower and took it to the gate.

Whom should she see but the Chinaman! She was too frightened to scream. The Chinaman put her in a machine and sped off.

When she got off she found herself in a funny place. The Chinaman brought her in a queer room with a queer odor. In the middle of the room was a table on which were long pipes and a large box marked "Opium." Along the walls were beds, one on top of another, something like those in the trains. In them were people smoking opium, and in one corner was a couch. She tried to get out, but the door was locked.

That night for her supper she had chop suey, but she threw it away. That night she slept on the couch.

When she woke up she planned a scheme for her get-away.

That morning there was not an opium smoker in the berths. There was only one Chinaman home, the others had gone out. When the Chinaman came in from the next room she told him to look up at the ceiling. In so doing he was hit on the head and fell unconscious. She found the key, unlocked the door and ran out.

After four hours' walk she at last found her way home. Her father had sent out all the servants to look for her, but now she was home safe and she never paid attention to any more notes.

THE END.

Fairies were rare things, once upon a time. You could only find them in Fairies' Rings or Moon Flowers or other strange places. But now they pop up most everywhere and if you keep the shine in your eyes you may meet one any morning on the way to school. Who would expect to find one on Independence way, all dressed in the latest gown from Fairyland! She's one of my namesakes, too, so I'm SPECIALLY proud of her. Elsie says she goes to the Garfield school—but I secretly think she goes to school in a buttercup.

Carl and His Bride.

After many days of traveling on horseback, Carl was nearing Arizona. When he was crossing the plains his horse jumped back and Carl looked, and to his surprise he saw a big rattlesnake which sprang at him just as he fired his revolver. It caught him through his big leather boot. Weak as he was, he shot at it and killed it, and it had thirteen rattles.

Carl put some mud on the bite and got on his horse and started off. He did not go far when he began to sink in a faint. As he was nearing a farm house a girl came out and saw him and thought he was drunk, and began laughing and calling him "Drunkard!"

Carl spoke up and said, "I'm not drunk, Miss, only——" and he stopped as he held out the dead snake, falling to the ground in a faint.

When he gained consciousness he was in a nice white bed with the girl bending over him, begging him to forgive her for what she had said to him.

In two weeks he was well enough to continue his journey and on the next day after the two weeks, he rode away with his bride-to-be riding by his side.

Carl went to Arizona
And met his bride Ramona.
A snake bit him,
She took him in
And cared for him swell
'Till he was well.
Now they have married,

Why the Turks Haven't Got a Harem Any More.

Herman El Raschid was a Turk and he had a harem of wives. They'd all fight like cats and dogs, although they were not allowed to show themselves. Many's the time they'd go to the Caliph and turn their shoe on account of not giving them any money for the Turkish baths because it is a rule among the Turks that women have as much right as men in the baths.

When the great war came the men had to go to war, so the women tried their best to put their families together, but couldn't for they were weak with hunger. Many Americans came and worked as Missionaries.

Among them, and at the head was Miss Margaret O'Neal. When she heard and saw the suffering of the poor she sent a cry to President Wilson asking for aid. Wilson sent boats full of food and clothing to the people of Armenia, Serbia and Turkey, for every one of the three were suffering something terrible.

He then ordered that the women may help hunt their families. Wilson then asked the people to do what they could in planting, but for all that they tried they couldn't plant a thing, 'cause they couldn't work. The American people then said:

"How funny that they did not know anything."

So when the King of Turkey heard it, he ordered that a man was to have just one wife, and no more. The Turkish women are now glad and say that if it wasn't for America they'd still be slaves of the men.

The Lost Child

Once upon a time there was a pretty girl named Evelyn, and she had three brothers named Tom, Willie and Jack. Their mother was a Queen and their father was a King. They thought the world of Evelyn. She was as sweet as a rose, her cheeks were rosy and her dimples were merry. Her brothers just loved her.

One day Evelyn and her three brothers went out to the meadow to pick some flowers. Evelyn was sitting down in the grass when all at once she saw something white. The White Thing asked Evelyn if she wanted to take a ride on the back of him.

Evelyn was only eight years old and of course she thought he would bring her back, so she said yes. She got on his back and the White Thing flew across the water.

The three brothers were sitting down in the grass. All at once Tom shouted: "Look at Evelyn on that White Thing up in the air!"

They ran out to see if they could see her but she was gone. Her mother cried for her pretty child. One week passed, two weeks passed, but still they couldn't find her.

Their mother was a queen, but she dressed like she hadn't any clothes to wear. She lived in the woods like poor people.

Every person they met they asked if they saw a White Thing with a girl on the back of it. But everyone they met said no.

After eight years without seeing her girl since she was eight years old, the mother lay very ill.

Then Willie got married and built a nice castle in the woods.

Then two months after Jack got married and built a nice castle.

Then Tom was left. He was a big man seventeen years old, but he was still looking for his dear sister.

So one day he was climbing a hill and he came to a big stone in the ground. The stone was as clear as glass and he saw his dear sister Evelyn sitting down inside the stone.

Evelyn got a pencil and paper and wrote something, telling him how to get in the stone. Tom got in and killed the White Thing with guns and a sword. He got Evelyn out of the stone and they built a beautiful home and lived happy ever after.

Helen's Bravery

"Don't stay too long, dear," called Mrs. Stuart as her daughter Helen turned the corner.

"I won't, mother," called Helen.

All of a sudden Helen was gagged, bound and thrown into a machine and was quickly driven three miles out of town. She never knew the way she was taken, as she was blindfolded.

The next thing she knew she was in a large cave. A man by the name of Bill who seemed to be the chief said to Helen, "If you will have your father go away tonight so that we may have a share of that fortune, we will let you go."

Helen thought a moment and then said, "No."

"Suit yourself," said Bill.

Then Bill ordered her to be left alone and given no food. Soon Helen was trying to escape. As she was walking around she saw something red. She stooped and found that it was an arrow pointing upwards. Then she put her hand up on the roof of the cave and began feeling and pressing, when all of a sudden her hand went through and she could see daylight.

Soon she went home. The police came and caught the robbers.

If Helen had of given in when she was being starved like some of those boys in the pirate den would of, Helen's father would of lost all his money.

Jean's Experience

In France lived a wealthy couple and had a daughter named Jean. They lived happy as the days passed by. One day Jean's mother was ill and died. Jean and her father was unhappy as the long, hard winter passed on.

Time went on and Jean's father sold his house and packed their trunks and took the steamer to America. Before the steamer reached America Jean's father died of illness. Now Jean was left all alone but the money was left to her.

When Jean reached America she couldn't understand the English language. As she was wandering around a policeman came to Jean and said "Do you want help?"

But Jean only shook her head and spoke French.

The policeman couldn't understand French so he brought a lady who could speak French. In French Jean said "Please show me the English school. I want to learn the English language."

The lady took Jean to school. It was about a month and she knows how to speak the English language. In the same school a man named Robert took Jean home and she was friendly with him.

One afternoon Robert said, "Jean, come and see me today in apartment room twenty."

When Jean went to Robert's room everything was queer. There were many doors, pass keys, jewels, money and many other queer things. Jean was frightened and tried to get out, and Robert knew Jean would notify the police. So Robert took Jean and locked her up in one room and he went away. Jean fainted and cried for help but it was no use.

At midnight she heard a LOUD noise and Jean peeked through the keyhole and there were two bandits. Things they robbed they left on the table and went away. Next morning Jean took her handkerchief and a pencil and wrote on the handkerchief, "Please HELP in room twenty," and wrapped a dollar in it so it would be heavy and threw it down.

As she threw it down it hit a policeman on the head. As he read these words he brought two other police with him. They knocked at the door but no one came. Then Jean knew it was the police, so she cried for help. The police kicked the door in and saved Jean. Then the police waited till Robert and his two bandits came home. They were taken to prison.

The Mystery of the Ring.

Once there lived a beautiful girl whom everybody wanted to marry. But she would not consent to marry till her father threatened to turn her away from home. At last she married a prince of a foreign country.

When he married her he placed on her finger a gold ring with four diamonds in it that sparkled like the sun and shown like a rainbow. But the girl had never been away from her parents before so at last the prince had built a golden palace right next door to her father's. But not till the girl had been married a month did she begin to notice her ring.

She thought she had never seen a prettier ring. She took it off again and again and turned it over. It was perfect in every way.

BUT one day she was alone because the prince was paying a visit to a neighboring king. Having nothing to keep her company she looked at her ring again when all at once she noticed some secret words engraved inside in letters of silver, which neither she nor anyone in the whole village could read. When the prince returned she spoke to him about it.

First he grew pale and then recovering his spirits, began to talk about something else. Again and again she tried but with no better success. Never a word could she get out of him. Well after a while she grew tired of asking and forgot all about it.

One night she was sitting by her [illegible] noise and then all was silent. Hastily catching her breath, she glanced at her ring. One diamond was gone!

For six years she tried to get a jeweler to fix it but in vain, for no jeweler had a diamond to match the one she had lost. At last she took it to a jeweler who knew all languages, and also had a great assortment of stones and the Princess thought he might have a diamond that would do.

When it was passed into his hands he looked it over carefully and then unlocked his safe.

"Let's see," said he, "I have a stone very much like the one that you lost but not exactly. No one in the whole world has. It was made by the underground people and the fire that made these diamonds has gone out a thousand years ago and there is no more like it in the whole world."

"Very well, I consent," said the Princess. "When shall I come back for my ring?"

"Oh, I can't get it done before a month. The work has to be very carefully done," said he with a grave shake of the head.

But just as she was turning to go he gave a shrill scream.

"What is this?" she heard him gasp, and the next moment he had fainted.

When he came to and was rested he told his story of the ring. It was made by a brother of his, a Hindu Prince. He stole money and got drunk and was put in jail six times. At last he went away and when he came back he brought this ring. No one could read the words, but now having been taught all languages by a magician the jeweler could read it.

"What was his name?" asked the Princess.

"Well, his name was Ali Doobe!"

The Princess gave a shrill scream and fell backward, but did not faint.

"Why he is my husband," she said.

"And I heard him the other day talking to one of his friends," continued the jeweler. "He has made a plot to kill you tonight. The only way you can save yourself is to wait till the first star comes out and then bury the ring under the rose tree in the front yard and you will be saved."

The Princess did as she was told and this saved her life.

The Flower's Love.

Once in an old fashioned garden, there lived Mr. Bachelor Button, Mr. Buttercup and Miss Wild Daisy.

These three interesting people lived in a sunny, neglected spot in the garden, away from the fashionable people, who lived on the other side of the garden.

One day Mr. Bachelor Buttons thought to himself:

"I should like a lover." At this he turned his gaze towards the fashionable quarter.

There his eye rested on beautiful Miss Rose.

"Oh," cried the Honored Sir, "How I wish I were her lover, but Mr. Hollyhock declares himself to be her hero."

Then he turned his eyes to another part of the garden. Here his gaze rested on dainty Miss Narcissus.

"Oh me, Oh my, what an unlucky chap am I," said he. "I wish, Oh how I wish I lived next to Miss Narcissus. I should dearly love her, but of course I can not transplant myself, and then too, cross Mrs. Pincushion is her mother and she would not allow her daughter to marry a foreigner as I."

Thus did Mr. Bachelor Buttons talk to himself, as he gazed from one beautiful young lady to another, till Mr. Buttercup interrupted his dreams by saying:

"I fear, dear sir, you shall have to be a bachelor as your name proves, all the rest of your life."

At this Mr. Buttons became very angry. He knew that Mr. Buttercup was wooing Miss Wild Daisy, but still for spite he decided to steal Miss Wild Daisy's love from Mr. Buttercup.

So when the sun was setting, and the heavens were glowing, and the wind was gently blowing, Mr. Bachelor Buttons whispered softly words of love into the ear of Miss Daisy. Then with a magnificent bow and gracefully swaying, thinking that he would gather Miss Daisy in his arms, he bent still lower, when suddenly a gust of wind came, blowing him to the ground, breaking his back and so making him helpless to get back to his proper position.

"Ha! ha!" laughed Mr. Buttercup. "Deceitful wretch, you will steal my beloved!"

Mr. Buttercup then gracefully gathered his loved one in his arms, protecting her from the wind. There they realized their love and were very happy.

Poor Mr. Bachelor Buttons, he died a deceitful Bachelor.

Treasure

Part 1

If you looked good you would see a black speck way off in the middle of the ocean, but if you were close you could easily see that it was the pirate ship "Treasure Hunter."

The captain of the "Treasure Hunter" was Algernon V. McGuffer. The chief of the band of pirates was Ezekial O. Sgraggs.

It was Wednesday at 4 o'clock p. m. that Sgraggs came out on deck and said to McGuffer:

"'Tain't safe to hev so much load. Head for land 'n we'll bury all we can."

"Sure, Sgraggsy, old boy."

At last they were safely on land. Each pirate worked hard, terribly hard, till at last they had no more time for people were moving about.

As soon as they were moving on again Sgraggs sat down and taking a piece of paper, described the rock where they had buried the treasure. It was easy to describe for it was shaped like a pyramid. Then he put it in a safe.

That night a terrible storm came up. The "Treasure Hunter" struck a rock and was wrecked. The safe happened to have a string on it with a loop on the end. This loop caught on a little point on the rock which the "Treasure Hunter" had struck.

About a week after, a ship came along and the curious Captain, seeing the safe, sent a diver down to get it. The Captain opened it but found nothing in it. Nevertheless, when they landed he took it to his aged father's home.

Part 2.

Nearly 200 years had passed. The old house had been built over but the safe had been one of the things that had been saved and put in the attic of the new home. It was built on a high cliff overlooking the bay.

Judith and Bob and their father and mother lived in this mansion.

Judith and Bob's chums were Jeannette and Arthur. They lived in an old mansion also. Judy and Jeannette were 11 and Bob and Artie were 12.

One day they all went up in the old attic to explore. All of a sudden Jeannette cried, "Why! look at the safe!"

They all came to where Jeannette was standing. The old safe was standing there with its door wide open.

"Isn't this funny, this board here, and this square of rocks right at the end of the board?" asked Bob.

As he spoke he gave a little jerk to the board dividing the safe. Out came the board and down tumbled the rocks. Then down fluttered a little piece of paper yellowed with age. The writing was terribly dim but at last they had read it. They all stood open-mouthed.

Then Judy, who was a great one for adventure, said "Our house is nearest the shore so tonight Jeannette and Artie will stay all night. Then we'll set the alarm to 10:30 tonight. I always wake up right away and I'll stop it. We'll have picks 'n everything else under our beds. Then we'll go down to Pyramid rockn' dig!"

"Good for you Jude, that's what we'll do."

So at 10:30 off went the alarm. Judy jumped up and shut it off. Then she woke those that had not wakened. They got on their clothes, took their picks, shovels, etc., and tramped down to Pyramid rock.

They waited till it was 11 o'clock. Then they began to dig. My, how they dug. At last there was a noise. Judy had struck a box! After that it was always:

"I've struck something!"

In the morning at 8 they came tramping home and told their anxious mother and father all about it. Then their father went down and helped them carry the things home. Oh, how rich they were now!

In a few years Jeannette and Artie and Judy and Bob with their fathers and mothers moved to Oakland, Cal.

Their First Trip.

At last the great day had arrived. The hands of the clock had seemed to drag by so slowly, it was enough to make anyone impatient, especially when one was going on a yachting cruise, just like Bobbie and Jane were.

"Gee whiz, isn't it time to start yet?" asked Bobbie of his mother for the fourth time that morning.

"Yes, we will start as soon as I finish packing this lunch basket," replied his mother patiently.

It did not take long for the basket to be packed and put away on the yacht with their other belongings.

Mr. Burns had bought the yacht a few days before and this was the first time Bobbie and Jane were going on it.

The little yacht steamed out of the bay quickly, to the delight of the children who were never tired of gazing at the waves dashing against the side of the yacht.

2.

Towards the middle of the afternoon of the third day, the water was rougher, and the sun was hidden by dark clouds. The old sea captain who was managing the boat predicted a fierce storm.

Mr. Burns and the Captain had a hurried talk in which they decided to make for the nearest land before the storm overcame them. The Captain returned to his wheel while Mr. Burns went to reassure his wife.

An hour later and they had not yet seen land. Thunder and lightning seemed to play tag in the sky. The rain fell down in torrents. The boat was rocking this way and that. Jane was crying while Bobbie, with a very white face, felt that the end of the world had come.

3.

As a last resource Mr. Burns sent up a rocket. Maybe someone would see it, but it was a very faint hope.

Alas, no answering rocket was seen, what was to be done? He must not give up hope for surely some ship must be near as it was a part where many ships came.

Again he sent one up. This time he was answered. If only they would come before they were too late!

A little later a ship came by just as the yacht sank. Were they too late?

The night was dark, but not far off they saw a tiny light. Could it be that they were in a lifeboat? Quickly they came near. Yes, it was them. They quickly brought them on board. Everyone was saved.

How thankful Mr. Burns was to be safe again, while Mrs. Burns and the children were very glad that they were on their way home, safe and sound.

Janice Meredith was a beautiful American girl. She was in France doing her part in the great war.

One day as she was picking a few straggling flowers to cheer the wounded an aeroplane suddenly swooped down, grabbed Janice and went high into the air. She uttered one scream of distress.

2—The Fight.

Lieutenant James McCarthy, also doing his part in the great war heard her scream, saw the aeroplane gradually disappearing. Quickly he jumped into an aeroplane and went in pursuit of the other.

Faster and faster he went, gradually gaining on the other plane. Soon the other plane made a dash forward and went straight upward. James followed. The air began to get more and more close. He could hardly breathe.

Suddenly a bullet struck him in his left arm. He grabbed his gun, shot at the other plane, and soon shots came pouring in. James shooting as best he could, was fast losing his strength from loss of blood.

3—The Cave.

Suddenly the plane swooped down, down, down and James, looking down, saw an island beneath them. They had gone hundreds of miles and it was growing dark. Soon the plane was on the island, James followed, but arrived there just in time to see two men jump out holding Janice. They ran across the sand, went to a big rock and disappeared.

James staggered across the sand and fell at the foot of the rock, faint from loss of blood. When he awakened it was morning.

He jumped up, leaned against the rock and the great rock moved, and James saw a stairway leading down to—where? He looked the other way and saw a door. Someone was in there talking! He went to the door and listened. He heard a voice say:

"We can leave her here. That lieutenant can never find her."

Soon James heard footsteps. He hid and soon two men came out of the door, pressed a button and the rock swung open and they went out, the door closing after them.

James jumped up, ran into the room, saw Janice and grabbed her and ran out. He jumped into his aeroplane and went. Soon he heard the noise of another plane. They were after him!

Shots came from the plane and soon James found his plane was [illegible] the ocean beneath them!

Soon Janice and James jumped into the water as both were excellent swimmers. They swam a long distance before they were tired out.

4—Escape.

They felt themselves sinking. They looked up and there was a ship about a half a mile ahead. It gave them new courage.

They swam to the ship and were taken on board and taken back to their camp. They looked about. What was all this happiness about? He asked someone and was answered.

"Why don't you know that the war is over? That is why we are so happy."

Some soldiers went with James and they went to the cave and captured the two men who were found out to be German spies.

5—United.

Janice and James went back to America. On their way back James said to Janice:

"Our first names are almost alike, let's make our last one alike."

Janice said "Yes," and there was a great celebration when they reached America, their home and their country, and as most tales end, they lived happily ever after.

The Brown Mystery.

On an ocean steamer sailed a young authoress who was bound for Constantinople. She was writing books for the American schools. Her name was Ethel Brown.

When she had been away for awhile she ceased to write to her parents. They became anxious and sent a young detective to find her. It happened that this man was Ethel's young lover, Jim Murphy.

He arrived there and found no clews. [illegible] to pass between two buildings and on one side was a little cub-hole where two men were talking.

"I see that the Shiek of Stamboul has a pretty American wife," said one.

"American!" made Jim open his ears more.

Another voice answered, "I hear he captured her about a month ago."

Jim was a clever detective and he knew that if he stood there he would be suspected, so he went away.

He disguised himself as a Turkish servant and went to Stamboul.

Here he was at once received by the Shiek and was ushered into a stuffy room. Soon the Shiek appeared and spoke to him:

"I've kidnaped an American girl for my wife. Today I go for the license. I want you to guard her room and see that she does not escape."

With that he showed him to her room. The Shiek gave him directions and went away.

As soon as he had gone Jim knocked on the door and Ethel opened the door. None could describe their joy to meet again.

But the next few minutes were occupied in planning their escape. But the Shiek came home before they expected, and they were discovered.

The Sheik started to fight with Jim. Jim hit the Sheik with a porcelain vase. This didn't stun him enough to kill him, but he hit Jim with another vase and knocked him unconscious.

Then the Sheik went to Ethel. He was affected by the blow Jim had given him and fell to her feet dead.

Ethel then went to Jim. He was married to Ethel while he was on his sick bed. But he recovered and he was soon able to return home.

They were received warmly by their friends. Jim kept in the detective business, but he never solved a mystery like Ethel's.

BOYS' DEN!

Here's just about the MOST ORIGINAL story that has ever gladdened the old Pirates' Den. How you're going to grin when you read it! It surely is a corker—and I vote we lead Ozro to the Treasure Chest and let him take his pick of the loot!

ABOUT ALL OUR PALS AND PALLETTES

By OZRO WILLIAM CHILDS
3125 W. Adams St., Los Angeles

I was walking along the street and met Sam Pierce coming along with his dog Prince.

"Hello, Oz!" he greeted me, "don't you just hate girls—or I mean they think they're so smart," as he saw Elizabeth Buswell coming toward us. I told him I didn't know about that for I knew one girl who was specially nice, but just then The Prophet of the Golden Pen came along and said:

"Boys! Boys! You must not talk such.
"For soon you'll be saying too much,
"You must heed to my good advice,
"For my, I think it's very nice."

Well, of course, we immediately stopped, for we knew The Prophet to be of great learning and I think we wanted to show off we had some learning too—although we don't always show it off in school.

Well, just then Gae came walking up with a proud look and said:

"Say, fellers, I've just discovered a way of sending a wireless to Mars with a ten-volt battery and I have drawn some plans here which I will send immediately to—" but he was cut off for up stepped Thelma Bless and said:

"I bet you don't know why a class room's like a Ford, or what's the difference between—" but just then Ed Higgins stepped up and said:

"Sure, I know, because they both make the same amount of noise." Whereupon Sammie said:

"Yea, that's right, Ed., girls think they're awfully smart," but the Prophet said to Edward:

"A class room does not make much noise—"

"If it contains most orderly boys." however the Tazern of Oakland interrupted him with.

"It would take a step-up-down-around-in-a-circle transformer with an 8-volt globe to make you do anything," but the Prophet DID do something. He got out his pen—of pure gold—and was going to dash it into The Tazern, had not Carol Ensign stepped up between them.

Just then Jacobson and Brittle Beard stepped up with a heated argument as to which drew the best pictures, and we took a vote to decide—each boy getting two votes, and both of them got the same number. Finally they were each telling each other the other could draw the best and at last stopped when Full Speed Ahead came running up—really I think he could beat the Richmond local—and he came up and said:

"Look out, Tommy, Cy's after me. Look out!" and we looked out not out, for we were already in the street. Anyway, Cy came up and was followed by all the Witches, while all our Pirate Chums came up chain-gang style from the other direction, and The Prophet motioned for us to form a sort of ranks. While we were, Same Pierce said: "I do wish those nasty girls weren't here," but just then he caught sight of the girl with brown hair and brown eyes and turned red and fell into line.

Soon a band was heard and we all fell in—the Pirates on one side and the Witches on the other, leaving a path between, while the procession drew nearer. When it finally drew up and stopped we saw AUNT ELSIE and she stopped and said: "Hello Chums," but we didn't stop there. We threw our hats up in the air with

"THREE CHEERS FOR AUNT ELSIE!" Aunt Elsie finishing up with

"AND THE PIRATES AND WITCHES OF THE PAGE!"

Here's a DANDY little yarn with a BIG THINK in it.

"BOLSHEVIK NED"

Once a boy named Tom wanted to join the Scouts. As his father was a very rich man, he could have anything he wished, so his request was granted at once. The next day after Tom joined had been fixed for a camping trip and the scoutmaster had told Tom to make up his pack. Then he went away and left him to do so. Now Tom was not used to this kind of work, as the servants had always done such work for him. So he tried to think of some plan to get out of the work. Then he realized that if he did not make up his pack he couldn't go on the trip. At once he changed his mind and [illegible] up his pack without another thought. The next day all the scouts went on the trip and the happiest boy there was Tom. BOLSHEVIKI NED.

THE BOY SCOUT HEROES

Nothing could be heard but the occasional sound of a shell and the cries of the wounded and dying. Several dark forms could be seen moving around the American advance grounds. Two of the forms were caked with mud from head to foot. The uniforms they wore could hardly be distinguished, but they were the uniforms of the Boy Scouts of America, worn by two sturdy lads of 16 years. These boys were among the stretcher bearers enrolled in the American Red Cross list in Washington, D. C.

Early that morning the American forces had advanced four miles into German territory. Soon the boys had finished their work and reported to their friend and commander, Colonel Bright, who told them to go to bed and get some sleep for he had work for them in the morning.

The work proved to be a mission to discover on bicycles secret roads so the American army trains could pass over. They started at nine o'clock with a fellow named Wilson as leader. Soon they were returning without adventure. Just then they saw American infantry, about 1200 strong, marching along a road which the boys knew to be a blind alley which led to nowhere. At a short turn in this road the boys knew that about 1300 Germans were hidden.

"We must reach them and save them!" cried Wilson.

Off he raced, but he had not gone 100 yards when he fell with a bullet thru' his temple. Three others followed, but they met with the same fate. Five bicycle riders were now left, the two boys amongst them. They rushed forward, and the three others fell dead. Jack and Fred were the only ones left now, altho they both were wounded, and they rushed on and on. At last they reached the regiment. Fred fell exhausted, but Jack blurted out the warning and then fell.

The infantry charged and the Germans, being cowards, could not face the cold steel. The Americans had won the day!

Meanwhile Jack and Fred were taken to the hospital. Fred lost his right arm and Jack had two fingers off his left hand. This put an end to their fighting days. They were both given commissions as captains and awarded the American war cross. As they were leaving France the news came that the Germans had surrendered and they went home heroes. EDW. HIGGINS.

It's always a big day when a letter arrives from Larry Julio, and the day this came was an extra large time.

THE ADVENTURES OF BURT ARMOR, HUNTER—No. 2

709 Chanslor Ave., Richmond

You know what Burt did last time while an aviator in the A. E. F.? Well, watch what he does this time! After the world war was over and Burt was discharged he decided to go back to his old life of a hunter. Time and again he had heard about the submerged city in the Indian Ocean, from old travelers and explorers. This city was named Tokay and it was inhabited. Yes, people lived in the submerged city of Tokay! How they lived there, thousands of leagues below the surface, I did not know. This is the way Burt Armor told me of it.

"For years I had wanted to visit Tokay. After the war I had nothing to do, so I bought a German sub, hired a crew, and started out. I had an old sheepskin map which a friend had given me and on it was this:

"33 deg. Long. - 22 Lat. - 3000 Lags"

That was all, but I was enough of a sailor to know that meant: 33 longitude, 22 latitude, 3000 leagues. So Tokay lay 3000 leagues under the sea.

We sailed on the surface all the way from San Francisco and finally arrived at the place. Early the next morning the sub dove down. Imagine me, a hunter, who had never been on the sea very much, going down 3000 leagues to find the populated city of Tokay! In all my 82 years I never felt so queerly.

After we had gone down for about an hour one of the crew discovered that we had very little air. Think of it, and we were about 1-3 of the way down! The worst of it was that we also had very little oil! How I raved at the captain, as we started up for the surface, with what little we had. He had not gone very far before the engines began to gasp and then finally stopped. Then slowly our sub BEGAN TO SINK!

Horror of horrors! It wasn't very long BEFORE OUR AIR BEGAN TO GIVE OUT! We all knew we would die of suffocation. The torpedo tube had been removed and even if it had been there, what man could live all the way to the surface? Soon we were all gasping for air!

I think it was about four o'clock in the morning, daybreak in the South Seas, when I suddenly awoke. Then I wasn't dead yet! I felt the submarine suddenly rock all over, slowly at first. Then I felt as if I were being raised from the water. I looked at the port holes. There was light shining thru them! Yes, the light of the sun. Slowly I arose and dragged myself to the port holes. FAR BELOW ME LAY THE SEA! I say far below, for the sub seemed suspended in the air!

Quickly I woke my sleeping, half-dead comrades. The captain climbed the ladder and opened the door of the sub—THE AIR RUSHED IN! Then I lost consciousness.

In the "South Sea Reports" in San Francisco this article appeared:

"On January 2, 1919, during an earthquake in the South Seas, the submerged city of Tokay rose to the surface. A submarine owned by Burt Armor had sunk to the city and had settled on the top of one of the temples. The crew and Armor himself were almost dead from lack of air."

But how about those people in Tokay?" I asked as Armor stopped.

"Oh!" said he, laughing, "they turned out to be all tomyrot, like many a deep sea tale."

"THE BLACK HAND"

MISER'S TOWER

Chap. 1. The Miser

Long ago there was a miser. When he felt that he was going to die he dug a cave and buried his gold, for he did not want anyone to get it. Near this underground room, or cave, he built a high tower with spiral stairs inside going up to the top where there was a little room in which he stayed.

Chap. 2. The Lost Treasure.

Years after, a young man came to a village which was called Miser because it was built opposite the hill where the miser had lived and on which the tower now stood. The young man told the townspeople that a story had been handed down through his family that this miser had been one of their relations and that the miser had a map to show where his treasure was, hidden in a picture frame.

Chap. 3. The Hunt.

When the people in the village heard this story, two young men decided to try and find the treasure secretly. The first one went to the tower and began looking at the pictures. Just as he found the one which would reveal the map on pressing a spring, the old floor gave way and he fell down and was killed. The second young man was just walking up the stairs when they gave way and he was killed.

Then the rightful young man came. He managed to get to the room in safety and at once took all the pictures and went home.

Chap. 4. The Lost Is Found.

While he was looking at them he dropped one. It hit on the end, a secret spring was pressed and the picture rolled up, disclosing the old map. The men then went back to the tower and touched a panel which the map showed. The panel opened and a flight of stairs was revealed. The men then went down to find the treasure and he found it. But to his horror, the bags of gold were clasped tight in the arms of a skeleton! The miser had died holding his gold.

The young man took the treasure and married his sweetheart.

THE BLACK HAND.

P. S. Here's a joke for the pals. Once upon a time there was a man who was so lazy that he didn't want to live. So some of his neighbors agreed to bury him alive. As they were marching down the street with the man in his coffin a man came along and said he would give him a bushel of corn to start a living.

The lazy man sat up. "Is it husked?" said he.

"No," said the man.

The lazy man lay down again. "Drive on, boys, drive on," said he.

Here's a new pal who is evidently a SCRAPPER. For he starts a row with those witches in his very first letter. Welcome to the Den, Chum—we've been waiting for you.

But the boys can make a bigger hit!
I'd like to join the corner too,

Jack of the Secret Service was in his office in New York when he heard a knock at the door and in walked his old school chum, Tom. They were so glad to see each other they almost cried. Jack was to go next day to France to get some important papers, so he invited Tom to come along. They had just started and were about 20 miles from home on the train when the train stopped. Everyone ran out and there were a lot of bandits holding up the engineer. Jack and Tom pulled out the Colts and rushed on the bandits and made them throw up their hands. They were rewarded.

THE CATTLE RUSTLERS.

Frank and Jack lived on a farm in Texas. Their father had a five hundred acre ranch and had three thousand cows.

One day when they were out on the range quite a number of calves were bawling for their mothers. Then their father came up and the boys told him about it. So they counted the cattle and found one hundred missing.

The boys rode back to the house and got their revolvers and a blanket each. Then they rode until they came to the range. It was then two o'clock so the boys waited until four o'clock and then heard a patting of hoofs comming toward the cattle.

They hid behind some bushes to wait for the rustlers.

Soon they came and started a fire and put some irons in it to heat. Then they caught and branded fifty cattle and then started away. Frank had a flashlight so Jack went back for help. Frank told him that every five minutes he would flash his light so he could find him.

So Jack rode back for help and Frank followed the rustlers. In an hour Jack came back with help. Frank flashed his light so Jack found him.

Then they raided the rustlers and killed them all. They then waited until morning and returned with their cattle. Frank and Jack got a pony and a pearl handled revolver for their work.

Once there was an aviator that had to go across the German lines. He dropped a piece of paper that had American writing on it.

The Germans did not know what it meant so they said:

"Let's ask that prisoner to tell us what it meant."

They said: "We will let you go if you will tell us what that said."

So he said, "I will. He said that the Americans was going to whip you out!"

So they set him free. But he knew where the Germans' plans were so he took them and gave them to the Americans, so the Americans won the war. MYRON NEIRO.

PIRATE JOE.

Pirate Joe was a bold and brave man. He had a crew of eighteen men.

One day as Pirate Joe was sailing he caught sight of a speck in the distance. He watched the speck turn into a boat. The boat came nearer. Joe called his men and said: "Capture the boat and make the men slaves!"

His men waited until the boat was quite near. Then the men on Joe's boat jumped on the other boat and began to fight.

But the other ship was a war vessel. Still Joe's men went on fighting, but the other ship had more men and soon captured Joe's ship.

Pirate Joe did not want to get captured so he shot himself.

THE LOST MINE.

In a small mining town lived Joe and Jack whose father was employed in the mine as foreman. Mae was twelve and Jack was fourteen.

In another part of the town lived Joey, whose father was driver of the engine for the mine, Joey was Jack's chum.

It was Friday afternoon and the three children were planning a berry pick on Saturday.

Saturday morning Joey called for Jack and Mae and they made the trip through the woods to the haunted cabin where the berries were big and the bushes thick.

Joey being new to the woods got scared as Jack told some stories about how his father killed some bears near there. But Joey wouldn't give in because Mae was along, but he wished it was time to go home.

They were getting separated and were so busy they didn't notice it, when Joey went around a turn and on an old log eating berries was a cub bear!

Joey dropped his bucket and ran one way while the cub who was more scared than Joey, went howling in another.

Joey went running when he saw a bank. Without stopping to see if the bear was still coming, he jumped over. He hit the ground with a thump and as it had been raining the night before he started to slide and he came to some bushes and went sliding through to a cave.

He hit the back with his feet and he went into a hole. He saw something glittering and he climbed out and ran home.

He told his father and they thought they might get a wolf or a fox, and when Joey's father went in, he called to his son and said

"You have found the lost Golden Eagle mine, Joey."

Pretty soon Jake, the ranger, comes up. "'Lo, Bill. Fellow's here?"

"Yep. Having a little celebration, I reckon. They are to go after Mike the sharpshooter, tomorrow. That guy's got gall enough to escape the whole darn gang. Well, I'm going to get a drink and then I'll take a ride on my old 'Swiftfoot.' I reckon I'd better go now, Jake. So long."

"So long, Bill. Something's going to stir mighty quick. Guess I'll change my mind about going over the plains."

What was that? Look! Could he believe his eyes? Yes, there was Mike, the sharpshooter, with his horse, going [illegible].

Jake soon reached the cave.

"I've got my prisoner now I reckon," he said. "Say, Mike, do you remember me? No, don't get your pistol out. I've got my two out already. ### AT THE BOTTOM OF THE QUICKSANDS.

PART 1.

Bob and his father were out hunting one day in the woods when finally they got lost. Bob went up a tree to see if he could see the city where they lived. While Bob was up in the tree his father saw something lying on the ground so he went over to pick it up.

To his amazement he began to sink. He struggled but he kept sinking faster and faster till he was out of sight.

PART 2.

Bob didn't know what to do. His father had sunken in the quicksand—he was lost—and night coming on!

So he looked around to find shelter. Finally he found a hollow tree with a hole big enough for him to crawl into. So he stepped in, and to his amazement he began to fall!

He fell about ten feet or so and he landed on a pavement. He looked around and found he was in a paved tunnel. To his horror he heard footsteps coming along. He tried to climb up the way he fell down but it was too slippery. So he went over to a place where the wall went back, and just as he got there a man came by and to his great joy it was his father!

PART 3.

"Why, Dad, I thought you were dead! How did you come to be here?" Bob asked.

Then Bob's father said: "As soon as I was out of sight in the quicksand I struck something hard. I came down with such force that I broke in the top of this tunnel a hole just about big enough for me to fall through. Then I started to walk through the tunnel and I met you? How did you get here, son?"

Then Bob told his father how he came to be in the tunnel.

All this time while they were talking, they were walking. Finally they came to some steps that led up. They went up and up and up and up until Bob thought they would never stop.

"Finally they heard voices.

"Bring those plans over to my desk," said someone in a commanding voice.

All of a sudden they saw before them three men peeking through a hole. Luckily Bob's father still had his gun that he went hunting with. All of a sudden Bob's father said:

"Hand's up!"

It took the men with so much surprise that they gave a little jerk and it opened a panel. The men went through the panel and Bob and his father found that they were in the highest building in Washington, D. D., and they also found that these men were spies from Austria who did not want the armistice to be signed. Through this little hole in the secret panel these men could see the plans because the hole was right in back of the chief's desk.

THE WORKER FOR HUMANITY.

Not only the lives of men
Were sacrificed in the war.
Something else went over
That came back no more.
Those noble Red Cross dogs
Were sacrificed over there.
And as a helper of humanity
They did more than their share.
But we'll just take one
That fell in No Man's Land,
Died for the dying,
Died as a helping hand
Hero was his name.
His death was a shame
On the cowardly foe
Who had sworn not to shoot
Any of these mute
Animals serving the Red Cross
And upon their reputation
This deed has put no gloss
It happened on a certain day
When Hero was on his way
To the hospital of the Red Cross
Carrying a helmet to signify
That someone did lie
On the field ready to die
That a bullet killed him
By going straight through his limb
And up into his head.
There Hero lay dead
A German had seen that the helmet
[illegible]
Fearing to have him saved
He shot like a beast, not a man
If it had been a German helmet
He would have let him live,
And to help his "Kamerad"
He would some help give
But that the deed a curse
Brings on this German's head,
Although the war is over

A QUEER PET.

"Oh, Daddy, can't I have a pet?" pleaded Violet.

"No, Violet," firmly answered her father, "We cannot afford it."

"Oh," muttered Violet sadly.

Daniel Harvey lived next door. He was a nice little fellow of seven summers. Dan and Violet played together often.

The next day Violet happened to pass a garbage can with the lid half open. She spied a dead cat in it, and lifted it tenderly into her apron. When she reached home she tried in vain to bring it back to life. As all her efforts failed she got a box and placed the cat in it.

Then of course some rough fellows had to tease her about it, and finally fought.

Of course Dan came rushing to the rescue with his bee-bee gun. He chased the boys away, and in that way learned of the dead cat.

For a week after that our friend Daniel looked quite wise. The boys nicknamed him "Danny Owl."

So, one fine day he presented himself at the Meredith door, his shoes shined up, a new necktie on, and altogether he looked very clean and nice indeed. Dan had a mysterious package under his arm and that moving. Violet opened the door, and with a grand bow Master Daniel presented the package saying: "My compliments, Miss Meredith."

"Oh, you don't say," remarked Violet, and then gave a shriek of pure joy at the sight of a darling kitten cuddled down in a little basket.

"Oh, the sweetie little thing. Come here to me, pet. You darling boy where did you get him for me?" she cried in one breath.

"I save my pennies," Dan answered proudly. "And all for you."

Violet nearly kissed him, so delighted was she over the newcomer.

Happiness was for Violet, but the sorrow was for Dan. The poor motherless boy, when he got hom, his father lay on the couch, never to rise again.

"Oh, what shall I do?" cried poor Dan, in despair. The next morning Violet came running over, full of something to tell.

"My father's dead," he greeted her sadly.

"Um hum," she said absently. "You know, papa's struck oil, and we're going to buy a great big house an'—an' you're coming to live with us for ever an' after."

And so they did.

DANIEL THROP.

We've had all sorts of mystery names in the Den but the following one holds the record. There's nothing milk-chocolatey about this Pirate, even if he does sign himself as such. He's full of ginger as a puppy's tail is full of wags and here's a rousing welcome to him and his yarns.

THE MYSTERY OF THE ORIENT.

PART 1—PLANNING.

In the haunted streets of Peking the "Death Hand Pirates" held their meetings. They were planning to raid the "Overland Limited Express" which was to arrive at midnight.

PART 2—SECRET OVERHEARD.

While the meeting was being held two Chinese Boy Scouts of Peking passed, going to headquarters, and overheard voices. They stopped and listened. Wolf, the leader, was speaking.

"Five of you men shall raid the train," he said. "And in case of trouble, if any of you are captured, we'll come to the prison and file you out. Remember—at midnight sharp, boys."

PART 3—POLICE AID.

The two Boy Scouts hurried to the police. It happened that the police were hunting for a clue concerning this very gang of criminals. They sent out a squad at once, the boys leading the way. It was midnight and they were not at the station yet. What should they do?

PART 4—THE TRAIN IS LATE.

When they reached the station they found to their surprise and pleasure that the train had not yet arrived. Suddenly they heard it approaching.

PART 4—THE RAID.

The police jumped on the train and told the watchmen to hide. To the amaze of the pirates the police were there and bound them.

PART 5—IN PRISON.

They were taken to prison and sentenced to life imprisonment. The rest of the gang tried to file them out but failed and were captured and sentenced to life, too.

PART 6—THE REWARD.

The Boy Scouts were rewarded highly for their brave deed.

THE MUSHROOM TRAIL

By AUNT ELSIE.

(How it happened—Reed and Leeta Wainright, 17 and 16-year-old orphan brother and sister, have come to live with their beloved Uncle Dick Wainright and his wife, Helen, and their sixteen-year-old twin children, Thayer and Carrie ("Carrots") Wainright. The home is a happy one but far from rich. To make things [illegible] The orphan cousins long to help in some big way not only for the safe of the good things they themselves desire, but to show their love and gratitude. All four are much interested in Leeta's suggestion that they raise mushrooms in an abandoned tunnel to sell to the summer hotel. There is some mystery about this tunnel. An old Mexican says that it was originally used for raising mushrooms, but his manner is peculiar. They decide to take Leeta's suggestion—and things happen.)

CHAPTER XVIII

Another night had passed. Higher rose the sun, waves of color and light piling and spreading beneath it like the waters of the rising tide. The shadows shrank as though lapped by the thirsty heat and the fierce brightness sank deeper and more directly into the passes of the hills. Far down beneath crests or valleys or even the deepest gullies it found its way into that lost wild haunt, the bandit hut. Only at midday did the shadows leave this secret place and even then the darkness of a greater darkness than that of natural night lay upon it—the shadow of Sin.

Never had that other shadow seemed blacker than this noon when the golden light flooded its every cranny. Between the cliffs the waters babbled and raced in a tumble of silver—along the foaming edges the tangle of greenness was freshly sweet. Yet the hawk mates that hung in the vault of the sunny sky could have told the world that all was not well in that hidden place below. Strange things they had seen with the coming of the morning—stranger things as the hours passed. Spurts of smoke from the face of the cliff, evil shouts of derision as bandits' eyes searched the shadows of the shrubbery for their miserable prey, and a movement in that shrubbery that told of growing wretchedness and fear, and finally, of awful tragedy.

How long had they lain there in hiding? Neither Leeta nor Reed knew. They were so weak from hunger and terror that their brains seemed numbed. One thought only possessed them. Up there, lurking in the cliffs, death planned and waited—and soon must claim them. Shots had fallen all about their hiding place, shots accompanied by drunken brawlings which gave the reason for their aimless aim. Sooner or later one of those shots must find them out and then—

For a long time they had not spoken. It was hours since they had talked of their possible rescue or dwelt anxiously on the danger which Carrots and Thayer were facing. At first the excitement had buoyed them up. Through the long hours of the preceding day they had searched the sky with eager eyes, praying for the coming of the airplane that alone could save their lives. But they had at last lost hope. Carrots and Thayer were dead. They were sure of it now. Only the hawks sailed in the sky above, the cruel hawks that had seen so many living things die in these desolate hills and that were soon to see two more struggle in the last agonies. They did not care. Their eyes were bright, but not with the brightness of hope [illegible] fever of starvation, and terrible weariness.

Suddenly, with swift viciousness, a bullet sang through the air and hit at the rocky walls behind them. Another—and yet another! They were coming nearer now. Someone, not as drunk as the rest, had spied them under their scanty covering of bushes, and was searching them out. A fourth bullet and a [illegible] from Reed told of the bandit's success. Convulsively he sat up, tossed his arms upward in a wild struggle, then fell senseless.

For an instant Leeta felt as if the bullet had gone through her own heart. Then her spirit rose for a last stand. Cautiously she dragged herself to his side and turned him over. Blood was seeping through his clothes, gathering in dark blots all over his left arm and shoulder, clotting over his breast. She tore open his coat frantically. It was not the heart, as she had feared. The upper arm was pierced by a ghastly hole and the blood was pouring from it in great spurts. Instantly all the training of her hours with the Camp Fire Girls came back to her. Hastily improvising a tourniquet from a scrap of her torn clothing and a stick, she bound the arm firmly and within a few moments sighed with relief as the bloody tide ceased.

The bullets were still singing overhead. There was not a second to be lost if she would still have his life. Beside them, near the wall of the cliff, lay slightly thicker covering of bushes and dwarfed trees. Perhaps by pulling Reed into that shade she could postpone death for a few hours. With renewed activity her hope came back again. Only the hawk mates hung in the sky, but even now a greater winged power might be speeding to them through blue space. Weakly she began to tug at Reed's unconscious form. Bit by bit she dragged him nearer and nearer to the wall, keeping well in the shade of the bushes, stopping often to gasp from exhaustion. He was so white and still. Could he be dead? Again and again she laid her head on his heart and caught that faint flutter that meant that Reed still lived.

Suddenly, as she crawled backward, dragging him toward her, she gave a smothered cry of alarm. Something had given way beneath her knees. She scrambled desperately, clutched at the roots and branches before her, and fell forward, her face in the smother of dust and grass, her feet swinging helpless over sudden vacancy. What new horror was this? With the last of her failing strength she drew herself up and out of the hole and turned to see what had happened. There, where a minute before had been a mat of turf, yawned a black pit! From its edge dangled the rotted remains of a trap door, and down into its recesses dipped a flight of stairs, moldy from long disuse. She peered over. The flight of stairs were short. The direct rays of the sun fell upon the bottom of the pit, revealing a cave which stretched beyond her vision. As she looked her whole figure tightened with surprise and again she cried out—this time in amazement and delight. A glory greater than that of the sunlight lay upon the floor—piled in mounds or spilling in pools of glowing wonder. Again and again she rubbed her dazed eyes but always the miracle remained. Beneath her, touched by the sun's rays for the first time in scores of years, lay THE LONG LOST PIRATE GOLD! Not even the bandits in the cliff above knew of this stored wealth. The secret of the lesser treasures had been theirs, but this was the cache of the Pirate Kings, and with their death it had been lost. Now, seeking a last refuge from destruction, Leeta had chanced upon it.

Reed's safety was of greater import now than a thousand treasure stores. With her heart pounding with excitement she dragged him down into the cave and with trembling hands braced the rotten trap door back into place.

At the same instant hideous yells burst from the cliff. The bandits had at last decided to attack and were swarming down from their lair by a hidden [illegible]. With a yell the leader set foot to earth and in an instant the gully was filled with a yelling horde as they raced toward the tangle of greenery, their knives drawn, the madness of fiends upon their wicked faces. In another moment they would have surrounded the hiding place and the two who cowered beneath would [illegible].

Suddenly there was another scream, but not from human throats, nor did the bandits hear it as they swarmed onward. Far, far above the hawk mates wheeled in their flight, cried out in shrill alarm and turned and fled!

FLOYD R. GRAY

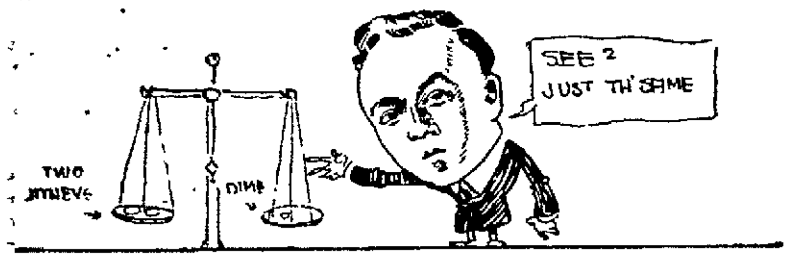
There are same flaws and failings, the investigators find, in God's great masterpieces, the celebrated human mind. On things which might be obvious no two of them agree. Your slant and view looks good to you and mine seems good to me. We have to have some standards which the two of us respect, to rectify the failings of our so-called intellect.

It settles many sources of disruption and debate to have accepted standards for the measurement of weight. They act as judge and jury to the fraction of a grain and far outrank the senses of the human hand or brain; and problems where the gifts of man are void of all avail are solved to swift perfection by a safe and simple scale.



TWO ....
DIME
JUST TH' SAME

Floyd Gray's the man who sells the scales which accurately weigh a jewel rare, a piece of hair or twenty tons of hay. He has the scales which instantly compute both weight and price and give their happy owner high class merchantile advice. They tell you how to run the store and regulate your life, collect your bills, correct your ills and mollify your wife.

He heads the board of public schools where weighty questions rise, the source of popular disputes which often split the skies; but his decisions are not left to guesswork rough and rude, for he's emancipated from such methods raw and crude. The problems tough as hickory or hard as hammered nails he nonchalantly goes and solves on his computing scales.

FRED E. REED

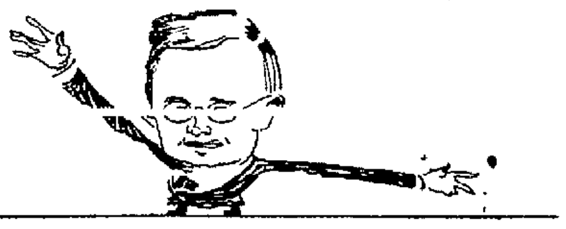
The language which the human race invented for its use is practical as buckwheat cakes and handy as the deuce. Upon a bare embarrassed fact it lays a color scheme which makes it as delightful as a poppy-smoker's dream. It drapes the wildest fiction in the most domestic mode, at which the sanest truths turn out and give it all the road.

But sundry sober citizens can never train the face to make the best advantage from this blessing of the race. They get their tongues all tangled up, their gestures are a bore, they wish that they could save themselves by falling through the floor. They can't recall the subject and they can't recall their lines, nor can they do a creditable stunt of making signs.



But we should state in earnest words, with frank, wide-open eyes, that Fred E. Reed is not among this gang of speechless guys. We give a little credit to Demosthenes, the Greek, because of the convincingness with which he used to speak. The jury disagreed the time Demosthenes was tried; they might have found him guilty with Fred on the other side.

He boosts "My-City-Oakland" with his phrases rich and rare and treats the town with tender and proprietary air. He dickers in its real estate and praises it on high and tries to train some more of it to answer to his "my." Which is, you readily agree, a laudable pursuit and proves possession of a head reflective and acute.

FRED SUELBERGER

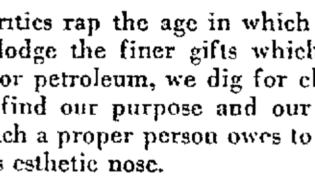
Our pampered critics rap the age in which they move and live; they say we dodge the finer gifts which nature has to give. We struggle for petroleum, we dig for clay and coal: in things material we find our purpose and our goal, while we neglect the duty which a proper person owes to his refined and cultured eye and his esthetic nose.



IS TH' MAYOR IN ?

It's true we're stronger for the fruit than for the fluffy bloom, for such is man's unkindly fate and his unhappy doom. He cannot, like the honey bee, grow fat on daisy juice. He has to hustle fervently for things of solid use. But now and then a citizen of Fred Seulberger's brand can turn to cultivating flowers his fine and frisky hand.

As county horticulturist progressive and acute, he diagnoses every ill which visits flower or fruit. He talks with walking delegates of union bugs or worms; he sees the representatives of all the leading germs, arranges armistices with the armies of the ants and fixes terms and treaties with all enemies of plants.

As city florist he provides with proper pains and cares the fresh and fine carnation which our polished mayor wears, a heavy undertaking which requires, as you suspect, the full cooperation of his high class intellect; for he who decorates the decoration of the town has quite a job—it takes some sense and size to hold it down.

HOWARD F. SCHAEFER

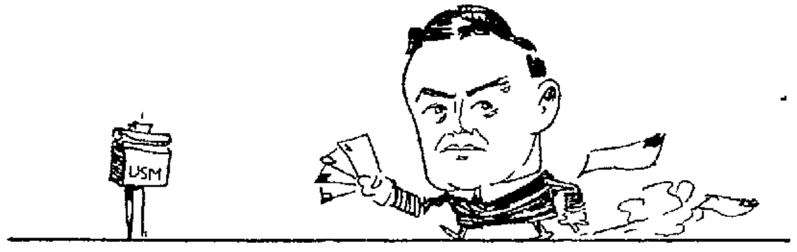
The world is full of very large and luminous events, of sundry solemn happenings portentous and immense. A flock of kings have lost their thrones and had to hit the pike: a careless mouse who strayed from home was captured by a shrike; this land of freemen strong and brave now lets the ladies vote: the frost has killed a katydid, another fact of note.

"The League of Nations shall not pass!" the Senate sternly states. In amativeness undisturbed the marsh frogs woo their mates. The blood of men prepares the road for liberty's advance. A tribe of ants goes out to war, enslaving other ants. A famous man is sick abed, the doctors say he'll die. The paper on the kitchen shelf has caught another fly.



Amid this maze and whirl of things the banner and the prize is his who can concentrate on the point, can specialize; who sees the task before his hand and thrusts all else aside, who seeks the middle of the road with throttle open wide and swears that he will reach his goal of purpose and desire or break an axle, sprain a spring or melt a tube and tire.

That's Howard Schaefer, secretary of the Rotary, to duty and ambition an unswerving votary. When their attendance leads the world's proportion and percent, he hits his aim and wins his game and goes to sleep content. The world pursues its giddy end with enterprise and vim, but getting members to attend is what appeals to him.

H. C. CAPWELL

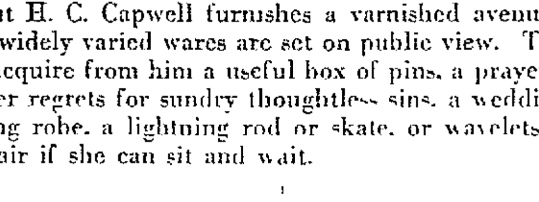
The captains of the industries are busy in their shops. They manufacture phonographs and petticoats and tops and waffle irons and ouija boards and overcoats and beds and lids for full and busy pots and idle, empty heads. The distribution of the stuff they rattle from their mills is quite beyond their talents, gifts, capacities and skills.

But H. C. Capwell furnishes a varnished avenue in which their widely varied wares are set on public view. The shopper may acquire from him a useful box of pins, a prayer-book stating her regrets for sundry thoughtless sins, a wedding gown, a bathing robe, a lightning rod or skate, or wavelets toasted in her hair if she can sit and wait.



His motto is "Keep moving" and he acts upon the phrase for many useful purposes in many useful ways. He started his impressive shop in unimpressive style, accumulating rapidly his large and giddy pile, and now he owns a building which would loom as rather tall except that it is nested underneath the city hall.

For Capwell clings to civic pride and helps to run the town lest men of lesser competence unwisely run it down. His store could hardly hope to thrive if Oakland wandered hence, and so he gives attention to the city's why and whence. The goods that crowd his gilded shop may cost you quite a pile, but sound advice he'll give you for a hand-shake and a smile.

Senor Espirition, of the office of the Minister of Finance, attempted the sandbagging

It has been indicated that disaffection followed the elevation of Losada to the presidency. This feeling continued to grow. Throughout the entire republic there seemed to be a spirit of silent, sullen discontent. Even the old Liberal party to which Goodwin, Zavalla and other patriots had lent their aid was disappointed. Losada had failed to become a popular idol. Fresh taxes, fresh import duties, and more than all, his tolerance of the outrageous oppression of sitizens by the military had rendered him the most obnoxious president since the despicable Alforan. The majority of his own cabinet were out of sympathy with him. The army, which he had courted by giving it license to tryannize, had been his main, and thus far adequate support.

But the most unpolitic of the administration's moves had been when it antagonized the Vesuvius Fruit Company, an organization plying twelve steamers with a cash capital somewhat larger than Anchuria's surplus and debt combined.

Reasonably an established concern like the Vesuvius would become irritated at having a small, retail republic with a rating at all attempt to squeeze it So when the government proxies applied for a subsidy they encountered a polite refusal. The president at once retaliated by clapping an export duty of one real per bunch of bananas—a thing unprecedented in fruit-growing countries The Vesuvius Company had invested large sums in wharves and plantations along the Anchuria coast, their agents had erected fine homes in the towns where they had their headquarters, and heretofore had worked with the republic in good-will and with advantage to both. It would lose an immense sum if compelled to move out The selling price of bananas from Vera Cruz to Trinidad was three reals per bunch. This new duty of one real would have ruined the fruit growers in Anchuria and have seriousuly discommoded the Vesuvius Company had it declined to pay it But for some reason, the Vesuvius continued to buy Anchuria fruit, paying four reals for it, and not suffering the growers to bear the loss.

This apparent victory deceived His Excellency and he began to hunger for more of it He sent an emissary to request a conference with a representative of the fruit company. The Vesuvius sent Mr Franzoni, a little, stout, cheerful man, always cool and whistling airs from Verdi's operas. Senor Espirition of the office of the Minister of Finance, attempted the sandbagging in behalf of Anchuria. The meeting took place in the cabin of the "Salvador," of the Vesuvius line

Senor Espirition opened negotiations by announcing that the government contemplated the building of a railroad to skirt the alluvial coast lands After touching upon the benefits suc ha road would confer upon the interests of the Vesuvius, he reached the definite suggestion that a contribution to the road's expenses of say, fifty thousand pesos would not be more than an equivalent to benefits received.

Mr Franzoni denied that his company would receive any benefits from a contemplated road As its representative he must decline to contribute fifty thousand pesos But he would assume the responsibility of offering twenty-five

Did Senor Espirition understand Senor Francini to mean twenty-five thousand pesos?

By no means Twenty-five pesos And in silver; not in gold

"Your offer insults my government" cried Senor Espirition, rising with indignation

"Then," said Mr. Franzoni, in warning tone "we will change it"

The offer was never changed Could Mr Franzoni have meant the government?

This was the state of affairs in Anchuria when the winter season opened at Coralio at the end of the second year of Losado's administration So, whe nthe government and society made its annual exodus to the seashore it was evident that the presidential advent would not be celebrated by unlimited rejoicing The tenth of November was the day set for the entrance into Coralio of the gay company from the capital A narrow-gauge railroad runs twenty miles into the interior from Solitas. The government party travels by carriage from San Mateo to this road's terminal point, and proceeds by train to Solitas. From here they march in grand procession to Coralio where, on the day of their coming, festivities and ceremonies abound But this season saw an ominous dawning of the tenth of November

Although the rainy season was over, the day seemed to hark back to reeking June A fine drizzle of rain fell all during the forenoon The procession entered Coralio amid a strange silence

President Losado was an elderly man, [illegible] considerable ratio of Indian blood revealed in his cinnamon complexion His carriage headed the procession surrounded and guarded by Captain Cruz and his famous troop of one hundred light horse "El Ciento Hullando." Colonel Rocas followed, with a regiment of the regular army.

The president's sharp, beady eyes glanced about him for the expected demonstration of welcome; but he faced a stolid, indifferent array of citizens. Sightseers, the Anchurians are by birth and habit, and they turned out to their last able-bodied unit to witness the scene; but they maintained an accusive silence. They crowded the streets to the very wheel ruts; they covered the red tile roofs to the eaves, but there was never a "viva" for them. No wreaths of palm and lemon branches or gorgeous strings of paper roses hung from the windows and balconies as was the custom. There was apathy, a dull, dissenting disapprobation, that was the more ominous because it puzzled. No one feared an outburst, a revolt of the discontents, for they had no leader. The president and those loyal to him had never even heard whispered a name among them capable of crystallizing the dissatisfaction into opposition No, there could be no danger The people always procured a new idol before they destroyed an old one.

At length, after a prodigious galloping and curveting of red-sashed majors, gold-laced colonels and epauletted generals the procession formed for its annuel progress down the Calle Grande to the Casa Morena, where the ceremony of welcome to the visiting president always took place

The Swiss band led the line of march After it pranced the local comandante, mounted, and a detachment of his troops. Next came a carriage with four members of the cabinet, conspicuous among them the Minister of War, old General Pilar, with his white moustache and his soldierly bearing Then the president's vehicle, containing also the Ministers of Finance and State, and surrounded by Captain Cruz's light horse formed in a close double file of fours. Following them, the rest of the officials of state, the judges and distinguished military and social ornaments of public and private life

As the band struck up, and the movement began like a bird of ill-owen the "Valhalla," the swiftest steamship of the Vesuvius line, glided into the harbor in plain view of the president and his train Of course, there was nothing menacing about its arrival—a business firm does not go to war with a nation—but it reminded Senor Espirition and others in those carriages that the Vesuvius Fruit Company was undoubtedly carrying something up its sleeve for them

By the time the van of the procession had reached the government building Captain Cronin, of the "Valhalla," and Mr Vicenti member of the Vesuvius Company, had landed and were pushing their way, bluff, hearty and nonchalant, through the crowd [illegible]. Clad in white linen, big, debonair, with an air of good-humored authority, they made conspicuous figures among the dark mass of unimposing Anchurians, as they penetrated to within a few yards of the steps of the Casa Morena. Looking easily above the heads of the crowd, they perceived another that towered above the undersized natives. It was the fiery poll of Dicky Maloney against the wall close by the lower step; and his broad, seductive grin showed that he recognized their presence.

Dicky had attired himself becomingly for the festive occasion in a well-fitting black suit. Pasa was close by his side, her head covered with the ubiquitious black mantilla.

Mr. Vincenti looked at her attentively.

"Botticelli's Madonna," he remarked, gravely "I wonder when she got into the game. I don't like his getting tangled with the women. I hoped he would keep away from them"

Captain Cronin's laugh almost drew attention from the parade

"With that head of hair! Keep away from the women! And a Maloney! Hasn't he got a license? But, nonsense aside, what do you think of the prospects? It's a species of filibustering out of my line"

Vincenti glanced again at Dicky's head and smiled.

"Rouge et noir," he said. "There you have it. Make your play, gentlemen Our money is on the red"

"The lad's game," said Cronin, with a commendable look at the tall, easy figure by the steps "But 'tis all like fly-by-night theatricals to me. The talk's bigger than the stage, there's a smell of gasoline in the air, and they're their own audience and scene-shifters"

They ceased talking for General Pilar had descended from the first carriage and had taken his stand upon the top step of Casa Morena As the oldest member of the cabinet, custom had decreed that he should make the address of welcome, presenting the keys of the official residence to the president at its close.

General Pilar was one of the most distinguished citizens of the republic. Hero of three wars and innumerable revolutions, he was an honored guest at European courts and camps. An eloquent speaker and a friend to the people, he represented the highest type of the Anchurians

Holding in his hand the gilt keys of Casa Morena, he began his address in a historical form, touching upon each administration and the advance of civilization and prosperity from the first dim striving after liberty down to present times Arriving at the regime of President Losada, at which point, according to precedent, he should have delivered a eulogy upon its wise conduct and the happiness of the people, General Pilar paused Then he silently held up the bunch of keys high above his head, with his eyes closely regarding it. The ribbon with which they were bound fluttered in the breeze

"It still blows" cried the speaker, exultantly "Citizens of Anchuria, give thanks to the [illegible] that our air is still free."

Thus disposing of Losada's administration, he abruptly reverted to that of Olivarra, Anchuria's most popular ruler. Olivarra had been assassinated nine years before while in the prime of life and usefulness. A faction of the Liberal party led by Losada himself had been accused of the deed. Whether guilty or not, it was eight years before the ambitious and scheming Losada had gained his goal.

Upon this theme General Pilar's eloquence was loosed He drew the picture of the beneficent Olivarra with a loving hand. He reminded the people of the peace, the security and the happiness they had enjoyed during that period. He recalled in vivid detail and with [illegible] contrast the last winter sojourn of President Olivarra in Coralio, when his appearance at their fiestas was the signal for thundering vivas of love and approbatioin.

The first public expression of sentiment from the people that day followed. A low, sustained murmur went among them like the surf rolling along the shore.

"Ten dollars to a dinner at the Saint Charles" remarked Mr. Vicenti, "that rouge wins."

"I never bet against my own interests," said Captain Cronin, lighting a cigar "Long-winded old boy, for his age. What's he talking about?"

"My Spanish," replied Vicenti, "runs about ten words to the minute; his is something around two hundred. Whatever he's saying, he's getting them warmed up"

"Friends and brothers," General Pilar was saying "could I reach out my hand this day across the lamentable silence of the grave of Olivarra 'the Good,' to the ruler who was one of you, whose tears fell when you sorrowed, and whose smile followed your joy—I would bring him back to you, but—Olivarra is dead—dead at the hands of a craven assassin!"

The speaker turned and gazed boldly into the carriage of the president His arm remained extended aloft as if to sustain his peroration. The president was listening, aghast, at this remarkable address of welcome He was sunk back upon his seat trembling with rage and dumb surprise, his dark hands tightly gripping the carriage cushions

Half rising, he extended one arm toward the speaker, and shouted a harsh command at Captain Cruz. The leader of the "Flying Hundred" sat his horse, immovable, with folded arms, giving no sign of having heard. Losada sank back again, his dark features distinctly paling.

"Who says that Olivarra is dead?" suddenly cried the speaker, his voice, old as he was, sounding like a battle trumpet "His body lies in the grave, but to the people he loved he has bequeathed his spirit—yes, more—his learning, his kindness—yes, more—his youth, his image—people of Anchuria have you forgotten Ramon, the son of Olivarra?"

Cronin and Vicenti, watching closely, saw Dicky Maloney suddenly raise his hat, tear off his shock of red hair, leap up the steps and stand at the side of General Pilar. The Minister of War laid his arm across the young man's shoulders All who had known President Olivarra saw again his same lion-like pose, the

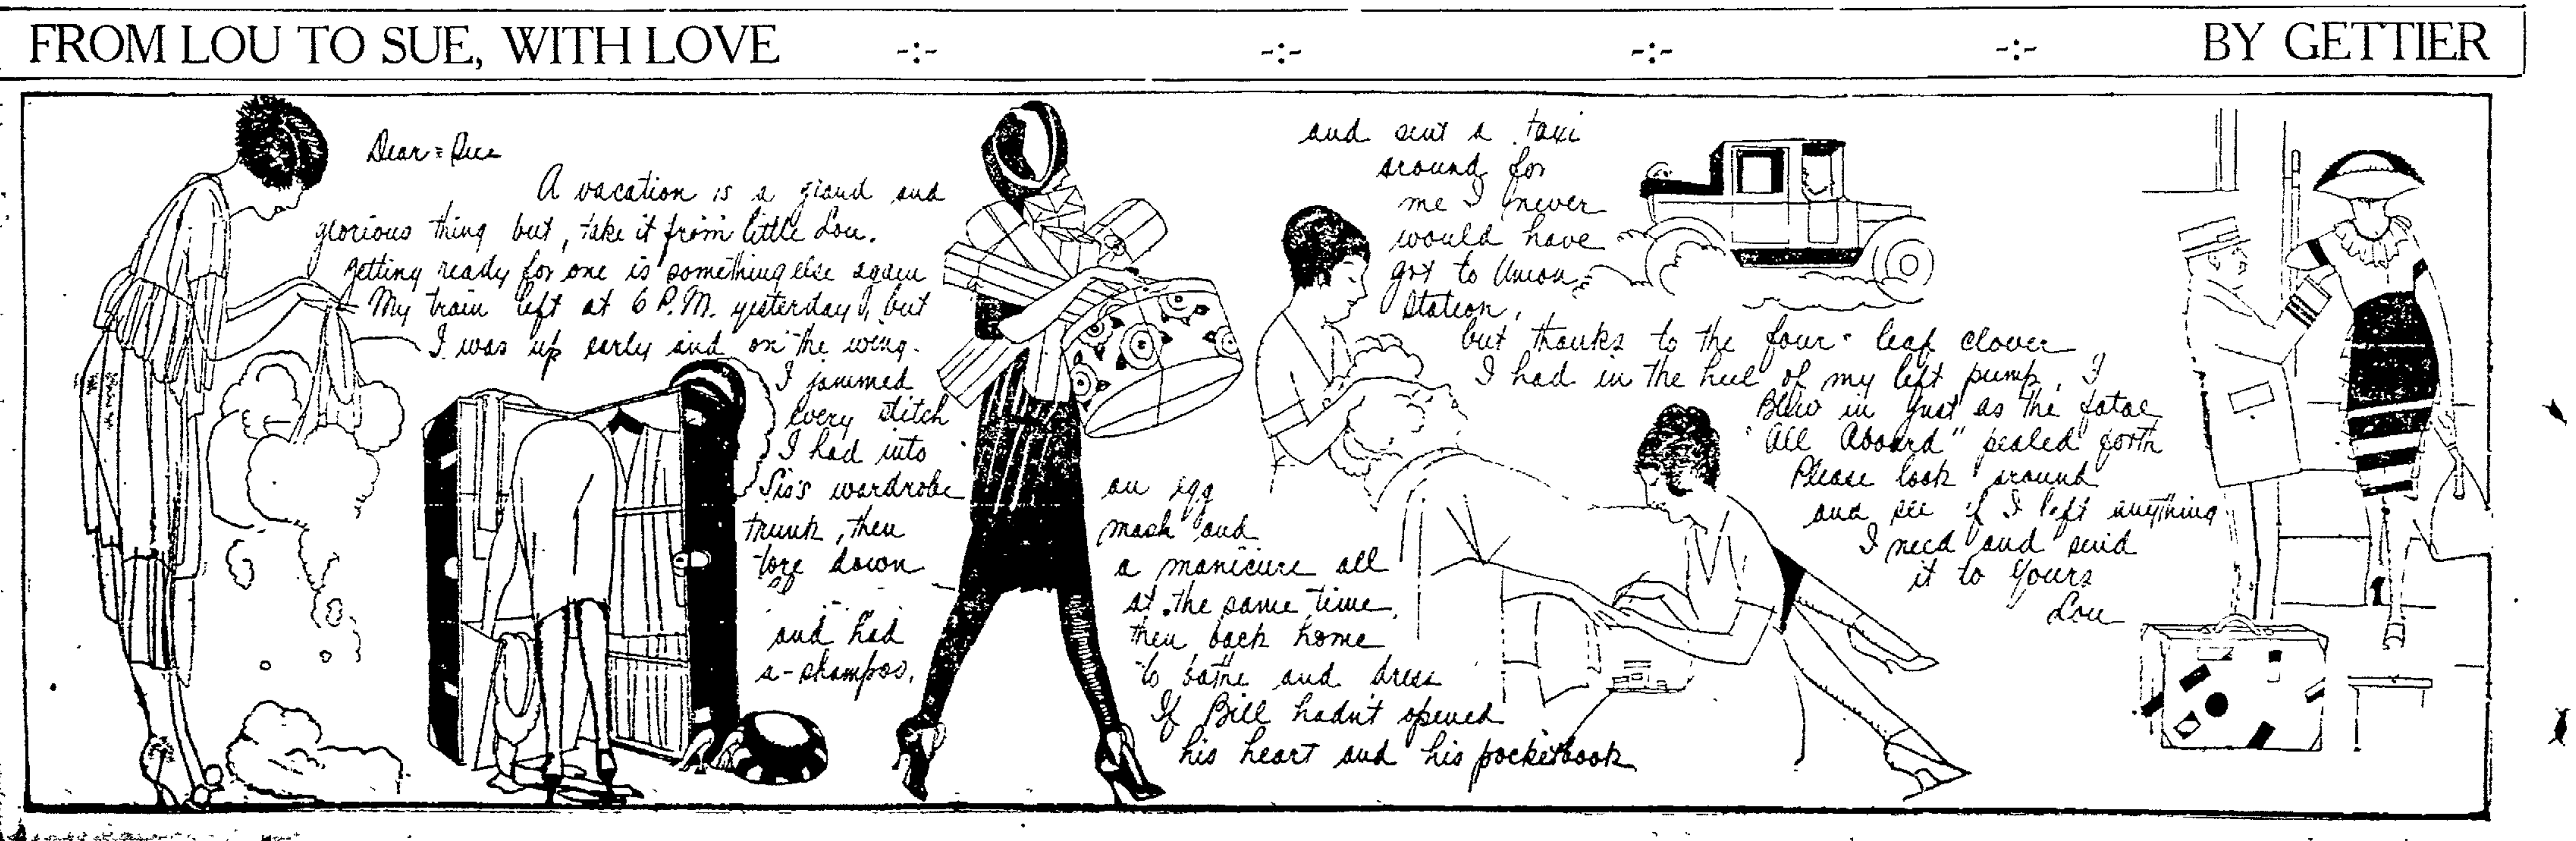
FROM LOU TO SUE, WITH LOVE -:- -:- -:- -:- BY GETTIER



Dear Sue
A vacation is a grand and glorious thing but, take it from little Lou, getting ready for one is something else again My train left at 6 P.M. yesterday, but I was up early and on the wing.
I jammed every stitch I had into Sis's wardrobe trunk, then tore down and had a shampoo, an egg mash and a manicure all at the same time, then back home to bathe and dress If Bill hadn't opened his heart and his pocketbook and sent a taxi around for me I never would have got to Union Station, but thanks to the four-leaf clover I had in the heel of my left pump, I blew in just as the fatal "All Aboard" pealed forth Please look around and see if I left anything I need and send it to Yours

"Charles E. Chapin's Story"

Autobiography of Famous City Editor of New York Newspaper Who Is Serving Life Sentence for Murder of Wife Is Striking Human Document—Many Well-Known Figures Walk Through Its Pages.

"Charles E. Chapin's Story" is a striking human document. It is an autobiography of a newspaper man who served in the profession for forty years and is now an inmate of Sing Sing prison, where he is serving a life sentence for the murder of his wife. The following paragraph from the report of a commission which passed upon his sanity succinctly tells the story of the crime:

"The defendant was indicted on September 18, 1918, for murder in the first degree, in that he had killed his wife, Nellie, with a pistol, by shooting her in the head. At the time of the killing defendant was and for several years prior thereto had been the city editor of the New York Evening World. He is 60 years of age. He and his wife whom he killed had been married for thirty-nine years, and the uncontradicted testimony is to the effect that their relations had been singularly devoted."

In the last few chapters of this most interesting book the author tells of the tragedy, and in so doing bares his soul. The impression upon the reader is that Chapin, at the time he committed the act, was mentally unbalanced, although he refused to make this plea before the courts. Yearning for luxuries beyond his means, he began to dabble in stocks with disastrous results. Here is a quotation from his own story:

"I sought to safeguard the account with my brokers by depositing with them all of the securities I possessed, together with securities which were not mine, but of which I was the legal custodian. * * * Then came days and nights of abject terror. The ring of my telephone would often startle me so that my heart would almost stop beating and the mere sight of a policeman in the street would cause me to tremble and hasten my pace and perhaps dodge around a corner or into some hallway. Often when I went to the World office in the early morning I felt certain that the policeman near the entrance was waiting for me with a warrant, and my heart would thump wildly against my ribs until I had passed him and was at my desk."

The day for settlement finally came and Chapin did not have the bonds. He decided to make way with himself. A pistol was obtained from Police Commissioner Waldo of New York, who, of course, had no suspicion of the use for which it was intended. A police officer taught the would-be suicide how to use it. Then came the preparations which the author vividly describes.

"That evening I destroyed all of my personal papers at the office and left a note to the effect that I was unexpectedly called out of town. At midnight I left for Washington, accompanied by my wife, who knew nothing of my difficulties. * * * On the train I tore up my bank books and all private papers that were in my pockets. I never would see New York again, for I was going away to die, to die like a coward and leave her to bear all the poverty and disgrace that was sure to follow. I cried all night, sickened with the thought of it."

Contracting a cold in the sleeper Chapin came down with the grippe, accompanied by a fever, which lasted several weeks. The first day he was able to get out he went to the cemetery where his mother was buried and bought the plot adjoining hers. Up to this time he had thought only of ending his own life. He had reason to believe that his wife would be cared for by relatives, but upon inquiry he found that there was little disposition on their part to assume the burden. His state of mind when this situation was presented is best told by himself.

"The problem now confronting me was what was to become of her. She was so fragile and delicate it was impossible that she could ever do for herself. She had no relatives to turn to."

While in Washington, where the deed was to be committed, Chapin visited President Wilson with other newspaper correspondents. No one knew of the strain under which he was laboring. Evidently his nerve failed him and he returned to New York, sought the counsel of a lawyer friend, who came to his rescue. That friend is now a judge in the New York courts where Chapin placed him.

In the meantime speculation again became a mania. "Unlike the burned child who dreads the fire," declares Chapin, "I didn't keep away from the flames that scorched and almost consumed me." As he gradually became hopelessly enmeshed his thoughts again reverted to his wife and the position in which she would be finally placed. While walking with her one day a little old woman in a faded black dress, her face pinched with suffering and privation, stretched out a trembling hand to Chapin and he dropped a coin in it. "Oh, God!" exclaimed his wife, "I wonder if I will ever come to that." This incident haunted the half-crazed man.

After four years the inevitable crash came. "My wife never knew," declares Chapin, "that the man she loved killed her. She died while peacefully asleep. That is all the consolation I shall ever have."

After the murder Chapin rode all day and night on elevated trains and in the subways. He declared he had no sensation of thirst or hunger. "I just rode on and on like a dead man might." In the morning he saw a black headline in a paper, "Charles Chapin Wanted for Murder." He thus describes his sensations:

"Then it all came back. I wasn't dead; I was alive and wanted by the police for murder! How many headlines like that I had written in my forty years as a newspaper man! And now it was me who was wanted for murder. I got off the train at the next stop and made for the nearest police station."

The chapters above quoted are sordid. This is not true of the remainder of the book, which is the story of the early struggles and steady rise of a brilliant newspaper man. Chapin really won his reputation while on the Chicago Tribune. At 25 he was city editor of the Chicago Times, which was a great paper in those days, later wrecked by incompetent management and finally absorbed by the Herald, as was also the Inter-Ocean and all since merged with the Hearst publication. It was Chapin who discovered Irvin Cobb. The chapter on the Pulitzers is one of the most interesting. How, as a reporter, he once scooped Melville Stone is one of the many incidents related.

The book has created a sensation and is without doubt one of the most unusual autobiographies ever issued.

WAR WORKER WRITES OF LITTLE HEROES

Kathleen Burke, well known to many Californians through her Red Cross work, has written a number of short stories dealing with little heroes and heroines of France whose deeds should be an inspiration to children in all countries. Miss Burke served with the British Red Cross during the war and was particularly active in refugee work. The stories tell of twelve deeds of heroism performed by French children, sometimes at the sacrifice of their lives, most of the incidents coming under the personal observation of the author. One of the stories, that of the Denisot children, was found in the diary of a German soldier. Miss Burke was one of the most effective speakers during the war period, crossing the Atlantic eighteen times and addressing vast audiences in all sections of the United States. There is an introduction by Alfred Holman of San Francisco and the illustrations are the work of Paul Verrees.

ON HAMSTEAD HEATH

Beneath the sunlight and blue of all-but Autumn
The grass sleeps goldenly: woodland and distant hill
Shine through the gauzy air in a dust of golden pollen,
And even the glittering leaves are almost still.

Scattered on the grass,like a ragman's bundles carelessly dropped,
Men sleep outstretched or, sprawling, bask in the sun;
Here glows a woman's bright dress and here a child is sitting,
And I lie down and am one of the sleepers, one

Like the rest of this tumbled crowd. Do they all, I wonder,
Feel anguish grow with the calm day's slow decline,
Longing, as I, for a shattering wind, a passion
Of bodily pain to be the soul's anodyne?

—(From "Leda," by Aldous Huxley George H. Doran Company.)

"Yellow Soap," by Katherine Taylor

"Yellow Soap" as a title for a book does not sound very interesting. Yet such a title has been affixed to the story of a boy who grows up out of an atmosphere of yellow laundry soap to a place of power and social position. As a story of accomplishment, brought about by hard work, wherein one battle after another is won over difficult ground, "Yellow Soap" is truly an interesting tale, and the title begins to mean something to the reader after the first chapter.

Through adventures with "knights of the road" and other strange and whimsical characters, which the hero of the story seems to fall in with at every turn and upon the broad highways of life, by which he acquires strength and experience, to a place of power and pleasure and social position, he develops into a character such as one can not lose sight of through the unexpected turns and surprises in the story.

Burton and Edgar J. Goodspeed.

New editions and new impressions announced include those of "An Introduction to the Peace Treaties," by Arthur Pearson Scott; "A manual of Style," by the staff of the University of Chicago Press; and "Essays in Experimental Logic," by John Dewey.

"SCHOOLING OF THE IMMIGRANT"

A work that is well executed and noteworthy for its scientific treatment, basis of research and thorough intent is "Schooling of the Immigrant," by Frank V. Thompson, superintendent of public schools in Boston. It is not merely an argument that the immigrant should be schooled and trained in Americanism, but is an explanation of the problems and policies. It tells of methods being pursued and of what is being done in the United States, various sections being considered separately.

The book is the first of eleven studies of Americanization which aim to establish a common viewpoint—social, political, industrial, etc.—between the native and immigrant populations and in the interest of a national unity. Here for the first time is a survey of the small accomplishment compared to the patriotic fervor in immigrant education. The whole trend of legislation since the national awakening is critically examined and suggestions are made to reorganize the work as a whole—locally, by states and nationally. The book is one for every one interested in immigrants and education and is an essential one for teachers and educators everywhere.

HARRY A. FRANCK

Harry A. Franck, whose "Roaming Through the West Indies" is about to appear under imprint of the Century Company, has just returned to New York after burying himself for some time in the Canadian wilds with Professor E. A. Ross of the University of Michigan. Mr. Franck looks much benefited by his outing and is eager to begin work on a new book to be entitled "Working My Way North." The "prince of vagabonds" collected material for this volume while on a four years' walking trip through South America. He was about to put it in shape for publication when the United States joined the allies in the world war. Mr. Franck, with characteristic promptness, at once dropped everything, went to Plattsburg and soon was on his way to France where he served with distinction till after the armistice. Now that he has come home, roamed a while in southern waters and camped in the Great North Woods, he thinks it is high time to set his house in order. As every Franck "fan" remembers, the author described his experiences tramping down the backbone of the southern continent in that remarkable book, "Vagabonding Down the Andes." The new volume, it is understood, will take up the tale at the point where the intrepid hiker reached Patagonia and relate in Franck fashion the joys and sorrows of the road as he wended his way up the east coast. And of course it will all be illustrated by the author's own photographs.

LORADO TAFT

Lorado Taft's new book on "Modern Tendencies in Sculpture" is announced as in preparation by the University of Chicago Press.

"In Morocco"

Edith Wharton Sees Dream Come True with Visit to Land of Color and Romance—Love for Task Gives Added Charm to Literary Graces of Famous Novelist.

Edith Wharton has found that the dream of Morocco, held by her for many years, is surpassed in the reality. She visited the place during the war and saw it in the last phase of a curiously abrupt transition from remoteness and danger to security and accessibility. She saw it when its aspects and customs were still almost unaffected by European influences and "when the 'Christian' might taste the transient joy of wandering unmolested in cities of ancient mystery and hostility, whose inhabitants seemed hardly aware of his intrusion."

Of market places, mosques and cathedrals, old gates and Berber women, fanaticism and rites, Mrs. Wharton tells with all of that literary charm that has made her famous. She writes with a poetic feeling, with a love of her subject and a holiday enjoyance.

"Dawn is the romantic hour in Africa. Dirt and dilapidation disappear under a pearly haze and a breeze from the sea blows away the memory of fetid markets and sordid heaps of humanity. At that hour the old Moroccan cities look like the ivory citadels in a Persian miniature, and the fat shopkeepers riding out of their vegetable gardens like princes sallying forth to rescue captive maidens."

It will be seen that the color and the romance of the picture holds high appeal to this writer, who enjoyed an unusual opportunity to see Morocco in its by-ways and well-worn paths. She talked to the villagers and farmers, sat in at their festivals and shopped at their little stores. Of their customs, beliefs, morals and ambitions she learned and enough of history is given to supply the requisite foundation.

One carries a picture of swarthy musicians, the throb of drums and of white-clad youths dancing on the housetops against a gold of sunset, of dark and fierce men, mud lanes roofed with rushes, of filth and of finery and renders thanks to an accomplished guide who directs his journey.

Mrs. Wharton's visits to a number of harems and her observations are among the most interesting of her chapters. A redeeming point, she found, was the tenderness with which the Moroccan father regards his children.

"It is in fact charming to see the heavy eyes of the Moroccan father light up when a grass-hopper baby jumps on his knee and the unfeigned tenderness with which the childless women of the harem caress the babies of their happier rivals. But the sentimentalist moved by this display of family feeling would do well to consider the lives of these much-petted children. Ignorance, unhealthiness and a precocious sexual initiation prevail in all classes." A sketch of Moroccan history and a detailed account of General Lyautey's work there is included in the work.

A large number of remarkable photographs quite in keeping with the spirit of the text add materially to the value of the book.

FLOOD TIDE.

Life went whistling a catch, between the plum and the cherry
Rolling a blossom of pink-like almonds under his tongue,
Looked at us all as we grew and made exceeding merry,
"Lord! how I'll dibble and prune, when you aren't so beautifully young!"

There was moon like a spilling of milky sap from the sky.
And the tree of the sky was a candle of creamy flame,
Each white-fire leaf of a star distinct; and old wind went by Hooded in dark and ashamed as it whispered some muttering
We were huddled up in the launch like a sleepy parcel of birds,
The plunging silence engulfed us. We heard as if we had died
The throb of the engine's heart erase our tiptoeing words,
And the slow, mysterious mouth of the water against the side.

—Stephen Vincent Benet in the October Yale Review.

"Prologue"

Pampered Daughter of New York Woman Is Taken Through Adventures in Bohemia and Riverside Drive in Sprightly Novel by Phyllis Duganne.

"Prologue" is the title of the initial publication from the pen of Phyllis Duganne and within its cover is portrayed life in New York through the vision of a young girl just entering upon womanhood. The surroundings range from the simple home life to the lap of luxury of the upper smart set, with glimpses now and then into the whirl of Bohemian life in Greenwich village.

The tale carries many a moral lesson as it introduces the men and women of the modern age with whom Rita Moreland, the principal of the book, is brought in contact in the metropolitan city.

The time is the present or a few years back, when Rita, a dream child, reveling in the land of Peter Pan, is suddenly thrust into the social world and given her first taste of the frivolous side of life in the spacious home of her parents. Guided by a thoughtless mother, her every wish granted, pampered and petted and tutored at home, the story of Rita weaves itself into one thrilling adventure after another. How she finally finds her true self through the medium of her childhood friends, brings to a close one of the most unusual of stories.

Phyllis Duganne, the author, though not a scholar, but a student of life as it is from day to day, was raised among the artist colony of New York. She is thoroughly familiar with the Bohemian side of life, a great reader and well known for her serials and short stories.

("Prologue," by Phyllis Duganne: New York, Harcourt, Brace & Howe.)

"GLEN OF THE HIGH NORTH," H. A. CODY

Many books have been written of the Yukon, but none for sheer romance and clear portrayal of the life in America's last frontier excel that in "Glen of the High North." H. A. Cody, author, who spent many years in the frozen north, gives a portrayal of the land and the fortune seekers that is not overdrawn or [illegible] imagination.

The love story, about which is built the entire narration, is replete with thrills and unexpected situations. A veteran of the war-swept fields of France cannot again settle down to the monotony of newspaper work and he decides to wander in search of adventure, which he finds on the first day and which carries him through many trying dangers and finally to love and fortune.

("Glen of the High North," by H. A. Cody: New York, George H. Doran & Co.)

JAMES AND ROYCE

Among the "Familiar Letters of William James," the third group of which appears in the September Atlantic, there is a letter to Josiah Royce which shows the warm and intimate friendship hich existed between these two great minds. "You are still the center of my gaze, the pole of my mental magnet," writes Mr. James. "When I write, 'tis with one eye on the page and one on you. When I compose my Gifford lectures mentally, 'tis with the design exclusively of overthrowing your system and ruining your peace." And later—"O my dear Royce, can I forget you, or be contented out of your close neighborhood? Different as our minds are, yours has nourished mine, as no other social influence ever has, and in converse with you I have always felt that my life was being lived importantly." Such a relationship adds new interest to the post-humous work of Josiah Royce published last spring by this Yale University Press, "Lectures on Modern Idealism." The book contains a series of lectures delivered at Johns Hopkins University with an introduction by Professor Jacob Loewenberg.

CHARLES F. HIGHAM

Charles F. Higham, member of parliament whose "Looking Forward" has just been published by Alfred A. Knopf, is an American by birth. The "Editor and Publisher" says that he has the distinction of being the only advertising man who has ever been elected to a British legislative body.

ROUGE ET NOIR -:- -:- By O. Henry

same frank, undaunted expression, the same high forehead with the peculiar line of the clustering, crisp black hair.

General Pilar was an experienced orator. He seized the moment of breathless silence that preceded the storm.

"Citizens of Anchuria," he trumpeted, hold aloft the keys to Casa Morena, "I am here to deliver these keys—the keys to your homes and liberty—to your chosen president. Shall I deliver them to Enrico Olivarra's assassin, or to his son?"

"Olivarra! Olivarra!" the crowd shrieked the magic name—men, women, children and the parrots.

And the enthusiasm was not confined to the blood of the plebs. Colonel Rocas ascended the steps and laid his sword theatrically at young Ramon Olivarra's feet. Four members of the cabinet embraced him. Captain Cruz gave a command, and twenty of El Ciento Huilando dismounted and arranged themselves in a cordon about the steps of Casa Morena.

But Ramon Olivarra seized that moment to prove himself a born genius and politician. He waved those soldiers aside, and descended the steps to the street. There, without losing his dignity or the distinguished elegance that the loss of his red hair brought him, he took the proletariat to his bosom—the barefooted, the dirty Indians, Caribs, babies, beggars, old, young, saints, soldiers and sinners—he missed none of them.

While this act of the drama was being presented, the scene shifters had been busy at the duties that had been assigned to them. Two of Cruz's dragoons had seized the bridle reins of Losada's horses; others formed a close guard around the carriage; and they galloped off with the tyrant and his two unpopular ministers. No doubt a place had been prepared for them. There are a number of well-barred stone apartments in Coralio.

"Rouge wins," said Mr. Vicenti, calmly lighting another cigar.

Capatin Cronin had been intently watching the vicinity of the stone steps of the Casa Morena, together.

"Good boy!" he exclaimed suddenly, as if relieved. "I wondered if he was going to forget his Kathleen Mavourneen."

Young Olivarra had reascended the steps and spoken a few words to General Pilar. Then that distinguished veteran descended to the ground and approached Pasa, who still stood, wonder-eyed, where Dicky had left her. With his plumed hat in his hand, and his medals and decorations shining on his breast, the general spoke to her and gave her his arm, and they went up the stone steps of the Casa Morena together. And then Ramon Olivarra stepped forward and took both her hands before all the people.

And while the cheering was breaking out afresh everywhere, Captain Cronin and Mr. Vicenti turned and walked back toward the shore where the gig was waiting for them.

"There'll be another 'presidente proclamada' in the morning," said Mr. Vicenti, musingly. "As a rule they are not as reliable as the elected ones, but this youngster seems to have some good stuff in him. He planned and manoeuvered the entire campaign. Olivarra's widow, you know, was wealthy. After her husband was assassinated she went to the States, and educated her son at Yale. The Vesuvius Company hunted him up, and backed him in the little game."

"It's a glorious thing," said Cronin, half jestingly, "to be able to discharge a government, and insert one of your own choosing, in these days."

"Oh, it is only a matter of business," said Vicenti, stopping and offering the stump of his cigar to a monkey that swung down from a lime tree; "and that is what moves the world today. That extra real on the price of bananas had to go. We took the shortest way of removing it."

HELEN DIRCKS, author of "Passenger," whose marriage to Frank Swinnerton has just been announced.

"A GIRL, A HORSE AND DOG," LYNDE

To those who live the wild mountainous regions and tales of mining "in the rough," with adventure and thrills a-plenty, Francis Lynde's latest novel, "The Girl, a Horse and a Dog," comes as a pleasant surprise. The author has written a number of successful books, several of them laid in just such an atmosphere as this, with characters similar—the men of the virile fight-or-die type and the women extremely woodwise and brave.

The story is told in a light, readable manner by "Stannie," the charming n'er-do-well, who lives an aimless life, much to the disgust of Cousin Percy. Cousin Percy (above reproach) inherits the bulk of a wealthy grandfather's fortune. Stannie is left with a mysterious legacy which Cousin Percy informs him will be found in a "perfectly safe repository situated between the 105th and 110th degrees of longitude west from Greenwich and the 35th and 40th decrees north latitude." It is to be identified by a "blue-eyed girl with a mole on her left shoulder, a piebald horse and a dog with a split face—half black and half white."

How Stannie locates his legacy, finds the mysterious Three, keeps his property under extreme difficulties and learns to enjoy hard labor, makes up the theme of the story. [illegible] chapeaux, "Daddy Hiram" and a full-fledged rival, who is a clever, unscrupulous mining engineer have their place in the chapters.

Of course there is a love interest, with the usual ups and downs, and a happy ending.

("The Girl, a Horse and a Dog," by Francis Lynde: New York, Charles Scribner's Sons.)

BALLADE OF LIBROLARCENY.

When this ballade appears in print
Some one will feel a guilty thrill,
So circulate it without stint
And shout it loud on every hill.
The bibliopilfering bibliophil
Perhaps will ponder and repent
To hear me cry with accent shrill
Where are the books that I have lent?

Where are my Gissings gone, I hint?
Whose bookcase do my Conrads fill?
And my "Decameron"? I squint
Along my shelves and feel a chill.
"Lavengro" gone! O imbecile
To lend that book! Yes, I am shent.
I'll put your conscience on the grill:
Where are the books that I have lent?

My Daisy Ashford, my "Peer Gynt,"
My "Ocean Tramp"—all gone! Until
Those books come back my heart is flint;
My "Orivia," too—a bitter pill;
Now, by the root of Ygdrasil
I ask where my Max Beerbohms went?
And so I roar, with metric skill,
Where are the books that I have lent?

ENVOY

The bibliokleptomaniac will Reply (of course) he truly meant
To bring them back last week.....But still
Where are the books that I have lent?

—Christopher Morley in the Weekly Review.

Burton) and "The Story of the New Testament, the last mentioned being one of the most successful volumes in the series on "handbooks of Ethics and Religion" issued by the University of Chicago Press.

HENRY A. BEERS.

Writing of Henry A. Beers, William Lyon Phelps has said, "a poet and story writer, of whom the only justly adverse comment can be that he ought to have written more." The Yale University Press has just announced a new volume of essays by Mr. Beers called "The Connecticut Wits."

Archibald Marshall, the popular English novelist, who had intended to visit America this year, writes his American publishers, Dodd, Mead & Co., that he will not be able to make the trip, owing to ill health.

For Younger Readers

Rare Treats Are in Store for Boys and Girls in Volumes Out for the Christmas Season—Tales of Enchantment and of Thrilling Adventure, Bear Appreciation of Art, Fair Play and Wholesome Amusement.

A Christmas that is to be rich in books for children is promised with the publication of nine volumes for the younger readers. Despite a year handicapped by publishing troubles there has been nothing in other years to approach the typographical and pictorial excellence of some of the volumes that will be seen on the holiday counters. And if an early evidence is to be taken as the token for all that are to follow there has been a most judicious editorial selection.

Because of the beauties of picture and the age-old delight in the tales, as well as because of the local interest that attaches to the work of Constance and Maxwell Armfield, known for their connection with the summer faculty at the University of California and for their encouragement to the little theater movement here, "Wonder Tales of the World" will appeal to many who plan a gift to an imaginative child. Constance Armfield has retold the stories and Maxwell Armfield has supplied the drawings. Two or three colored plates of unusual distinction with the tricks in perspective and odd groupings in the pen and ink sketches are something to appeal to the youthful imagination as well as to an adult appreciation. The book is a solid volume of young delight.

("Wonder Tales of the World," by Constance Armfield: New York, Harcourt, Brace & Howe.)

It was a happy thought of Elizabet hStork's to translate "Cornelli" for American children and for American parents. Johanna Spyri has been known here only for her "Heidi." This story is of a sensitive little heroine who suffers the unjust suspicion of her elders and of the manner of her reinstatement in the affections of her father. A delightful group of children is portrayed and the grown-ups are sketched in lightly and with a real appreciation of humorous incident. The parent who reads the story to his children will find himself loving the book and, perhaps, loving his children the more. It is thoroughly well written, close to the heart, and one of the best of the books for younger years. The pictures are in color.

("Cornelli," by Johanna Spyri: Philadelphia, J. P. Lippincott Co., $1.50.)

Another book of wide-eyed wonder is "Tales of Enchamtnemt from Spain," fairy stories of another continent retold by Elsie Spicer Eells and illustrated with charming feeling by Maud and Miska Petersham. It is a book of beauty of word and color and one in which the fairy folk and magic weavers work golden adventure for those who best appreciate. The stories are told simply and will be enjoyed by children from six or seven years up until that unfortunate time when fairies lose their lure.

("Tales of Enchamintment from Spain," by Elsie Spicer Eells: New York, Harcourt, Bruce & Howe.)

Verse that will appeal to the child, sung in simple measure and with words known to young is contained in "Pull the Bobbin," a garland of child verse, by Queenie Scott-Hopper. Little stories and dramatic situations are contained in the rhymes with plenty of opportunity for a forceful and effective reading. It is such a book to become a favorite with parents who delight in watching young eyes sparkle and many of the verses will be "learned by heart" by the small boy or girl. There are some fanciful illustrations in color.

("Pull the Bobbin," by Queenie Scott-Hopper: Philadelphia, J. P. Lippincott & Co., $1.60.)

The boy or girl who has a pet or who is fond of dogs will welcome the latest of Sandman books with wriggles of joy for it is all about puppies and filled with the most surprising and delightful of adventures. It is such a book as will make the youngster love his dog the more or instill in one who has not loved animals an interest and regard in them. Photographs of puppies in all manner of garb and in most unusual poses will occasion an instant delight. Children old enough to look at pictures and to hear a good-night story will make the book a favorite.

The three other books in the "Friendly Terrace" series are enough of an introduction to make certain the welcome that will be given "The Friendly Terrace Quartette." Harriet Lummis Smith is delightful, cheery and hearty. With her stories she makes real friends of hundreds of girls and aids materially in cultivating an early interest in wholesome reading. There is always good adventure and real fun in her pages. As each one of the books is a story in itself there is no need for the newcomer to the charmed circle in making this latest volume her first. Certain it is that it will not be the last. It is a book for girls from seven or eight to sixteen and beyond.

Another book for those of the age when it is most important that the right sort of reading should be provided is "Jean and the Boys," by May Baldwin. As the title would indicate it will interest the girl and boy reader. It will do much to remove the silly girl-and-boy idea that sometimes comes in the early grades and at the same time offers a delightful story for youthful entertainment. School adventure, out-of-doors fun and some really laughable exploits make it a book that represents no task at all for a parent to read aloud.

("Jean and the Boys," by May Baldwin: Philadelphia, the J. P. Lippincott Company.)

Austin Bishop gives with his boys' stories a knowledge of mechanics and a love for fair play and gives so much of adventure [illegible] the average young American claims them as his own. In "Bob Thorpe, Sky Fighter in Italy" there is much of the mechanics and tactics of aviation to stimulate the mind when it is most inventive, or most receptive. The boys in the story serve with the Lafayette Flying Corps and are assigned to "special duty" in Italy. As the author served two years as an air pilot in France and Italy he is competent to give his readers accurate information of the scene of his story and to make his airplane descriptions accurate and plausible. There is an excitement in the book that will appeal to many a boy who is old enough to have sons in college.

("Bob Thorpe, Sky Fighter in Italy," by Austin Bishop: New York, Harcourt, Brace & Hows.)

Of Meg, and Peg and Topkins and their adventures does "Periwinkle's Island" treat. To say nothing at all of the Creepingo, Tut-tut, Roly and Poly, Rumpty, Umpty and Dumpty, Suet, the Top Twins and Potypan. As musical a list of characters as ever graced a book for children will be found in this volume by Edith L. Elias. Special attractions are also on hand in the presence of a King and Queen—soon to be fabled personages—and a host of color plates. In fact, the book is crammed with heart's delight for any number of small readers.

KAHLIL GIBRAN

Kahlil Gibran's works, which have been published in his mother-tongue—Arabic—number nearly one hundred. His latest book in that language, which has just been published in Egypt, is "Tempests," and the peoples of the Near East are reported to be writing and talking about it with a good deal of interest just now. Parts of it have already appeared in French and German. Gibran's writings and drawings were first made available to English-speaking peoples by the publication of "The Madman," a book of "parables and poems," in 1918, and "Twenty Drawings" last year by Alfred A. Knopf. Mr. Knopf has also arranged for the publication of Gibran's work in England by the London publisher Hutchinson. A new volume of both poems and drawings, "The Forerunner," is scheduled for immediate publication here.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE'S.

"The Junkman and Other Poems," is Richard Le Gallienne's first book to appear since the war, and records the reactioins of this distinguished poet to the most brutal of all realities.

The volume is divided into eight parts of which the first is a group of ballades, an old French form in which Le Gallienne finds a perfect vehicle for his imagery. The sixth contains "Charles Frohman," a notable tribute, and the stirring "Ballade Against the Enemies of France."

HARRY A FRANCK

An entertaining little booklet biography of Harry A. Franck, author of "Roaming Through the West Indies" and quite a few other travel boks covering many of the most picturesque sections of the world, has been printed by his publishers, The Century Co., 353 Fourth Ave., New York City, who will be glad to send it to anyone who asks for it.

POETRY MAGAZINE.

"Poetry" for October is one of those occasional numbers that would justify a year of labors. And if it be any reflection in a trend of modern verse, if it would indicate something beautiful emerging from the rough, it is the most significant number yet issued by the hopeful and zealous Miss Monroe. John Gould Fletcher's Mississippi poems, with the rhythm of the river and of the stevedores at work, Laura Sherry's songs of a "Town by the River," and Isador Schneider's "America" are at once noteworthy and of the artists. Only the last named is of the deliberately intricate and tricky startling sort once favored above all others in the loved magazine.

"Over the tall man's shoulder,
Around the stout man's torso,
Bodies are diaphanous—
They have been worn thin by the usage of my vision."

A song of a hearty relish is Beatrice Ravenal's "The Gypsy," which contains.

My heartstone's set in the good red loam,
And the sky was raised for my own roof-tree
As he hoists his shell on a tiny track,
I carry the sky, like a snail on my back,
Till it dabbles its eaves in the sea.

New Flavor in Pictures Is Promised by Entry of Famous Artists in Films

What is going to be the effect of the entry this year into the field of moving pictures of such artists as Penrhyn Stanlaws, Paul Chalfin and Paul Iribe? No one ought to know better than these artists themselves.

Iribe is primarily an architect, and at one time was the youngest architect to gain recognition in France, but his achievements since then have been varied. He has designed the costumes, settings, and supervised the action of many Parisian productions. As first designer for Paul Poiret and later for Paquin, he created many of the popular styles. Besides this he is a founder of a school of drawing best known in America through the sketches of Erte and Drian. And now Iribe has entered the motion picture field, where he will design gowns, furnishings and settings for Paramount pictures.

"What is going to be the effect?" said Iribe. "One senses an anxious note in the inquiry, something that says: 'Moving pictures aren't going to get too "artistic" and lofty for the man in the street, are they?'

"'Artist' and 'Art' are nervous words. Mr. X is a sculptor and makes cubist statues; Miss Y lives in Greenwich village, bobs her hair and paints pictures. We don't pretend to understand them, but, it is said, they are 'artists.' And 'art.' Business men, engineers, commercial men, working men say to me in a tone of excuse: 'You see I know nothing about art.'

"'Artist' is not only the name of a profession. It is above all a quality that can belong to anyone, commercial traveler, banker or manufacturer of automobiles, anyone who is moved by that which seems beautiful to him. And who does know about art? No one and everyone, since no one and everyone can like or not like such and such a painting or such and such a piece of music.

"In the end, true art is that which gives aesthetic pleasure to most people, that which pleases their taste. But too often we confuse taste with a complete absence of taste. There are more people without taste than with taste either good or bad, and for many reasons: timidity, lack of confidence in oneself, lack of so-called "artistic knowledge," and above all that reason that dominates all others, the fear of making a mistake.

"He who knows about art has found easy prey among these people unfortunately so numerous who are afraid of making a mistake. All that would have been younger, gayer, livelier, has come to be hidden behind a gray veil through which everything has been rendered insipid and dull, through this fear of making a mistake. People have been limited to the employment of antique furniture, copies of the antique, antique materials and all that has a guarantee of the past, that is to say, everything that does not oblige any personal taste. In this way the possibility of error, redoubtable error, has been diminished as much as possible, for how can one make a mistake if one creates nothing?

"It seems to me America owes it to the world to destroy this prejudice against that which is new. There could be no better medium than the moving picture for accomplishing this end. The artist must have a medium that will allow plenty of scope for his imagination, and moving pictures offer unlimited scope. The effect of the entry of the artist into the field of moving pictures, then, will not be that of elevating them beyond the understanding of the average man; rather it will have the effect of producing for him things that are new and original. Antiques that have been vaguely revered because of their authenticity, paintings or furniture admired only for the reason that they are old will be replaced by new creations presented on the merits of their own beauty. I believe the moving picture will give to the artist a unique medium for the display of his talent, and from him it will so gain in beauty and originality as to bring it every year nearer perfection."

The cast which appeared in support of Betty Compson in her first starring production, "Prisoners of Love," is made up of persons of exceptional reputation like Roy Stewart, Emory Johnson, Ralph Lewis, Claire McDowell and Clara Horton.

Collen Moore has been chosen to play the leading feminine role in King Vidor's production of "The Sky Pilot." After selecting David Butler for the male lead, Producer Vidor spent several weeks in search of the actress.

Another playwright has been added to the list of captives made by the conquering movies. He is William Hurlbut, author of numerous successful plays. The first to be produced will be his comedy, "Made in Heaven," by Goldwyn.

When one considers the large number of directors engaged in the production of pictures—there are something like 250—it is a matter for surprise that so few new ideas have been worked out for the development of the cinema. D. W. Griffith got his pre-eminence in the art-industry by boldly striking out with the original cort, and the result was the cutback, fade-out and other now common devices.

Much interest is manifested in the announcement that Sir Gilbert Parker will shortly arrive on the Pacific Coast to arrange for the production of one of his original stories at the Lasky Studio for Paramount. Another famous figure to arrive shortly at the Lasky Studio will be Penrhyn Stanlaws, the noted illustrator and artist.

Picture patrons who enjoyed "The Miracle Man," can begin to get expectant. The New York office of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation announces that George Loane Tucker has finished cutting "Ladies Must Live," successor to Tucker's famous Faith classic. This feature has been in process of making at Los Angeles for nearly a year. It will probably be Tucker's Christmas present to the public.

Personality And Clothes

By ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN

Clothes should fit the personality as well as the figure. In fact, they should fit it better, for as styles are now, you can conceal your figure much better than your personality. And the more compelling your personality is, the less you need worry about prevailing modes.

It is a fact, I believe, that most women start even as far as natural beauty goes. The wise woman learns her good points and emphasizes them, and in so doing, she minimizes her poor ones.

But too often, alas, the woman who has the outsized ears, announces this to the world by wearing conspicuous earrings, and the woman with the scrawny arms is the world's best champion for the short-sleeved gown.

It pays to be well dressed, because then you can forget yourself and enter into things in a whole-hearted way that is impossible if you aren't sure that your skirt hangs evenly or if you feel misgivings about your lines.

There are so many things in the world to enjoy that one cannot devote too much time to things sartorial. The simplest way is to classify yourself and dress up to he best of your type. You can't miss that way.

Studio Stories

In her new Metro picture Alice Lake was required to display temper while taking a dancing lesson. To get the desired effect Miss Lake considered it realistic to throw something and so, taking off a slipper, she hurled it in the general direction of Jack Livingston, one of the supporting cast. And it connected with Mr. Livingston's jaw. Mr. Livingston forthwith protested.

"That's not realism, Miss Lake. Don't you know a woman is never supposed to be able to throw straight?"

The Ape Utters Protest

"I'm against the movement to transplant insertitial glands from monkeys to prolong the life of men," says Joe Martin, Universal's ape.

Martin made this declaration while lounging on the veranda of his jungle bungalow at Universal City. Mrs. Martin, swinging on the veranda rail, vehemently emphasized her hubby's view. And thus encouraged Joe, with many solemn deprecations, continued with his theories of life.

The Eighth Wonder

George Beban tells this one to illustrate the wonders of nature and the camera:

A company of which he was a member had to take some shots on a farm. Permission was obtained from the owner, a real son of the soil. When the director came back, flushed and triumphant, the old man asked:

"Did you see my son down there?"

"Yes," beamed the director, "we caught him at work on a tractor."

"Them picture machines is certainly wonderful," commented the father. "I ain't caught him at work in six months."

Or a M. P. Editor

Guy Price is responsible for this one: Director Sam Wood has decided that his infant daughter Gloria is destined to be a scenario writer.

He came home the other night to find that she had chewed the first two pages from a script he is about to do as a Wanda Hawley Realart feature.

It is understood Lew Cody and Robertson-Cole have agreed to disagree. Cody is said to have received a big offer from an eastern company.

Martha Mansfield has purchased a lovely sable scarf which she say is to be the backbone of her winter wardrobe. "I'm going to get a brown velvet gown and hat to wear with it," she announces, "and enjoy the delicious sensation of being thoroughly extravagant."

Dorothy Dalton, beauty of stage and screen, who is just now appearing in 'Aphrodite' in Chicago, will, on her return to the screen, do "The Teaser." This is her first western picture since the memorable success, "The Flame of the Yukon."

Miss Isabel Byrd-Page, said to be prominent in Philadelphia society circles, will have an important role in the Hermann Film Company's forthcoming production, "Something More." Miss Page was a contestant in a recent film contest and her selection by Hermann was due to her score in the contest. She is of the blonde type and a simon-pure beauty.

Marie Mosquini, the Sprightly Dark Comedy Beauty

Italian Charmer Finds Her Ideals Realized in Making Laughter.

By BEATRICE BLAIR

Laughter has always been a great hobby with me and I discovered I had a companion in my worships. She was Marie Mosquini, the little Italian beauty, appearing with "Snub" Pollard in Pathe-Rolin Comedies. Marie loves laughter and loving it is unselfish—she likes to distribute it. I determined to see this little disciple of mirth, so I hunted her up and was fortunate enough to find her at the studio.

She smiled at me—I smiled back at her—and then we both laughed! It broke the ice and we were friends!

"You know," she said, "maybe I ought not to admit it, but I feel terribly honored to have you come way out here to see me. I hope I won't disappoint you. You see I'm not used to being interviewed, and I hope I'll say the right things."

"You may say anything you want!" I assured her, "and then I'll show it to you when it's written and together we can blue-pencil anything you don't like." And we both laughed again.

"You like comedy" I asked.

"Oh, I love it! Of course I am very ambitious, and all that, but I seem to want to stick to comedy. They say, you know, that 'laughter leaves us doubly serious after,' so I try to allow myself to believe that I'm doing dramatic work at the same time."

START IN COMEDY.

"They say that the greatest actresses first did comedy," I remarked.

"I know, but that doesn't frighten me at all. I am grateful to comedy. It gave me a start."

"Tell me about it?" I asked.

"I wonder if I should?" said Marie, with a twinkle in her eye. "But," she continued, "you have your blue pencil with you, haven't you? Well, first I selected comedy because I thought I would begin in the high school of the picture world and learn all I could. I was fortunate enough to get a position with Harold Lloyd. Oh, no, I wasn't featured, I was in what they called the 'merry merry.' I was a bathing girl but it was the finest education in the world.

"It was a pleasure working for Mr. Lloyd, it seemed so like one big family—everyone was so willing to help everyone else. Then it happened! Mildred Davis, who had been leading woman with 'Snub' Pollard, was transferred to Mr. Lloyd's company and I was given her place. Sounds like a book doesn't it?"

"It sounds wonderful!" I remarked.

SCARED TO DEATH.

"I was scared to death at first. Had I ought to admit that?"

"We'll see how it looks and then blue-pencil it," I replied.

"All right," said Marie with a smile. "At first it seemed so different to have the director shouting at me alone instead of at me in a group as he had done before. But really, I got used to it very quickly. "Now," I thought, "I will soon be able to pay the mortgage on the farm!" And we laughed again.

But really, Marie is one of the most delightful of the younger stars I have ever met. She bears watching. Enjoying her work to the fullest extent she is happiness personified when at the studio. If she is called upon to do a sad moment as soon as the camera stops she is sure to break out in a sunny smile. She is full of surprises—not moods! She is always saying something different—something that will make you smile, and before you know it you are both laughing together. She is really a bewitching little witch of laughter!

What Not to Do Before the Camera

A man who has spent many years in the California motion picture studios and who is now at the Lasky studio at Hollywood has compiled this advice for persons ambitious to act for the pictures:

Experience in acting is not essential, and sometimes too great an amount of stage experience acts as a detriment—for there is much to unlearn. Beauty in the case of a woman; comeliness or physical perfection in the case of a man—are both great assets. And even for character roles there is little opportunity for the man or woman who is devoid of physical attractiveness.

Brains are always an essential. The merely pretty face may get a girl along to some extent—but she will never get far unless she has intelligence also. Personal appeal, or magnetism, are indespensible to the attainment of any high degree of success. Now for a few "Don'ts" for beginners:

Don't think just because you are considered pretty or have a fine muscular development or can dance well or recite or sing, that you must necessarily be adapted to the screen. Remember this is the silent drama. A voice is of absolutely no value to you whatever.

Let us suppose you have an extra part in a picture:

Don't ever look into the camera. If you do you will find yourself immediately subject to a call down or removal from the cast.

Don't try to make up yourself. Let some one with knowledge of the screen help you. The makeup is entirely different than that of the stage or—the street.

Don't talk too much among the others. The screen world is well supplied with gossips and tale bearers. So don't criticise the director, the star, the other players, the sets, the costumes, the story or the studio.

Don't expect to have the pages or publicity until you have earned the right to expect it.

Don't be afraid to ask questions—that's one way to learn. Another way is to watch everything. You'll learn how not to act and also how to act. Make friends with the ones who count.

Don't dissipate: get sleep and rest; study a lot—read worth while literature. An education may not be essential but it is a mighty handy thing if you expect to get far in screen work. If there is some one playing a small part who is about your type, study his or her work carefully; you may get a chance to fill in in the event of emergency and take a big step forward.

Don't be impatient. Don't think you are badly treated if you aren't handed a part in a few weeks, or even months. It takes time to make a real actor—time and study and concentration.

Don't get the mistaken idea that screen acting means principally having a good time after the day's work is ended. Most successful screen folk are pretty regular in their habits. The camera shows every fault. A new wrinkle may put you out of the running.

Don't neglect to study yourself and learn your defects as well as your good points. Then rid yourself of the one, if you can, and develop the other.

Don't try to be a movie actor or actress unless you have good reason to think there is a chance for you.

Don't fall in love with the leading man—he's nearly always married: nor the leading lady—she's thinking of her art and clothes and salary.

Shakespeare of Movies Is Planning New Wonder Film

David Wark Griffith is said to have found the production of motion pictures in the east too expensive and rumor has it that he is returning to Southern California to build a studio and make the most ambitious photoplay of his career, with Abraham Lincoln as its central character.

Producers In Rebellion At Story Prices

The price of film rights to books and plays is mounting to extravagant figures. One producer recently paid $175,000 for a popular play, and "Ben Hur" is understood to be held for the astounding figure of $500,000. Many novels are held at $50,000.

"They are not worth it if the bookstall or stage reputation is their chief factor as an asset," says Lloyd Ingraham, one of the most prominent of the directors. "It isn't the reputation before reaching the screen that counts," he said the other day; "it is the quality of the work that is done in the studio. Audiences have come to know that the celebrity of a story or stage play, or even the name of an actor, is not a guarantee of the worth of a screen production.

"Take the case of 'The Miracle Man.' On the printed page it was a commonplace thing that attracted very moderate attention. On the stage, although adapted by one of our very best dramatists, it was a failure. But on the screen, masterfully produced and perfectly acted, it has become the second most popular and profitable film ever made. The screen rights to 'The Miracle Man' cost little.

"Some of our most intelligent screen stars, realizing these things, have refused to engage in the scramble for high-priced story material. They have kept their wits about them and judged all stories on their merits, regardless of what names are behind them, and these stars have not suffered in their standing as a result of their policy. It is vastly more important to have skillful interpretation on the screen than reputation before the manuscript gets into the studio."

"Be Modern," Slogan

"Be Modern," says Basil King, a noted novelist, in advice to young and uprising authors and scenario writers. "Write about people and happenings of today."

King has just finished his work at a Southern California studio, where he has been co-operating with the studio forces.

"The people are finding the present era one of the most exciting in history," declared King, "especially since the signing of the armistice has this been the case. Time, crowded with important events, overladen with sudden changes in the life of the people, flies quickly by. The revolutionary developments of one day become history in the next.

"We pick up a newspaper and are thrilled with the accounts of radical social, political and economic changes. Scanning the same paper the following day we throw it down in disgust. The passing hours have brought newer and more startling changes.

"The successful novel, motion picture, short story and stage play of today must deal with the life and actions of the people of today. It is not necessary that the plot be filled with action. In fact, it can easily contain too much action.

"But, essentially, the drama or story must make people think; and the quickest way to make them think is to deal with [illegible] interesting in their own life."

King declared that the day of the adapted novel in motion picture production has passed.

"The few good novels suitable for picturization have been used," he declared. "The present pictures of this kind, produced from the few remaining books, are being sold largely under the well-known title of the book from which they were taken, or, if the author is well known, beneath his name.

"We are approaching the era of the original scenario in motion picture production," the famous novelist continued. "The time has come when the author who is to use the screen as his medium must study its limitations.

"He must recognize these facts: The novel and the short story deal with the dialogue and emotions of their characters, leaving the action mainly to the imagination of the readers. The moving picture and the stage play deal with the actions of their characters and leave the dialogue and emotions of their characters mainly to the imagination of the theatergoer."

New Gloria Arrives

The stork paid a visit to film-land last week. It was the real live bird, and it carried little Gloria Swanson Somborn to welcoming arms in Hollywood, where one of the notable actresses of the screen has willingly forsworn the title of "star" for the moment for the word "mother."

The advent of an infant daughter to Gloria Swanson and her husband, Herbert K. Somborn, marks an event in screen circles. The happy marriage of the beautiful young actress and Somborn, the latter affiliated with the business management of one of the large film producing companies, has been a matter of much felicitation to all their friends, and the arrival of the little one brought further congratulations.

The little Gloria weighed nine and a half pounds on arrival. All the fairy godmothers and godfathers of the film world are wishing for the little newcomer those blessings of wit, beauty and charm which have distinguished her mother, whose work in the leading feminine roles of the Cecil de Mille productions of the past two years has made her famous.

Miss Swanson will devote her time exclusively to the little daughter until the first of the year, when she will return to the screen, this time as a Lasky star.

New Leading Woman

Virginia Fox, dainty little comedy queen whose dimples have been impressed upon the minds of picture fans, will hereafter appear as the leading woman for Buster Keaton, the comedian who never smiles. Miss Fox served her apprenticeship in the Mack Sennet school of bathing girls.

Scenario Masonry

A scenario construction board is the latest in cinema circles. It is in operation in the studio of Katherine MacDonald in Los Angeles. It will be the chief duty of this board to keep the stories selected for the use of Miss MacDonald logical and human, to eliminate bromides and rank melodrama and to analyze and dissect them so as to turn out pictures of universal interest and lasting impressions.

Dowling Old San Francisco Player "Miracle Man" Tells of Stock Days

Joseph J. Dowling, the veteran actor who plays an important part in J. Warren Kerrigan's latest Brunton production, "The House of Whispers," was a member of San Francisco's first dramatic stock company. It was called the Empire Stock Company and gave its initial performance to a crowd of 300 miners, sailors, freeholders and freighters on Christmas day, 1868.

The playhouse was a canvas and board structure, erected near the historic plaza, then the nucleus of 'Frisco's Great White Way.

"The proletarian mobs that filled the pit on Will Shakespeare's first nights, and shied nuts and fruit at the players had nothing on these people for disorder," says Dowling. "Hardly a line was given without some wag adding loud and caustic comment. I recollect the show being almost broken up in the last act when our leading lady lifted her arms to heaven and exclaimed dramatically, 'Oh, I would that I were good.'

"A wit in the rear of the audience, who had been more or less encouraged by his fellows throughout the evening, arose and shouted, 'An' we wish you was, too!'"

New Charlie Chaplin Found?

Down in Los Angeles they think they've discovered a new Charlie Chaplin in Buster Keaton. Unless Charlie goes to work it is possible some other youngster will rob him of his laurels. Keaton was picked by Fatty Arbuckle to succeed him when Fatty left the small comedy field. Now they say his first starring vehicle, "One Week," is the best two-reeler of the year. Keaton is advertised as the funny man who never smiles.

By BUSTER KEATON

Schenck-Metro Comedy Star

Making comedies is a sad story. A person who would be a successful actor and director in the making of two-reel comedies must have the conscience of a profiteer, the nerve of a highwayman and the skill of a counterfeiter.

In the first place comedies must be made so that every child and every foreigner can understand them easily. And yet they must not be so crude as to insult the intelligence of the up-to-date American.

I always strive to produce comedies that are clean and wholesome for they're the kind that appeal to the majority. Sub-titles have to be avoided, for the average youngster doesn't understand them and comedy audiences are three-fifths children.

Laughs are the order of the day. And the fellow who can't get across with stunts that will cause ripples of laughter isn't classed as a comedian.

A NEW KIND OF PLAY.

Most people think that the director stands out of range of the camera and directs every move of the players. This is true to an extent in drama, and in drama too the script details every move. But in comedies that isn't true. A great deal of the acting in this variety of photo drama is spontaneous and that's why the job of a fun maker is the hardest kind. The script is mere skeleton and you have to improvise as you go along. You must move quickly and use ingenuity. Sudden, unexpected, ludicrous situations are necessary. But coarse scenes are tabooed. Refined, refreshing comedies are a tonic to the tired mind, and those are the kind of pictures I try to make.

The necessity of free, undirected and spontaneous action is missing in many successful drama stars, and is the reason they do not succeed when they attempt comedies. From a theater seat it often appears that a flock of hair-brained, human shock-absorbers are the only requisites of a comedy. But I must admit that gray matter is much in demand when it comes to making two-reel comedies.

FAKES ARE RESENTED

Bald fakes insult the intelligence of the theatergoer. Your pictures must be on the level. Your comedies must appear sincere and be well presented if they are to be well received. And no matter if it does take a lot of more work and money to put over a scene right, it pays in the end. One poorly acted or poorly presented scene may spoil an entire picture.

You have to hustle all the time. If you stop for a moment and attempt to "get by on your rep," you'll be sidetracked without notice. Someone is forever surpassing the other. Directors and actors of today accomplishing the seemingly impossible, are overshadowed tomorrow by some hitherto unheard of person from the backwoods.

Notes of the Cinema

Everywhere it has been shown, "Humoresque," Frank Borzage's remarkable photoplay of eastside New York life, has been the film sensation of the year. In Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles it has broken theater records, as it did in the Criterion Theater in New York, where in its tenth week nearly 18,000 went to see it. Marcus Loew has booked the picture for his entire chain of more than one hundred theaters.

"Please, boys, don't work so hard!" Thus spoke Wanda Hawley as she stepped to the edge of a Realart yacht cabin set and gazed down at the twelve huskies who were furnishing the "ocean waves." "I wouldn't mind getting seasick if it happened to be on a real ocean voyage. But on dry land—that IS going a little too far!"

David Kirkland, director of Constance Talmadge in some of her most successful productions, has a peculiar idea of the best way to spend a vacation. He is taking a month off to make a comedy for Henry Lehrman, having left New York this week for Los Angeles. But then Kirkland didn't have such a bad time in Europe this summer. Kirkland recently returned from abroad with John Emerson and Anita Loos, those artful subtitlers of the Talmadge films. He is an old friend of Henry Lehrman.

Monroe Salisbury is returning to Los Angeles from New York to begin production on his second independent feature, "Practice What You Preach," the story selected by the star before he went east to attend the trade showing of "The Barbarian."

During a recent very brief holiday at Catalina Ruth Roland, at the big hotel there, which has installed the wireless telephone service for its patrons, Miss Roland not only talked to her friends in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Santa Barbara, but also pals in the film world who were cruising and fishing up and down the Pacific coast and in Catalina Bay.

Small Theater And Longer Runs Forecast

Benjamin B. Hampton, producer of the Zane Grey and Great Authors pictures, has been called the seer of the screen.

Some time since Hampton foretold the gradual elimination of the star system. At that time it was a much abused feature of motion picture production. Since Hampton's utterance many film companies have taken radical steps toward moderating the use of the word "star" in their publicity and advertising, and have realized that the public alone can make or unmake its idols.

Now this same oracle sees two more visions. He declares that it will become the vogue to show the best pictures in small theaters, offering them for a longer than the usual one week run, and like popular stage plays they should continue before the public for a protracted engagement. He suggested that the larger houses might show mixed programs of music, vaudeville and pictures, with short screen subjects, a plan which is coming into general use in many cities.

Prophecy No. 2 concerns that mooted question—the film censor. Hampton declares that the most effective censorship in the world will be put in operation through the small family theater, with the head of the family as the final dictator on the picture. The growing power and importance of the small, well conducted neighborhood house promises the best solution of all the arguments between producer and the would be arbiters of public morals.

If pater familias thinks a picture is worth seeing, if he wants to take his boys and girls to pass an evening at the theater, viewing a clean, dramatic film story well told, and well edited, he knows in a few moments whether it is the right picture for such purposes. His ultimatum, expressed to the theater manager, but especially by his contribution to the box office will instantly affect production.

Cinema Close-ups

Work has been completed at the Brunton studios on Bessie Barriscale's latest Robertson-Cole production, "The Broken Gate," adapted from the novel by Emerson Hough.

Oregon will have a chance to see a nationally famous man. Frank Borzage, is taking his entire company north, to make timberland scenes for Peter B. Kynes story, "Kindred of the Dust," which he is directing with Marion Davies as the star.

"The Old Swimming Hole," immortalized by James Whitcomb Riley, is to be Charles Ray's next picture. Considerable acreage, with a river, has been leased, and the carpenters are busy bringing to life the water mill and other structures depicted in this poetic gem by the Hoosier poet.

Alice Joyce is working on the final scenes for "Cousin Kate," her forthcoming Vitagraph special production. Immediately upon the completion of "Cousin Kate," Miss Joyce will begin active work on "Her Lord and Master." Mrs. Sidney Drew is directing for Miss Joyce.

Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver, stars of Mack Sennett's First National comedy, "Married Life," acted as best man and bridesmaid at a genuine wedding performed on the stage of the Victory Theater in Los Angeles the other day. The wedding ceremony took the place of the usual prologue at the cinema house. Justice Summerfield tied the knot. All were pleaced, according to reports.

When Eddie Barfry, well known Christie comedian, returned from his vacation recently from Big Bear Lake, he brought with him a smiling bride. She was formerly Gladys Patterson, who is with the Francis Ford producing company. It was an around-the-corner romance, both parties being with film companies situate within a block of one another on Sunset boulevard.

What's a moving picture star to the telephone company? Alice Brady has a new apartment and no telephone. After exhausting her powers of persuasion and making use of all of her influential friends she has reconciled herself to sending the maid to the corner drug store when she wants to telephone. But the telephone company is optimistic.

David Epstein, in charge of serials and western productions at Universal City, claims that there is a dearth of material suitable for two-reel western pictures. He is in the market for original stories whose scenes are laid in the west and suitable for the use of Hoot Gibson and his cowboys. Action is the first requisite for these two-reelers, and next in importance are a love story and a bit of comedy relief.

RUBINI READS MINDS OF 7 IN HIS TEST

Pscho-Wizard Performs His Experiment Under Auspices of Tribune to Astonishment of Committee of Citizens

Leads Caravan of Motors to City Hall, Where He Picks Up Red Cross Poster and Takes It to the Postoffice

Telepathy as a psychological phenomenon had its first real test in Oakland yesterday with convincing and astonishing results.

In a series of experiments under the auspices of The TRIBUNE and conducted by a committee of business and scientific men whose character and integrity were unimpeachable, Eugene de Rubini, young Czecho-Slovak psychologist and telepathist, proved his powers in extraordinary fashion.

The tests, which began at the Hotel Oakland in a private parlor at 10 a. m., climaxed in an intricate and spectacular street sortie which attracted the attention of thousands.

The climax of the test came in the office of Joseph Rosborough, postmaster, where the conditions of the test, formulated by a committee of seven at the Oakland Hotel and signed and sealed, were opened and read. These conditions said:

The burst of applause which followed the reading of this test paper was succeeded by general congratulations for the young psychologist and expressions of full conviction. De Rubini, under the specific mental direction of Postmaster Rosborough and with the attendant willed directions of Irving H. Kahn and Brother Agnor, professor of philosophy at St. Mary's College, had obeyed each written but unspoken direction as clearly as if he had been led by the hand.

The poster picked up by Rubini advertised the annual roll call of the Red Cross.

NO PHYSICAL CONTACT HAD WITH CONDUCTORS

The test was conducted without physical contact between de Rubini and his conductors.

Immediately after the test was completed, a copy of the directions was prepared with attestation, which was taken to the committee members to be signed. It said:

The above instructions were carried out to the complete satisfaction of the committee.

The seven men who signed the test and the attestation marking the triumph of de Rubini's theory of practical telepathy were:

IRVING H. KAHN, vice-president of Kahn Brothers' store.

JOSEPH ROSBOROUGH, postmaster.

BROTHER AGNON, professor of philosophy at St. Mary's College.

CHARLES E. HEWES, city manager of Alameda.

A. S. LAVENSON, secretary of the H. C. Capwell company.

J. F. LYNCH, chief of police.

PROF. E. M. LIPKA, president of the Oakland branch of the Society of American Magicians.

NO QUESTION OF TRICK IS RAISED

The tests from beginning to end were the most remarkable telepathic exhibitions evere witnessed in Oakland, demonstrating as they did not only the laboratory aspects of thought direction but furnishing a demonstration of the practical operation of telepathic phenomenon.

The question of trick was not raised at any time and the character of the committee and nature of the arrangements precluded all possibility of collusion

AGREEMENT SEALED BY COMMITTEE

Members of the committee to the number of more than two score gathered at the Hotel Oakland at 10 a. m., where they met de Rubini and his companion, Paul Thomas. They were closeted with the young psychologist for an hour. During that hour the committee of seven was chosen to formulate the street test and adjourned to a private room, where the plans for the test were dictated by committee members and put into writing by Irving H. Kahn of the committee. Each member then signed and the test paper was sealed.

When the private tests, more than a dozen in number and many varying kinds, were completed in the hotel parlor, the committee descended to the lounge entrance to the hotel. There, drawn up under the direction of F. Walter Crinnion of the Alameda County Automobile Trade Association, were open automobiles, including ten new Overland "Four" cars donated for the use of the committee through the courtesy of Harold Knudson, manager of the Oakland Willys Overland Company.

A battery of camera and motion picture men were on the green in front of the hotel and occupied one of the cars in the line that followed.

RUBINI STANDS IN MOTOR

De Rubini, Rosborough, Kahn and Brother Agnon occupied first car, which was driven by Crinnion of the committee in person. De Rubini stood leaning against the windshield, bare-headed, his boyish face preoccupied. Behind him his three conductors bent their eyes and thought upon him.

Out into Thirteenth street swept the cavalcade, de Rubini pointing his way to Crinnion as his thought was actuated by his conductors. Making a grand circle on Thirteenth at Alice, he headed for Broadway. At Webster he turned toward the south and again wheeled, sensing an unspoken correction.

Again he proceeded toward

Cubist Poet and Play Writer Says West Lags Behind and Is Slow to Warm to New Thrills

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—Departing today for the "broader climes" of the East, Alfred Kreymborg, leader of the "new school" of poets and writer of cubist plays, voiced this farewell to the bay section after two months in its environs:

"The West must come out of its 'pioneer' state," he said. "It must welcome and accept new things. In the East some of the 'newer' things in art are merely laughed at while the West becomes absolutely hostile. I have been well treated here and it is for the other 'adventurers' in the world art that I plead."

OH' PURPLE TOAD !!' PLEASE PASS THE SOUP MY SHOES NEED HALF SOLING SWEET - SWEET JULIA!!
I'LL BITE - WHAT'S THE ANSWER ?
COO COO !!

EAST LIKES "NEW" THINGS, HE SAYS

"It is easy to slide along in a well worn groove doing the same old things in the same old way, but it is the man or woman who tries something new, who braves ridicule that is the real hero or heroine."

Kreymborg says the West is "away behind the times."

"All this controversy over the 'new art' was settled in the East five or six years ago," he said. "It's an old, old story. New York [illegible] for something new, for new thrills, new sensations, while here you fight 'em off."

Kreymborg laughs at the criticism hurled at "free verse" writers by Charles Keeler, Berkeley poet and president of the California Writers' Club. Keeler classified the artistic output of today as the result of "cosmic insanity" at a recent gathering of the College Women's Club

GARBAGE CAN IS INSPIRATION OF PLAY

While in Berkeley Kreymborg presided at the debut of a new play, "Monday," a "lame minuet for poor people." According to the author's own description the play has as its inspiration a garbage can on the third floor of a New York tenement. Its characters are six housewives who while waiting to empty their garbage discuss the affairs of the universe, principally husbands. Aided by Mrs. Dorothy Kreymborg and the latter's puppets the play was produced in Wheeler Auditorium.

Skull and Keys Is Arraigned By Faculty at U.C.

Students Must Be More Manly Is Professor's Comment on Campus Fiasco.

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—"University of California students must be manly in more than form alone. The campus is a place for decency, where womanhood must be respected. It is time that college students arrive at a state of manhood where their actions typify the best things of life that their university stands for."

Arraignment of the members of the Skull and Keys Society, honor organization on the college campus, was thus voiced today by Professor R. L. Adams, acting chairman of the students' affairs committee of the academic senate, with Professors Joel H. Hildebrand and W. S. Morley. Professor Adams was responsible for the suspension of two senior students from the university and the punishment of other members of the honor society for risque stunts staged at the annual initiation of the organization on California Field.

That John L. Butler of San Francisco and Herndon H. Cobb of Berkeley, the two senior students suspended, were barred from the campus not because they were ring-leaders of the show, but because of their particularly vivid acting was revealed this afternoon by the committee.

In the stunt in question entitled "Sinful Follies," or "A Night in the Creole," Butler impersonated a prominent member of the Phi Beta Phi Sorority, while to Cobb fell the lot of ridiculing J. W. Cline, president of the Associated Students.

Coming in the wake of the recent scandal involving the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the closing of the local chapter house on the order of President David P. Barrows, today's Skull and Keys developments has aroused college students anew.

Of the three acts censored by the faculty committee as "vulgar" and "indecent," one entitled "The Greek Letter Hen House Meets," a satire on a sorority house, showed men students impersonating co-eds in various stages of disrobement, with prominent college women made the objectives.

Members of the society will hold a conference next week to decide on a delegate to present a public apology to the student body at next Friday's university meeting.

Berkeley Woman Hurt in Auto Accident

Two persons received slight injuries in an automobile accident on the Foothill Boulevard at "death curve" last night and after being treated were taken to 1819 Alcatraz avenue, Berkeley, in the county hospital ambulance.

The hospital records give names of the injured as Mrs. Mulcain and A. D. Ward, both of the address to which they were taken. Mrs. Mulcain received a deep cut on the left leg together with slight bruises. Ward suffered only from shock and a few scratches from flying glass.

The accident occurred when the automobile they were driving left the road and crashed into a telephone pole.

Worrying Over Arrest Of Son Kills Mother

Parent of Driver, Whose Auto Caused Veteran's Death, Dies in Hospital.

Worrying over the troubles of her son, Oliver C. Horsfall, chauffeur for an auto stage company, who on August 24 ran down and killed R. A. Cook, wounded war veteran and University of California student, Mrs. Annie C. Hutton died yesterday at an Oakland hospital.

Mrs. Hutton, who was 60 years old, called the nurse attending her and asked to be propped up in bed while she prayed for her son. Ten minutes later she died.

Mrs. Hutton's death ends one of the most unusual stories of mother devotion. Her son was arrested and bound over to the Superior Court on September 16 on a charge of manslaughter. His bail was fixed at $5000. Mrs. Hutton went before the Berkeley police officials and made a plea for the release of her son which had its effect upon the officers of the law. He was all she had, Mrs. Hutton told them, and his release, she said, would probably save her from death. "It will kill me," she moaned.

BOY'S RELEASE FAILS TO COMFORT HER.

Two days later Horsfall was released from jail so that he could support his mother. His trial was set for next Thursday.

Mrs. Hutton refused to be happy, after her son was released. She would lie at night and moan of the coming trial. Her son often went to her bedside at their home at 1221 Jefferson street to soothe her. It became necessary to remove her to the hospital, where, yesterday, she felt death approaching and had her nurse phone for her son.

It was in order to be with him that Mrs. Hutton sold her property in Kentucky and came to Oakland.

SON MUST FACE TRIAL HERE.

The body is to be shipped back to Kentucky to Mrs. Hutton's daughter, Mrs. A. E. Frederickson, who wired instructions to that effect upon being informed of her mother's death. The body will be shipped promptly, but the son, the life-long companion of a mother whose love towered above all other things of life, will remain here to face the charge of manslaughter. He will be tried before his mother will have been buried.

Horsfall's defense, it is understood, will be based upon orders of the stage company issued to him to make the run between Richmond and Oakland in 35 minutes. Horsfall, at the time of his preliminary hearing, said the drivers of the company were required to make the run on schedule time.

ROY WOLFF NOT TO DIE ON GALLOWS

Death Sentence of Youthful Murderer and Mental Delinquent Is Commuted to Life Term by Governor

Petitions for Clemency From Women Clubs and Reports From Prison Board Cited in Message of Executive

BY UNITED PRESS.
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—Governor William D. Stephens today commuted the sentence of Roy Wolff of Bakersfield, sentenced to hang October 22, to life imprisonment.

Wolff, who is 17 years old, was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Elmer Greer of Bakersfield.

Following the sentencing of Wolff a coast-wide movement to bring pressure to bear on Governor Stephens to stop execution of the sentence, was started. Women's clubs, social workers and newspapers conducted campaigns to save the boy from the gallows. It was urged that it was disgraceful to hang a youth of his age.

The fact that his parents, who reside in Yakima, Wash., and members of his family were highly respected citizens of their home community, was urged in his favor.

Wolff originally was sentenced to be hanged during September, but at that time he was granted a reprieve until October 22.

"I am of the opinion that the full intent of the law will be served by the imprisonment of Roy Wolff for the period of his natural life," said the governor in commuting the sentence.

GOVERNOR RECITES APPEALS FOR MERCY.

He added: "The responsibility of commuting the sentence is mine and after a careful examination of the facts and nature of the crime, I have come to the same conclusion as reached by the advisory pardon board. The history of the boy indicates that he appears to be a defective delinquent."

The governor pointed out that the appeal for clemency for Wolff was nation-wide. Thousands of letters, petitions and appeals asking for the commuting of the death sentence to life imprisonment came from clubs, churches, officials and citizens from all parts of the national convention.

"It being apparent to me that the prisoner at the time of the commission of the crime was subnormal and of an intelligence of a level far below his acual age in years and therefore cannot be held to the strict accountability of a person of normal mentality."

Dr. J. Harold Williams, of the state bureau of juvenile research, and Dr. Louis M. Terman, Stanford psychologist, in their report to Governor Stephens, declared that if the death sentence were commuted the prisoner should be kept in custody as feeble minded.

HISTORY OF CRIME SHOWS BRUTALITY.

Elmer Greer, whom Wolff killed, died on an operating table in a Bakersfield hospital, the night following the attack. Wolff hired Greer, who was a taxi driver, to take him one night from Bakersfield to another point in Kern county. While enroute, according to testimony at the trial, he succeeded in having Greer stop the automobile and while Greer was not looking, hit him over the head with a hammer. He was later arrested and convicted of the crime.

The advisory pardons board investigated the case of Wolff and recommended life imprisonment in place of the death penalty.

Wolff's birth certificate showed him to have been born September 15, 1903. His mother testified that her son had suffered several injuries to his head when a small child. He was a poor tsudent in school and completed but four years of the grammar grades.

After exhaustive mental examinations, Doctors Williams and Terman declared Wolff had the mentality of a child of 11 or 12 years.

'Over Top' With Rush Is Slogan Of G. O. P. Men

Ranks Closed for Drive to Win Congress As Well As Presidency.

Special to The OAKLAND TRIBUNE.
(Copyright, 1920, by the Washington Star.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The week just ended has witnessed a very remarkable rise, followed by a measurable subsidence, of Democratic hopes. The taking over by President Wilson of leadership on the League of Nations issue undoubtedly served to cheer up Democrats everywhere and add new confidence and aggressiveness to the campaign. This, coupled with prospects that there might be a serious break in the Republican ranks over the same issue, made things look better for Cox and Roosevelt than at any time since the campaign opened.

But later in the week the outlook for a serious split in the Republican ranks began to fade away. Then came the "round robin," urging support of Harding and Coolidge signed by thirty prominent Republicans, many of whom had been consistent advocates of the League of Nations. Republican managers breathed easier when this appeared, accepting it as effective stopping anything like a stampede away from the national ticket. The net result of the week's developments, therefore, would seem to be an increased Democratic confidence and additional aggressiveness [illegible] Republican confidence and aggressiveness having been seriously weakened.

SWEEPING REPUBLICAN VICTORY IS PREDICTED

Impartial sizing up of the situation as contained in despatches to the Star from its special political correspondents gives no reason to change previous forecasts that the outlook is for a sweeping Republican victory. Even if the tide now has turned toward the Democratic ticket, as there seems no reason to dout it has in some parts of the country, the time probably is too short for it to effect a reversal of the situation. With election day but little more than two weeks distant, it would take a tidal wave to sweep Cox and Roosevelt to victory, and there is no evidence that the change in sentiment will reach tidal wave proportions.

One of the most discouraging reports, from a Democratic viewpoint, comes from New York State. Belief had been planted in New York Democracy that whatever might happen to the national ticket and the party candidate for United States Senator, Governor Alfred Smith was practically assured of re-election. But now, according to the Star's Albany correspondent, even this hope seems likely to prove vain. The conclusion has been reached that Governor Smith is doomed to go down in defeat along with the rest of the Democratic ticket. Both the Democrats and Republicans are making a "whirlwind finish" of the campaign in New York, and their speakers are attracting large crowds; but, according to the report, not many votes are being changed. Lack of enthusiasm for the candidates apparently sums up the situation. It is admitted that Senator aHrding, personally, is weak with New York voters, but he has the popular end of the issues and is not unacceptable as a candidate.

COX' IRISH STAND IS FORLORN HOPE

A good deal of enthusiasm has been aroused by Governor Cox recently by his pronouncements on the Irish question, but, the correspondent shrewdly observes, the enthusiasm is confined largely to a class of voters who have been for Cox all along. Particular attention from now on will be devoted to the development of the New York situation, because conditions in New York are typical of those in other Eastern States. It is not conceded that Governor Cox could not possibly be elected without New York, but it will be conceded that in order to win he must get some electoral votes in the East, and the same factors that are operating against him in New York are operating also in New Jersey, Connecticut and elsewhere.

In Ohio, Indiana and other Middle Western States the campaign seems to be moving along the expected lines, with the prediction strong that Harding will carry them by substantial, if not phenomenal, pluralities. Democrats in Indiana have not abandoned hope that they will be able to elect Taggart to the United States eSnate, defeating Senator "Jim" Watson, renominated by the Republicans to succeed himself. The Indianapolis correspondent of the Star states that if Harding carries the State by 50,000 or more Watson will pull through, but if Harding's plurality drops to [illegible] or lower the Senator will be [illegible]. There is a tremendous registration in Indiana, and some apprehension is expressed that [illegible] that [illegible] overtax the facilities at the polling places. [illegible] equipped with voting machines auxiliary paper ballots will have to be provided, for it would not be possible for all those registered to vote by machine.

One of the most hopeful Democratic notes of the week comes from

POLICE WILL AID U. S. IN BOOZE PROBE

Lieutenant Goff of Morals Squad Released by City to Help the Federal Sleuths Run Down Bootlegging Ring

District Attorney Silva Is Investigating Report That Douglas Newton Was Seen Walking in Marin County

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The government's investigation into the existence of a bootlegging ring in San Francisco apparently centered up to tonight on preparations for the extra sessions of the Federal grand jury which begin next Tuesday. Federal officials admit there new developments:

Lieutenant of Police Charles Goff of the moral squad and United States Attorney Frank M. Silva hold a prolonged conference which began this afternoon and ended early this evening, shortly after it was announced Goff's aid had been enlisted in the investigation.

Admission by government operatives that they had been unable to apprehend Paul Schaluman, sought in connection with the seizure yesterday of 3000 gallons of whisky, valued at approximately $150,000, in a freight car in the Santa Fe yards

Investigation into reports that Douglas Newton, one of six men charged with conspiring illegally to withdraw liquor from a bonded warehouse, was seen walking in Baltimore Park, Marin county, several days ago and had been booked at a local hospital last Thursday despite the fact he was brought today into United States Commissioner Krull's Court on a stretcher apparently helpless from injuries received in an automobile accident the latter part of September

POLICE MORAL SQUAD CHIEF TAKES HAND

Particular importance is attached to Lieutenant Goff's appointment as an aid in the government operatives although both the police and government officials de- [illegible] any extent

"We requested the police temporarily to release Lieutenant Goff in view of his peculiar knowledge of underworld and liquor violation conditions in San Francisco," declared Justus S. Wardell, internal revenue collector, "but beyond that I do not deem it advisable for any extended discussion of what Goff will do."

At the conclusion of his conference with Silva, Goff declined to state what the nature of the interview, merely admitting that he would appoint other men as aides if such assistance became necessary. Silva also declined to comment on Goff's appointment, explaining it would be premature at this time.

NEWTON REPORTED SEEN WALKING IN PARK

Operatives who have been working on the investigation said they had come into possession of information from men assigned to shadow Newton had reported that Newton was seen strolling about Baltimore Park several days ago, the only apparent indication of his injuries being a slight limp and one of his arms carried in a sling. It also is reported that Newton's admission to a local hospital occurred three days ago.

Newton was taken before Commissioner Krull on a stretcher carried by two internes. He was strapped to the stretcher and apparently was in distress.

Strike of Coal Miners Staggers Great Britain; Economic Empire Rent

London, Darkened By Strike, Revives Memories of War

(By United Press)

LONDON, Oct. 16.—London tonight resembled the London of the world war. The streets of the city were darkened as on the night of an air raid, as a result of an order to cut off display lighting to conserve coal.

All electric signs in Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square were turned off, giving those famous places what is now associated with a martial air. Street lighting was also curtailed in all other British cities.

In many other ways the situation in London was reminiscent of war time as numerous food regulations also became effective, automatically with the starting of the strike. Several special war-time departments of the government were revived for the occasion.

All Europe Hit By Strike; Food Famine Certain

Official Washington Aroused by Menace of Big World Economic Calamity.

BY UNITED PRESS.
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The general strike of British coal miners unless brought to a quick conclusion will prove a world-wide economic calamity, in the opinion of officials here today.

The industrial and even political consequences are likely to be far reaching.

Europe's need for coal before the strike began was so urgent that in Italy manufacturers were glad to pay from $25 to $30 a ton for American coal which cost $10 at the docks in New York. France, Belgium, Holland and the Scandinavian countries depend in great part on England for coal.

With British coal exports embargoed, the factories of Europe will be forced to close, officials here said today. Millions of workers may be thrown out of employment.

Higher prices for food throughout Europe probably will be the first direct result of the British strike, it was believed here

The strike also will have a deterrent effect on world distribution of food and manufactured commodities through the coal bunkering factor, it was pointed out. British coal is used to bunker ships of all nations in all parts of the world. With the supply of bunker coal shut off by the strike, ships may have to tie up and lie idle in scores of ports, it is feared.

Walkout Affects French Factories

(By Universal Service).

PARIS, Oct. 16.—(Special Cable Despatch).—The British coal strike threatens to close down French factories in which thousands of workmen are employed. England, until the coal embargo of yesterday stopped shipments, sent coal to France at the rate of three-quarters of a million tons a month.

Three men and a woman are aboard Amundsen's vessel, the Maude. The woman is a native taken aboard at Nome as a seamstress.

RAILWAY MEN THREATEN TO STOP TRAINS

Million Workers Drop Tools and Quit Pits As Orders From Union Go Into Effect; London Almost in Darkness

Lloyd George Says Government Will Triumph; Scores Act of Labor; Troops Aided by 3000 Tanks Patrolling

By Universal Service.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The strike of the British coal miners—the greatest economic battle of all times—tonight was an accomplished fact.

Responding to the strike order which went to every district of the miners' federation, the grimy workers started dropping their tools at noon today and now it is a certainty that more than 1,000,000 men and boys will be out by tomorrow.

The bright theater lights and all other illumination that is not absolutely necessary is out tonight. London is dark. Almost as dark as it was in the days of raiding Zeppelins. Motors are being mobilized for the transportation of food should the coal supply of the railroads give out or should the railwaymen join the strike. British troops are stationed at strategic points in the coal fields and in the larger cities where there might be danger of the idle thousands turning to mischief.

TROOPS SUPPORTED BY 3000 TANKS

The troops, it is reliably understood, are supported by 3000 tanks.

The British nation has been made to realize the full seriousness of the situation by statements from Premier Lloyd George and from the miners.

"The nation is confronted with a coal strike. The government has made every effort consistent with its duty as trustee for the people to avert this calamity. The government offered to submit the miners' claim for an increase in wages to an impartial tribunal and to abide by the result. This offer was refused. The government offered to give the increase asked for if the miners would restore the present low production of coal to the figures of the early part of the present year.

"This, too, the miners refused against the advice of their most experienced leaders. They are attempting now to gain their ends by force. The nation must and will resist such an attack with all its strength and there can be no doubt as to the issue

NATION WILL WIN, PREMIER ASSERTS.

"No one need underrate the damage which this strike will do, but no one will be dismayed. We have been through too much more difficult times. With steady purpose and with determination to do justice, the nation will overcome all of its difficulties."

He asked for calmness and said that no persons should be laid off from work until their dismissal is absolutely necessary.

The miners' statement reads:

"After allowing ample time for negotiations and modifying the claims and twice suspending the strike, thus showing our anxiety to avoid the conflict, we were forced to strike by the unyielding attitude of the government in the face of reasonable claims warranted by the cost of living. We know the suffering on ourselves, our families and the public that the strike involves, but the government's attitude did not leave an honorable alternative"

MINERS ASK BOOST OF 40 CENTS A DAY.

The miners are asking an increase of 40 cents a day. It was demanded on a showing that the miners are worse off, that their standard of living is lower now than before the war, because the increase in wages was not as great as the increase in the cost of living.

There are two outstanding questions now in the minds of the people. These are: Can the government stand up under the punishment the strike will visit on Great Britain beyond the point at which the minters will be forced to return to work through the approach of starvation? And will the railwaymen and transport workers join the miners' strike?

The last question is uppermost. J. H. Thomas, leader of the railway men, tonight is in conference with Premier Lloyd George. The government will bend every effort toward preventing the railway men from joining in the realization that to beat such a strike would be a gigantic task.

AGGRESSIVE ELEMENT WOULD WALK OUT

The more aggressive element of the railway men is bent on the sympathetic strike. What the action is to be will be decided Wednesday when the delegates meet. Today C. T. Cramp, assistant secretary of the union, warned the branches that a serious situation for labor would result if the strike is beaten. He instructed the branches to be ready to follow the word that is given them from Wednesday's meeting.

The Welsh miners are well fixed for funds and will be able to purchase food just as long as the rest of the community. But in other sections, notably in Scotland, the miners have not laid in a great financial store and may feel the pinch of want driving them back to work within a short time.

MINERS' STRIKE DEALS BLOW TO BRITISH EMPIRE

ECONOMIC EMPIRE TORN BY WALKOUT

But while this process is going on, Great Britain will see its real empire—not the political one, but the economic one of shipping and manufacturing—slipping away from it. Great Britain supplies about half the continental coal and her factories turning out everything from toys to locomotives, supply a substantial portion of the world.

With the coal supply halted those factories will stop. Several blast furnaces have quit already. Shipping has been hit and will be hit harder and harder as the strike progresses. Men and women workers will be laid off. The problem of feeding will grow. There will be pressure from the continental countries for coal. And thta pressure will be felt because coal pays for a great deal of the English imports.

The strikers in quitting the mines left a sufficient number of men to prevent damage to the mines by water or other natural causes. The pumps will be kept running. This means that when the settlement is effected the men can go to work at once without the delay that might be occasioned by the flooding of the pits.

Reports from many places in England tonight showed how quickly the strike will hit the industrial plants.

At Bolton notice was posted in industrial plants that on account of lack of fuel they will be closed Monday. Twenty thousand men will be thrown out of work.

At Manchester most of the great plants posted notices that they will be closed beginning Monday for an indefinite period.

At York it was announced that the Yorkshire iron works will close Monday for an indefinite time. Twenty thousand men are affected.

At Sheffield most of the small cutlery and metal firms have announced suspension of work.

The London newspapers have blossomed out with "advice to the people" prominently displayed on front pages.

"There is no need of panic. Keep cool. Save coal," is one that has attracted attention.

The Chronicle, the semi-official mouthpiece of Premier Lloyd George, described the situation as "creeping paralysis." It predicted a rise in the cost of necessaries in a short time.

DYING, WALKS TEN BLOCKS.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 16.—Mrs. Wilhelmina Horgan, 24, swallowed [illegible] here tonight, walked ten blocks to a hospital, collapsed on the walk and died an hour later. She left a note saying her domestic life was unhappy.

Effect of Mine Strike On British Industry Instant

By CHARLES McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The effect of the coal miners' strike on industry was instantaneous. Despite the fact there was sufficient coat to last a few days, iron and steel mills in the Yorkshire district closed voluntarily. It was estimated that in the Tee-Side district more than ten thousand metal workers would be idle Monday.

An embargo on coal exports already was in effect. This also applied to bunker coal for foreign vessels and only coastwise vessels were receiving their quota today. It was planned to have trans-Atlantic steamers carry only sufficient fuel for a one-way trip, recoaling on the other side.

ECONOMY PRACTICED.

Individual and corporations began practicing economy in the use of light, heat and power generated from coal, in accordance with the plans outlined by the government. Shipment of non-essential freight was banned. Passenger traffic was not expected to be seriously affected for a few days

In his statement, Lloyd George recited the progress of negotiations between miners and owners, with the part played by the government. His statement was supplemented by a speech in Dundee by Winston Churchill, who severely arraigned the miners for insisting on on a flat wage increase of 50 cents a day instead of accepting a scale based on increased production as proposed by the government.

MOTORS TURNED OVER.

Hundreds of middle class volunteers presented themselves at the ministry of transportation today, offering any assistance needed. Many of them also turned over their automobiles, adding to the already considerable motor transport which the government will use for transportation of food in the event of a railway tieup.

Should the railway men and transport workers decide to cast their lot with the miners, the fear is expressed that the strike would drift into a struggle between organied labor and unorganized masses, as represented by the middle class workers who volunteered their services to the government today.

Chief of Railway Union Warns Men Against Walkout

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Immediately after his conference with other leaders, J. H. Thomas, head of the railwaymen's union, issued a warning to all members of that organization not to precipitate a crisis; but to await the decision of the union's executive body.

His warning was designed particularly to restrain the rail men in South Wales who are impatient to walk out in sympathy with the miners.

Thomas' appeal came as a great relief both to the public and to the government, as it was interpreted as meaning he will continue his fight against a sympathetic strike by the rail men. His success or failure in that fight, however, depends upon the attitude of the pro-strike members of the union's executive committee.

Los Angeles Hotels Filled With Japanese

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—An unusually large number of Japanese men of affairs from all parts of the world have arrived in Los Angeles within the last few days, according to the registers of leading hotels. One hostelry stated that it has a larger number of Japanese guests than ever before.

Chief Special Agent Frank M. Sturges, in charge of the local office of the Department of Justice, stated, in speaking of the influx of Japanese, that "it seemed rather peculiar and I am at a loss to account for it, unless the people are interested in the land legislation question and are here working to defeat it."

RUSS MODERATE DENOUNCES ACTS OF BOLSHEVISM

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—(Special Cable Despatch)—Martoff, head of the Mensheviki, the moderate Socialist party of Russia, in a speech to the Independent Socialist convention at Halle today, opposed Bolshevism. He is a delegate to the convention and said that he had been instructed by his party to disclose the true facts regarding the Russian regime.

There was an uproar when he said that Zinovieff, who was present at the meeting, had 800 persons executed in Petrograd in one night. Zinovieff was head of the third internationale.

"Among the 800," said Martoff, "were many of my own party. When Zinovieff claims that the executions were made because of attempts on the life of Premier Lenine he lies."

Martoff said hundreds of persons were perishing in the Russian jails because they differed from the political belief of the Bolshevists and related that sometimes women were seized as hostages for political peace.

"We call upon the proletariat of Europe," he continued, "to declare that terrorism is not permissible, even for Russia, and that the Russian proletariat is in disgrace before the entire world. I received instructions from my party to call upon you to war against capitalism but at the same time I am to disclose the terrible rule of the Bolshevists."

He said that the [illegible] that western Europe is ripe for revolution was nonsense and that not in any of the countries did even the preliminary conditions for revolution obtain.

ASSUMED NAMES HIDE RECONCILED NIXON-D'ALERIAS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—They are registered at the Savoy here as "Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Benson," and they are occupying a light gray suite on one of the topmost floors, a second honeymoon. To those who succeed in making the elevator trip to the suite and who pass the maid stationed at the door, they make no pretense of denying that the name Benson was chosen for convenience and that they are in reality Count and Countess Armand D'Aleria.

Once again everything is lovely in the romance of the widow of Senator Nixon of Nevada and the motion picture organist who lays claim to a Spanish title.

WIDOW WEALTHY.

They were married in February, parted in March, speaking harshly of each other in April, and were applying for divorce in June. The countess, it will be remembered, discovered D'Aleria in the apartments of another woman and threatened to use this damaging evidence in her suit. She said, at the time that she had been disillusioned and that she was through with the youthful husband. Mrs. D'Aleria is reputed to be worth close to $2,000,000 and has passed her fiftieth year.

Count D'Aleria languished in jail after his wife had sued him for divorce and as a consequence of the discoveries made in the other apartment.

When he was released he started in again in the role of the wooer and so convincing he became that the reconciliation followed.

WOULD BE FORGOTTEN.

Both maintain with great earnestness that nothing but old-fashioned and true love is responsible for the romance. Thoughts that money might have had anything to do with it, are banished with disdain, and the count is insistent that a mutual liking for music is no more than a contributing cause for their happiness

"We wish to be forgotten," is the message sent out by the honeymooners who intimate that the unpleasantness of recent experiences has taught them some valuable lessons

May Diplomats Bring Rum To U. S.? Rulings at Odds

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The State Department and the bureau of internal revenue are at odds over prohibition enforcement, it was learned this afternoon, when the State Department announced that it would protect the rights of diplomats accredited to this nation in regard to the bringing of their luggage and effects into the United States without inspection, a custom which has been observed throughout the world for fifty years.

The bureau of investigation issued orders a few days ago that all persons making entry into this country should have their effects subjected to inspection by dry agents. The State Department announced that this order cannot be enforced insofar as it affects diplomats

MAY RECEIVE LIQUOR.

It was also declared by State Department officials that diplomats within this country may have liquor shipped to them with immunity.

The clash between the two departments occurred when the Spanish vice consel at Norfolk, Va., forwarded to the Spanish embassy at Washington a copy of his letter to Collector of Customs Norman R. Hamilton protesting against the raid made on the Spanish steamer Salvadore in Hampton Roads last Tuesday night by dry agents.

According to the ruling of the State Department no diplomatic agent or any member of his family can be made to submit to the searching of his baggage.

OPINIONS DIFFER.

The State Department statement said that in several recent instances trunks and other baggage belonging to members of the diplomatic corps had been searched upon arrival in this country and that wine and other liquors had been removed. In some cases, the liquor which was seized and held for further claim for the owner had disappeared before it could be called for.

The instructions from the bureau of internal revenue to its agents direct that all baggage will be searched, regardless of the traditional practice of waiving examination of baggage and personal effects belonging to foreign representatives accredited by the American government.

Coughlin Kidnaper's Denial Is Given Lie

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 16.—"August Pasquale kidnaped Blakely Coughlin and disposed of the body, throwing it into the Schuylkill river as he stated in his own confession," said Major Lynn G. "The confession coincides and tallies with all the circumstances of the case and dovetails to the last detail with facts which we had already known," said Major Adams. "Pasquale told things that no one else but the actual kidnaper could have known. In spite of all that is being said by people that know absolutely nothing of the details of the case, I am certain that Pasquale kidnaped the child and that he disposed of the body as he told in his confession."

RESERVE BANKERS OUTLINE POLICIES

By RALPH F. COUCH,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The Federal Reserve Board and governors of the federal reserve banks adjourned their fall conferences here today with a statement expressing satisfaction with the result of policies put into effect last spring.

The nation-wide price cutting was due to these policies, according to business men, farmers and economists. Farmers this week presented demands for a change of policy, declaring lack of credit forced them to market crops at a loss

The board believes it is doing all it can for the farmers, it said in its statement today.

The statement was also interpreted as meaning that discount rates, raised last spring to halt wild speculation in foodstuffs and necessities, will not be changed for the present

The action of the board or lack of it is very unsatisfactory, said Charles Barrett, head of the national board of farm organizations and one of the protest leaders.

The board declared in its statement that credit, instead of having been curtailed, has really been expanded and that loans by system banks have increased approximtaely $1,800,000,000 since January 1. Of this approximately $500,000,000 is agricultural paper, the statement emphasized

FRANCE WILLING FOR NEW LEAGUE, STATES HARDING

By Universal Service.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 16.—That the republic of France had sent its spokesman to him informally to ask that America lead the way in a new association of nations, was the surprise sprung by Senator Warren G. Harding today.

This statement made by the candidate during a short stop at Greencastle, Ind., this morning, was a direct reply to Secretary of State Colby who, in reports published today stated that only those countries now outside the present league of nations would be inclined to join any new world association.

FRANCE SENDS AGENT.

Senator Harding said:

"I notice in the morning papers that the secretary of state has said that the kind of world association I am proposing cannot likely be made with anybody except the nations now out of the president's league. Secretary Colby speaks for the state department of our own America and he ought to be prudent and thoughtful about what he says. But he says that America under a proposed association can only associate with the central empires and Turkey and a few other nations with whom we were engaged in war. Why, my countrymen, France is asking. France has sent her spokesman to me informally, asking America in its new realization of the situation to lead the way for an association of nations. England has said through Lloyd George and through Earl Grey that America must revise and amend and make the league of nations possible. They all recognize the demand for American leadership. If there is to be a league of the nations of the world, my countrymen, it ought to be one big enough and broad enough to take in all of the nations of the world, else one group will be organized and arrayed against another."

COLBY WANTS DETAILS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—(United Press.)—Senator Warren G. Harding's statement at Green Castle, Ind., today, that representatives of France and England have approached him relative to an association of nations was met by Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state, with a demand tonight that the representatives be named, and Harding tell "just how they approached him."

Colby's original charge that an association of nations as suggested by the Republican nominee is prevented by Article 20 of the covenant of the league of nations brought forth Harding's assertion today.

In an interview tonight Colby declared the language of Article 20, that member nations will not enter into "any engagement inconsistent with the terms" of the league, "cannot be met by evasion and irrelevance."

Harding Is Given Ovation by 15,000 St. Louis Audience

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

COLISEUM, ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 16.—A deafening thirty-minute demonstration by a crowd of 15,000 that packed the Coliseum here greeted Senator Warren G. Harding as he came out on the platform to wind up his last big campaign tour tonight.

Senator Spencer, Missouri, chairman, spent five minutes bringing the tumultuous gathering to silence.

The ovation far outstripped any of his campaign.

A new era in our relations with Mexico in the near future was forecast in his speech, urging development of closer trade relations with that country and all of South and Central America.

FOREIGN MARKETS NEEDED.

America's foreign markets must be developed largely in South America, Asia, Africa and Oceania, Harding said, but this must be on a basis of equal advantage to all, not exploitation.

"I foresee at no distant time, under a wise and steadfast foreign policy, a new era in our relations with Mexico, a new epoch of developmen must be along lines representing the advantage of all who shall participate in it," Harding said. "We will not seek anything like the privilege of more exploitation. It must be our aim to give generously of opportunity and advantage to those by whose development we hope it reasonably to profit. We must make our friends and neighbors of Latin America all the way from the Rio Grande to Cape Horn understand and believe that we seek no advantage for ourselves that we shall not imply at least an equal measure of advantage for them. I believe we can be useful and helpful to them, as I believe they can be helpful and useful to us."

INLAND WATERWAYS.

The Mississippi Valley, Harding said, is the natural gateway to the republics to the south and he urged greater development of inland waterways to facilitate cheap transportation for this commerce.

Europe will not absorb American commodities as she did before the war, and hence new markets must be found in the less developed quarters of the globe, Harding said.

He warned that America will only get these markets in face of fierce competition by Europe and the American government therefore, he said, should offer all possible assistance short of making up deficits or assuming a paternalistic attitude.

Daniels Calls on Barnett To Explain Haiti Charges

By A. D. BRADFORD.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—General George Barnett will be called by a naval board of inquiry to explain his charge that "indiscriminate killing of Haitians by American Marines had gone on "for some time," Secretary of the Navy Daniels declared tonight.

If Barnett stands by his statement, the board will inquire "why this situation was not corrected by Barnett as former commandant of the Marine corps, Daniels' continued. Should Barnett be found to have been lax, recommendation for action against him will be returned by the board, according to Daniels.

Further fuel to the controversy was added tonight by John Barrett, former director of the Pan-American Union, who said the occupation of Haiti had been a "serious handicap to the Pan-American influence and prestige of the United States."

Barrett said his statement had been prepared in response to special request from a member of the senate foreign relations committee. He added:

"Without criticising the government or administration but answering frankly a legitimate question, I must admit that it is regretfully true that the United States' occupation of Haiti and even the methods employed there have been and are a most serious handicap to the Pan-American influence and prestige of the United States."

Secretary Daniels said he would see General Barnett in Washihngton tonight before leaving for Missouri on a campaign speaking tour. He said he was perfectly confident that Barnett would issue a statement explaining the charge of "indiscriminate killings."

Harding in 'No Man's' Land, Declares Cox

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 16.—Senator Harding, because of his "wobbling attitude" toward the League of Nations, "is now in No Man's Land, yelling: 'Kamerad! Kamerad!' to the hosts of peace." Governor Cox asserted here tonight in concluding the tenth week of one of the most extensive presidential stump campaigns ever undertaken.

Confidently predicting his election, the governor said:

"The American people are for the League of Nations: the mongrel campaign has failed." By his "twelve somersaults on the league issue," Senator Harding has lost public confidence. Cox claimed. Cox directed his fire at the Dupont munitions maker, calling him "the Krupp of America." and George Sylvester Viereck, former publisher of The Fatherland.

Republicans Will Not Shirk, Says Butler

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 16.—A Republican administration, with Senator Harding as president, would not shirk from its responsibility as a member of a league of nations, though it would not become associated with the existing League of Nations, declared Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in an address here tonight.

"They are mistaken who think the Republican party if entrusted with the responsibility for the administration of the government, will enter upon any backward course," said Butler.

VALLEJO "Y" FUND GROWS.

VALLEJO, Ot. 16.—Contributions for the Y. W. C. A. home here this week have reached the $4000 mark. The drive committee expects to raise another $4000 for the Y. W. C. A.

G. O. P. HOPE TO CARRY CONGRESS WITH PRESIDENCY

Kentucky, where both parties are whooping things up for a rousing finish. The very biggest oratorical guns are being sent into the State. Kentuckyans dearly love oratory, and as it is predicted that the outcome will depend on the way the women vote, the oratory is addressed largely to the ladies, and, of course, is more flowery and fervid than ever. The League of Nations is practically the only issue discussed and the Democrats profess to believe that an overwhelming majority of women are for the league.

From a number of States comes word that interest is keener in the Senatorial and Congressional elections than in the contest for the presidency. This is especially true in States where it is conceded that Harding will get the electoral votes but where factional strife makes it possible for the Democrats to pick up seats in the Senate or House. The National Republican management does not attempt any concealment of the fact that it is worried over Congress. If there is a landslide for the presidential ticket, of course, it is likely to make both houses safely Republican, but in the event of a close contest, loff of the Senate, and possibly of the House, is an uncomfortable possibility. The final two weeks of the campaign, therefore, are bound to see an intense fight in doubtful States, where Senatorial seats are at stake and in close Congressional districts everywhere. The possibility that the Republicans may pick up a few House seats in far Southern States is not being overlooked.

In the event of a close margin in the lower house of Congress, two or three Republican Congressmen from below the Mason and Dixon line would be handy things to have around.

Political Notes

Announcement was made yesterday from the headquarters of the Phelan for Senator Non-Partisan Club of Alameda County that John Francis Neylan, progressive leader, personal friend and adviser of Senator Johnson and delegate to the recent National Republican convention, had come out with a strong endorsement for Senator Phelan.

P. E. Ferguson, campaign director for Alameda county, issued a statement declaring that during the three days of the club's existence 1200 members had been enrolled, predicting that before the end of next week more than 10,000 active workers for Senator Phelan would have joined the ranks. He expressed confidence that the senator would carry Alameda county.

Friday night in Wheeler auditorium, Berkeley, Attorney Theodore A. Bell of San Francisco delivered an address on the League of Nations. The speaker concluded his remarks by saying: "Time was when men settled their personal differences by what was called the 'wager of battle.' Might was right. Out of the welter of blood and tears now comes a great world court to adjudicate many issues that have heretofore been left to a decision upon the field of slaughter. If the league accomplished no more than that, it should be blessed. And when we have entered the league then may America say to every other nation on earth, as Jonathan said to David, 'Go in peace, for as much as we have sworn, both of us, in the name of the Lord, saying: The Lord be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed forever.'"

The directors of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce do not express the sentiments of the membership of that body when they declare their opposition to the anti-alien land bill, declares John S. Chambers, state controller and chairman of the executive committee of the Japanese Exclusion League, in a statement issued here today.

A political library absolutely free is offered to every voter by the Republican central committee of Alameda county. This library includes engraved and colored pictures of the Republican standard bearers, colored cartoons, a 500-page linen-bound encyclopaedia in addition to twenty-five other smaller books and pamphlets dealing in a live, brief manner with things and issues that every American citizen should know. This library is neatly wrapped in a convenient package to carry home and can be obtained free by any voter who calls at the Republican headquarters, 115 Thirteenth street.

Planters Urge Wilson to Fire Secy. Houston

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 16.—Removal of David F. Houston, secretary of the treasury, from the cabinet, is urged on President Wilson by resolutions adopted by the Georgia division of the American Cotton association at the concluding session of its annual convention today.

A consistent unfriendly attitude toward the farmers while secretary of agriculture and secretary of the treasury is charged to Mr. Houston. Propaganda disseminated by him is said to have been an important factor in depressing the price of cotton and other farm products.

The convention also adopted a resolution calling for a reduction of cotton acreage by 50 per cent in 1921 and complete elimination of the crop next year if it is necessary to sell the present crop at a price lower than the cost of production.

TEXAS GOVERNOR DINES OBREGON

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 16.—(United Press)—For the first time in history a president of Mexico broke bread on American soil when General Alvaro Obregon, president-elect of Mexico, sat at a banquet here tonight as the guest of honor of Texas state officials and business men. Obregon sat with Governor W. P. Hobby, advocate of armed action against Mexico while it was under the Carranza regime. Hobby now favors recognition of Obregon. Obregon came here on what was termed a "friendship mission."

Obregon's reception here today was unique. He was cheered by Americans as he rode through the city in an automobile and was given a more spectacular reception by Mexicans who gathered from all parts of the state to hear him talk at a local park.

In an interview here he declared Mexico would establish law and order without being asked by the United States.

No arrests had been made tonight in connection with the plot to assassinate Obregon by representatives from a lower California revolutionary body. Police and federal officials were still inclined to doubt the report but nevertheless continued to guard the Mexican official closely.

Speaking to Mexicans in Spanish at a local park, Obregon this afternoon invited them to return to their homeland and cooperate with the people there to "make a great and powerful Mexico."

"After three years of bloodshed Mexico is now at peace and will take her place among civilized nations of the world," he said. "We will no longer be forced to blush when we say we are Mexicans."

Funeral of Slain Officer Aranged

VALLEJO, Oct. 16.—Commander R. F. O'Hara of J. The body of the officer is expected to arrive from France next week. Lieutenant Fleming was born here.

CABRILLO PRAISED BY SEN. PHELAN

SAN PEDRO, Oct. 16.—"The greatest event in the history of civilization measured by its results was the discovery of America. The intrepid sailors of the sea are entitled to our lasting gratitude. To have opened a new world was at that period a boon to burdened humanity. Freedom and democracy are the fruits of discovery."

So declared Senator James D. Phelan here today in addressing the great crowds who attended the Cabrillo Day celebration here. In part Senator Phelan said:

"Just fifty years after the landing of Columbus at San Salvador, Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, a Portuguese navigator, in the service of Spain, landed upon California soil and the fairest land known to man was given to the world. But so slow are the processes of development that more than 200 years elapsed before the white man established his civilization and culture in the extreme West. California, undisturbed by the cry of the world's affairs, remained for that period practically unknown. The native population was low in the scale of civilization and was never destined to rise. Knowledge and culture superseded ignorance and barbarism. The Crusaders of another generation accomplished no results, proportionate to their efforts but the Conquestadores of Spain opened the gates of a virgin land to colonization and "civilization on its luminous wings soared phoenix-like to Jove." Civilization now makes its acknowledgment to both Columbus and Cabrillo. Spain, Portugal and Italy are our eternal debtors in giving birth and opportunity to such men as these.

CABRILLO FORGOTTEN

"It is a sad commentary upon human gratitude when we recall that the discoverer of California lies in a forgotten grave. Impelled by high purpose, braving the perils of an unknown ocean, he succeeded where Cortez failed, but never lived to enjoy his victory over the forces of nature and the perils of the deep. His bones lie somewhere within the jurisdiction of California—it is believed on the island of San Migel in the Santa Barbara channel, where they should be sought and with becoming ceremony honored by a grateful people. The sentiment of obligation should be sedulously cultivated. It is an inspiration to other men that one who has rendered conspicuous service should be remembered. California is a land of pioneers. The barriers of the sea and the perils of the desert and the wilderness were overcome in the westward march of progress and civilization. It is true that California itself is a monument to its discoverer—a State of surpassing beauty and of varied and inexhaustible resources, self sufficient, complete and unparalleled.

MEETING OF NATIONS

"Here the civilization of the East and West have met for a trial of strength. One must dominate. That great type of the Caucasian race, Cabrillo, would be dishonored should we abandon the advantages which he has given us. Not more than twenty years ago Robert Louis Stevenson standing, on the shores of the Pacific, on what he called 'the rim of western civilization' likened himself to the Roman Legionary, who gazed out on the mountains of the Pites and scanning the Pacific, said he, too, looked out upon 'zones unromanized.' The Romans paved the way for European civilization. America is stopped at the Pacific. There is little immediate prospect of carrying beyond the Pacific coast western civilization which is now concerned not with expansion but with preservation. It is trying to hold what it has gained. These reflections suggest themselves on a day like this. Cabrillo warns us of our duty to preserve what the courage and enterprise of the great navigators of the Caucasian race have achieved in peace and war—what soldiers and sailors have died for—those great boons of liberty and justice which found congenial soil in America and justified by the success of American institutions the sacrifices made by heroes and martyrs."

REED AND GORE TO TAKE STUMP AGAINST WILSON

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—One of the striking developments of the presidential campaign came today when Senator James A. Reed of Missouri and Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma," both Democrats, announced that they are taking the stump against President Wilson's League of Nations. Senator Gore opened his campaign at Baltimore tonight with a vigorous speech demanding the "restoration of America's independence." Senator Reed has hired the convention hall in Kansas City for Thursday night.

Democratic leaders here were amazed when they learned that these two distinguished Democrats had decided to openly denounce President Wilson's pet project. Their speeches, it is admitted, will counteract the efforts now being made by members of President Wilson's cabinet to turn sentiment in favor of the league.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

A Cincinnati Barber Tells How to Make a Remedy for Gray Hair

A well-known resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has been a barber for more than forty years, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the most delicate scalp, and is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—Advertisement.

SIERRA TUNNEL CONTRACT CASE IS WON BY S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Supreme court approval of the contract between the city of San Francisco and the Construction Company of North America for the construction of nine miles of Hetch-Hetchy tunnel on a cost-plus-fee basis was given today, thus a ffirming the original decision of Superior Judge F. J. Murasky in favor of the city.

Work on the tunnel which has been at a standstill pending settlement of the litigation will now be resumed according to City Engineer O'Shaughnessy. The contract involved $7,802,952.

The suit was an effort to invalidate the contract on the ground that the first sum paid the company by the city amounting to $276,000, was a discount on the bonds required to be sold for the first year's work. The plaintiffs relied on a provision of the city charter that bonds cannot be sold at a discount.

The contract is a unique one in municipal affairs, it is said, and the decision is one of widespread importance as municipalities in all parts of the country were awaiting the court's decisioon

Your Business

Government is the biggest business you have to consider. If you neglect it, you then turn it over to those who make politics a business, a medium of graft and corruption. You permit of the advancement of job-seekers, whose first object is to serve their masters, who make them.

On the other hand, if you will devote a reasonable amount of time and thought to your government you will be well rewarded. You will demand and get the highest type of citizens as your representatives. Then you will see the logic of continuing in office honest, capable, efficient and loyal representatives, who have served you efficiently and faithfully in the past.

BERKELEY TOLD WATER PLAN OF MARIN IS GOOD

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—Calling attention to the success of Marin county in engaging in the water business, Jonathan E. Webb, former secretary to William Kent and framer of the law under which Marin county now operates, urges the support by Berkeleyans of the proposed public utility district in a letter received by Mayor Louis Bartlett.

Following is Webbs' communication:

"To supply itself with water the people of a given area need to act as an individual is able to act in making a business investment. An individual of business capacity casts about and selects an attractive property. Before making investment he engages trained men from whom he seeks advice as to the various phases of the proposition. Then, suitably modifying his plan, he acts.

WOULD ACT AS INDIVIDUAL

"You are able to create such an individual or legal 'person' by forming a public utility district. You must and you have proposed a district large enough to give that individual sufficient financial power. For if southern Marin has such power, how much more have you.

"The successful execution of such an enterprise involves intelligent supervision and use of the required minimum of capital. The people of the district become sponsor for the required capital; it is the duty, then, of the board of directors to secure intelligent supervision and use of the capital.

"You are fortunate here in having ready to hand the statute permitting teh formation of the desired district. Not until the passage of the water district bill of 1911 was Marin county able to act. In the selection of the board of directors, however, you can do no better than emulate that successful water district of Marin county.

CREATE DISTRICT FIRST

"For its board of directors has included such men of strength and public spirit as Caspar Gardner, now chairman of the board of county supervisors; several engineers and from the first M. M. O'Shaughnessy, present engineer of the City of San Francisco, and William Kent, who for many years has fostered this and other sound, constructive policies in this vicinity and in the State of California.

"So in your case the proper course of action is plain. Vote for the creation of the Public Utility District: that is half the task. Then let a few of the intelligent, highly-rtained, forward-looking men of this community step forward and put the thing into successful operation."

S. P. IS CHARGED WITH DELAY ON MOLE CROSSING

Declaring that he would not tolerate further delay in the installation of grade crossings at the base of the Oakland mole and the end of Seventh street. Commissioner W. H. Edwards, head of the street department, roundly scored the attitude of the Southern Pacific railway yesterday.

The commissioner alleged that the railway organization object to the new automobile ferry near the Albers pier, and by virtue of this grievance have refused to make the necessary changes. The [illegible] ing the projected ferry is to come before the council

"I propose to start immediately to go under or over the Southern Pacific tracks," says Edwards. "I will tolerate no delay to a project which means so much for the development of Oakland."

ADVANTAGE BY RULING

Edwards alleges that though the Railroad Commission overruled the railroad's protest that a grade-crossing at this point is super dangerous, and ordered the railroad to install the grade-crossing, the railroad is taking advantage of an "out" in the ruling which provided that the grade-crossing be installed "unless there is indication of increasing traffic there."

Edwards admits that an automobile ferry at the end of the Western waterfront will undoubtedly mean increasing traffic but he asserts that the City of Oakland has invested f$40 000 in the paving o Seventh street to the Albers wharf and will not allow this investment to be nullified

"We spent $40 000," he says "and now we find that the Southern Pacific is protesting to the Railroad Commission that the city is going to put in a ferry, and refusing to put in the grade-crossing

WILL GET THERE SOMEHOW

"The ferry is going to be the biggest thing in Oakland. Its benefits can hardly be realized. A regular line of automobile ferry boats from Oakland to San Francisco is what the city needs. Even the Southern Pacific wins something for it is now and forever released from maintaining its old pavement to Oakland mole

"We can tolerate no further delay in this crossing. We will get there if we have to go under or over the railroad's tracks."

Second Hand Dealer Is Held for Trial

Deeming the evidence sufficient to hold the defendant for trial in the Superior court, Acting Police Judge Ralph V Richmond yesterday committed Chauncey D Monett a second-hand automobile dealer with premises as Fifteenth and Broadway, on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses

According to the testimony taken in police court, Monett sold an automobile several months ago to A. E. Dennison, 1329 Broadway representing it to be a 1918 model. When Dennison attempted to dispose of the car a few months later, he found out that in reality the car was a 1916 model, consequently he caused the auto dealers arrest on a charge of misrepresentation. Bail was set at $2000.

Children Balk at Geography Until Europe Wars Stop

PARIS, Oct. 16.—School children of the lower grades are going on strike in many public schools in France as a protest against the study of geography.

Led by a few older pupils, these modern strikers declare they do not wish to waste time learning the georgraphy of Europe until conditions are more or less definitely settled.

"It is ridiculous to make children learn by heart the names and capitals of all the new countries," says the spokesman of the movement, a boy of sixteen. "When I think of all the trouble I had learning the map of Europe once I balk at learning it over again until it's permanent. And I want to spare my fellow pupils from that torture."

Famous Winery at Alvarado, Built in 1882, Is Dismantled

IRVINGTON, Oct. 16—The old Palmdale winery at Irvington, built in 1882, one of the most pretentious landmarks of the eastern end of Alameda county, has been torn down and its timbers sold by the Dolan Wrecking company of San Francisco, the firm that bought and dismantled the building

The structure, which was of three stories was built by Juan Gallegos, one of the Spanish pioneers of the county. On such large lines did he plan the building that he sent representatives into Washington and Oregon to select the timbers that went into the woodwork

It is said by the wrecker that the timbers were the most perfect he had ever seen

When in operation prior to 1906, the winery had a capacity of about 300 000 gallons a year, and its products were shipped to every country

The building and 300 acres of land, including the famous Palmdale residence and grounds at Mission San Jose, was acquired by the late Henry Lachman in 1896. Shortly after the purchase the building was badly damaged by the great earthquake of that year and wine making was abandoned

The fear that it might fall and cause loss of life prompted the Lachman heirs to have it wrecked

The work of wrecking, which has been under way since last January, was only recently completed

Wizard Rubini Sees and Thinks With Minds of Seven Men of Committee

All Conditions of Test Met By Wizard To Committee's Satisfaction

Broadway. Lines of trolley cars jangled and crashed by. Automobiles, held up by the police, who furnished a car near the head of the train, occupied by Chief Lynch, Sergeant Fahey and two traffic men, honked for passage.

CONFUSION FAILS TO DISTURB RUBINI

Throngs on the sidewalks stopped to watch or called out. The confusion and noise apparently had no effect on the intent young man leaning against the windshield of the big Willys-Knight car Crinnion drove.

At each street intersection the procession was abruptly halted by the quick motion of Rubini's hand. Out into the street he got, his conductor, Joseph Rosborough, following. Among vehicles and clanging cars he still retained his strangely intent demeanor. As he seemed to grope mentally for guidance, he was oblivious to his surroundings and once had to be grasped forcibly on the shoulder by Postmaster Rosborough to keep him from walking directly in the path of a clanging car. But the mental impulse was never more than a few seconds in coming and he would bound back to his machine to press on again.

The policemen sprang from their machine time and again to avert traffic jams, while the wailing of the police siren cleared the way.

In this manner the line, with many narrow escapes, swept up to the city hall. Without hisetation Rubini entered and sprang up the marble steps of the rotunda. Into the building poured hundreds, attracted by him. The picture of the intent, youthful figure, almost stumbling up the long flight in his eagerness, and followed by his taller conductor, was one not easily to be forgotten by the hundreds who saw it. Once on the third floor the young man turned, leaning forward, almost as if a blooded dog on a fresh trail, and made for the door of the Red Cross office on the right.

Near the door he paused once, then almost darted inside, his conductor being put to it to keep the pace, and before the startled young women who were there half realized what it was about, he had grasped one of the red, blue and white membership posters and was turning to the door. Applause broke out from the crowd that had swarmed up the stairs, although none save Rosborough and his other conductors knew at that moment that de Rubini was meeting every demand of the test.

POLICE CLEAR TRAFFIC JAM

As the machines left the City Hall, still halting at each intersection [illegible] lifted his face and seemed to sense the direction in which he was bidden to go, they passed down San Pablo avenue to Sixteenth. There for a minute De Rubini's tensity grew as his photograph mind strove toward the right impulsion. Then wheeling his whole party in a wide circle by the wave of his hand, he headed across Sixteenth toward Broadway while the police struggled with a difficult traffic jam that mingled committee cars, trucks, street cars and people.

A press car worked its way through the jam, traffic man on the running board and motion picture camera grinding. Ahead stood De Rubini, his Red Cross poster fluttering.

So eager was the young psychologist when he reached Broadway that he failed to sense the direction to stop at the postoffice and the whole train had run to Nineteenth street before, stopping, he again wheeled the machines.

YOUTH COMPLETES MENTAL TEST

From that point his mental control seemed to grow amazingly. Without a false move he held up his hand as the postoffice was reached. The line halted. Out leaped De Rubini, Rosborough, Kahn and Brother Agnon and most of the other members of the committee in his wake. He entered through the turnstyle doors at the main entrance to the Federal building, went rapidly through the corridor to the door marked "postmaster," and in a moment more had turned into Rosborough's private office and was spreading upon the desk the poster. There he relaxed, smiling, and Postmaster Rosborough called for the sealed directions. Just 39 minutes had elapsed since he left the hotel.

The directions were produced, opened by Irving H. Kahn of the committee and read aloud while the office was jammed with an excited and intent gathering. No sooner had the reading been finished than they broke out a general burst of hand clapping although even then only a few realized the triumph of the young man because they had not been in hearing distance.

Congratulations were showered upon Rubini from every side and his hand was shaken by a score.

As the committee passed from the postoffice and dispersed exclamations of conviction were made on every side.

"I was certain that I could convince them," was what Rubini had to say through Paul Thomas, who interprets for him when the young Czech is excited and cannot make his slight English do to express his rapid thoughts. "It is not mystical. It is just psychology. It is latent in every man. You can all do it."

"Pep," a musical comedy to be presented at Ye Liberty theater in Oakland on the evenings during the commemoration of the close of the war, will be a mecca of the legion men, the army fliers and their friends.

FUND GOES TO CLUBS.

The production which combines the musical scores of seventeen new light operas, will have in its cast many of the cleverest amateur performers in the bay region. The cast will include many of those who made the recent Arabian Nights pageant in Oakland, for the benefit of the baby hospital, a brilliant success.

The earnings of "Pep" will be devoted to the American Legion fund and to assist the Allied Fliers' club in promoting aviation in this part of the state, it is announced.

While the Allied Fliers' club's first thought is to keep its service men in training, its work lies along many other lines. The general promotion of aviation for both sport and commerce are fostered in the following aims:

To make the Eastbay district a great air port. Ten years hence facilities for aviation traffic will be as essential to a city as auto roads, railroads or docks. Alameda county has antural advantages that fit it for an aviation center.

CABINET MEMBER.

Establishment of a separate air service with a cabinet head.

Successful conduct of the aerial mail work.

Promotion of the airplane as a safe, comfortable means of regular travel.

Assistance to aviation inventors.

Assistance and encouragement to youthful fliers and model makers.

Dissemination of information about flying.

Elimination of reckless flying and the passage of laws to prohibit hazardous stunts.

Location of aviation industries in the west.

Location of municipal and emergency landing fields.

Education of its members and the public through magazines, books, moving pictures and meetings.

Development of aeronautical courses in colleges and universities.

The legion committee working on the armistice week celebration in Oakland consists of J. W. Collier, chairman; W. T. Hopkins, H. H. Weber, Captain E. B. Field, W. J. Petersen, Dr. J. R. Booth, H. J. Nelson, S. S. Silverstein and C. E. Capwell.

HIGH PRAISES ARE GIVEN TO YOUNG RUBINI

Tere are a few of the expressions on the demonstration by Eugene de Rubini made my members of the committee following his remarkable triumph in telepathic tests Saturday under teh auspices of The TRIBUNE:

PROF. ALBERT VAN DER NAILLEN, president of the California Society of Psychic Research.—Eugene de Rubini is a fine, clean type of young man. What he did today was the finest exhibition of telepathy I have seen, either in the United States or in Europe, where I have seen many remarkable demonstrations. I give him my complete endorsement. His demonstration proves the subconscious connection between the minds of men, and perhaps much more. I have never seen better telepathic work. The demonstration was wonderful.

J. F. LYNCH, Chief of Police.—What Mr. de Rubini did today was wonderful. No one san say that he did not meet every requirement of the test and that it was all open and fair with no chance of collusion or trick. It was a fine and convincing demonstration of practical thought transference.

BROTHER AGNON, professor of philosophy at St. Mary's College.—To me Eugene de Rubini's demonstrations, whicch are remarkable, approach proof of the soul in man. He is sincere and his telepathic operations genuine.

IRVING H. KAHN, vice-president of Kahn Brothers' store.—It was remarkable, the rapidity with which he entered the Red Cross office and seized that poster without hesitancy. The test was fair and there was no chance of collusion. I myself wrote down the conditions of the test as we formulated them.

JOSEPH ROSBOROUGH, postmaster.—Eugene de Rubini's demonstration today is proof conclusive of the power of telepathy. I could feel my will be transmitted to him as I strove to direct him. I tried throughout the test to keep my thoughts concentrated and away from outside influences. Mr. Rubini's mind is like a seismograph, so acutely is it tuned to receive outside mental suggestions.

PROF. E. M. LIPKA, president of the Oakland Chapter of the Society of American Magicians.—I was glad to have been chosen on the committee. Several of our members have taken up thought and muscle reading and are studying these things. This was not muscle reading, it was telepathy. There was no thought of trick, and I know most of the tricks.

Chinese Ministry Denies Monarch Rule

SHANGHAI, Oct. 15.—The Chinese ministry today issued an official denial of rumors that a monarchy had been or would be set up at Pekin.

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM!

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, 50 years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures,' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change." You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as try to get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatment supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out the truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of The TRIBUNE wishes "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism," overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a postcard or letter to H. P. Clearwater, No. 356-D Street, Hallowell, Maine. Send now, lest you forget! If not a sufferer, cut out this notice and hand this good news and opportunity to some afflicted friend. All who send will receive it by return mail without any charge whatever.

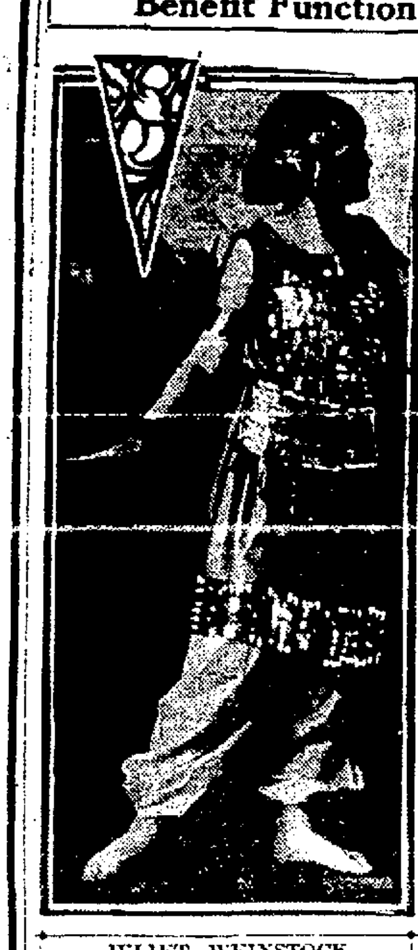
Alameda Policemen Prepare for First Benefit Function



JULIET WEINSTOCK

Committee in Charge, Composed of Department Men, Promises Fine Program.

ALAMEDA, Oct. 16.—The members of the Alameda police department are, figuratively speaking, shaking the moth balls out of the dress suits and practicing up on a few new and fancy steps for their first annual ball which will be held in the Neptune Auditorium next month.

A committee of Alameda's "finest" has been appointed to put the affair over big. This committee consists of H. O. Coffman, president; E. A. Willing, vice-president; Louis Servente, secretary and treasurer, and Joseph Sevina, Richard Britt and Stanley Loveland, dance committee. The grand march will be led by Chief and Mrs. William H. Wahmuth.

Preceding the ball a program, consisting of vocal, instrumental and classic dance numbers, will be given. The star attraction of this portion of the big event will be the dancing of a chorus schooled especially for the occasion by Miss Vivienne Tweedie. A leading part in this chorus and extravaganza will be taken by Juliet Weinstock of 853 Laurel street, who will present a Circassian dance.

The ball is being given for the police benefit fund to aid the distressed and needy of the department. While the members of the department have frequently given their services for other affairs of a social and benefit nature, this is the first time that they have staged one for their own benefit.

Y.W.C.A. notes

The third of the forum discussions under the auspices of the Business Women's Forum, was held last Wednesday. The forum is arranging for the fourth debate on Wednesday, Oct. 27, when the anti-alien land law will be discussed. John S. Chambers, state controller, is the affirmative, and K. Kanzaki, of the Japanese Association, in the negative.

Mrs. J. J. Valentine was the hostess on Friday, Oct. 15, at a reception given to the members of the Young Women's Christian Association living in her precinct. This is the first of a series of precinct meetings of the Y. W. C. A., which are being arranged by Mrs. J. G. Hoyt.

The Colored Center, at 828 Linden street, has been holding open house this week to celebrate its formal opening, beginning last Sunday afternoon with a dedicatory service, when representatives of different organizations spoke regarding the work.

The staff of the Y. W. C. A. is holding its fall staff conference at San Anselmo to map out together the work for the year and bring all departments into close collaboration. The conference is being led by Miss Alice M. Brookman, general secretary, and Miss Anne Guthrie, field industrial secretary.

Rheumatism

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from such forms of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar; but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

WESLEY CHURCH PARTY ON FRIDAY

RICHMOND, Oct. 16—The Epworth League of the Wesley Methodist Church will entertain with a Hallowe'en party at the church on Friday night, October 29, it has been announced. The committee in charge of the arrangements is composed of the Misses Stella Shoemaker and Nina Moody. More detailed information regarding the entertainment will be made known soon.

The Page rank was conferred upon three members at the regular meeting of the Knights of Pythias last night. A. H. Nave, Julius Geritz, and A. M. Buys were those receiving the rank, the ceremony being followed by an interesting program. A letter from former prelate H. E. Hunt reporting visits from various lodges in the northern part of the state was read, and the question of putting on a membership drive as he urges, was discussed. Hunt desires that the local lodge make a special effort to reach the 1300 mark, and enthusiastically encourages the members in such a work.

It was announced that the big meeting in San Rafael this evening would include a banquet and dancing besides the Lessons of Friendship that is to be put on by the Oakland D. O. K. K.

Officers of the Richmond Lodge, B. P. O. E., No. 1251, will go to Alameda Monday evening to put on the initiation work there for the Alameda Lodge of Elks. They plan to leave the club here at 7 o'clock Monday evening, and to go by automobile to the Alameda club rooms.

Officers of the Zephyr Rebekahs announce that plans are being made for a masquerade party to be held sometime the latter part of this month. The plans are not as yet very far along, but announcements will be made very soon. It is thought, as to the date, and place where the entertainment will be held.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region is generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and make a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Advertisement.

ASK THE TRIBUNE

A Department of Questions and Answers—

Editor TRIBUNE: 1. Must a wife's income (salary) be added to her husband's when paying an income tax if he is supporting her? 2. Is there a law stating thta a woman's income is subject to collection by her husband or if half her income is legally his? 3. What qualifications must a woman or man have to procure a position as high school teacher? 4. Is there an income tax on a bonus received for government service?—D. S.

1. Yes. In case the wife is without an income, the husband is allowed exemption of $2000 a year. If otherwise, or if the wife has a small income, both should be figured in the annual tax return.

2. Yes. Property held by both parties when marriage is contracted automatically becomes community property. According to law the husband is accorded the right to control these holdings, and therefore legally could demand possession of his wife's income.

3. Generally, an applicant for high school faculty work in California must have completed five years of college work; have graduated with at least 15 units of credit, and have complied with the multitudinous rules laid down by the State Board of Education. The mass of detail, however, is too lengthy for reproduction in the column, but may be obtained by addressing a query to D. E. Martin, assistant superintendent of schools, Hall of Records, Oakland.

4. No.

Editor TRIBUNE: Where is it possible to obtain pictures of crocheting and embroidering by correspondence? Also is it possible for me to get pictures of great artists, and to obtain snapshots of a masterpiece?—D. R.

Special departments in crocheting and knitting are conducted by some of the women's magazines. An exhaustive study of these subjects may also be found in a "knitting book," a periodical which may be purchased locally. Works of the masters may be found at the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco, and prints of the paintings obtained at art stores here and in San Francisco.

Taxes in Richmond Will Total $421,779

RICHMOND, Oct. 16.—The total revenue to be collected this year in taxes in the city of Richmond for the maintenance of municipal government and improvements, will be $421,779.30, it is announced by City Tax Collector J. O. Ford, who will start collecting the first installment on next Monday. Of this amount $405,930.85 is included in the levy made for the carrying on of the city government, and $15,848.45 is added under the act of 1915 covering public improvements. The amount is about $35,000 more than the tax levy of last year. This is brought about by the increase in salaries of various city employees, and by the general advancing cost of materials and labor required in the conduct of the city's business.

DENTON CASE IS MYSTERY STILL TO L. A. POLICE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16—With the district attorney's office here admitting that it is "suppressing any information that might be considered vital" in the investigation into the murder of Jacob C. Denton, wealthy mining man, solution of the new puzzle today was shrouded in the same "vagueness" that has characterized the case since the finding of Denton's body twenty-three days ago.

Among the latest bits of information secured from the district attorney's office today was the admission that an investigation of an alleged attempt to change the beneficiary of Denton's insurance policy was made about the time of Denton's death.

WOMAN TELEPHONED.

The information was given autherities by insurance company officials, it was said, who told of a telephone call received from a woman who wished to have the beneficiary clause in the policy changed. Upon being told that such matters could not be arranged by telephone, papers were sent to the woman but were never returned, it was said.

Either Deputy District Attorney Doran or Turney will leave next week to gather evidence in the case in other cities, it was learned today. Among persons to be quetioned were Mrs. Ida L. Gregory, enver, friend of Mrs. Richard C. Peete, who visited the latter while she was a tenant in the Denton home. Denver newspapermen and police officials who interview Mrs. Peete immediately after finding of Denton's body, were also to be questioned.

PUZZLING CONTRADICTION.

Another puzzling contradiction injected into the case today was the denial of a woman acquaintance of Mrs. Peete, who earlier told officers she had been given a ring, later identified as having belonged to Denton to pawn.

Another new angle being investigated was the statement of William Arkins, insurance man, that he had been requested by Mrs. Peete regarding a quantity of cement to be used "for building steps near the property line" of the Denton home.

Missionary Plans Laid at the Session of Body in Pioneer Church.

A unanimous endorsement of the peace program proposed by the American Red Cross, and the announcement of the raising of $1000 in cash for the furtherance of missionary work, featured yesterday's session of the Pacific Methodist Conference of the M. E. Church, South, at the local Pioneer Memorial church.

Are You Losing Your Grip on Health?

Physician's Prescription to Increase the Health and Strength of Anaemic, Rundown Men and Women

As a result of the tremendous strain of modern living so many people find that the nerve cells have become devitalized, the whole system weakened, and thousands of men and women are today losing their grip on health simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starving through lack of iron. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the blood that life sustaining oxygen enters the body and enables the blood to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. If people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run-down they might readily build up their red blood corpuscles and quickly become stronger and healthier in every way. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength of weak, nervous, "run-down" men and women in two weeks' time in many instances. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Nuxated Iron is on sale at all good druggists.

Best Treatment for Catarrh, Croup, Coughs and Colds

Guaranteed by Owl Drug Co.—No Stomach Dosing.

Breathe HYOMEI for all diseases of the breathing organs. It is guaranteed.

In case of croup, which is very common in children, send for a doctor at once. In the meantime pour 30 drops of HYOMEI into a bowl of boiling water, and hold the child's head over it; covered with a towel or cloth so that only the air filled with HYOMEI vapor is breathed.

This treatment has saved many a child's life and mothers of croupy children should always have HYOMEI on hand.

For coughs, colds and catarrh, breathing HYOMEI through the inhaler is usually sufficient.

Many people, however, use the HYOMEI vapor treatment in conjunction with the inhaler.

The vapor treatment is best taken just before going to bed; it only takes about five minutes' time. Pour a teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl three-quarters full of boiling water, cover head and bowl with towel, and breathe the vapor that arises deep into the lungs. By this method many a hard cold has been broken up over night. A HYOMEI outfit consists of a bottle of HYOMEI and a hard rubber pocket inhaler. At the Owl Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

Quarantine On School Lifted

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—The diphtheria quarantine on the high school, which resulted a month ago in the arrest of six girl students for persisting in attending school though they refused to submit to examination as possible diphtheria "germ carriers" was lifted today by Dr. Ernest H. Pape, city health officer, after a conference with Dr. W. M. Dickie, secretary of the State Board of Health.

In lifting the quarantine the city health officer made a statement that the students who were arrested and nine who refused to submit to examination must secure permits from the health office before they could return to school. It was stated that these permits are merely required for purposes of record and that no medical examination will be required for their issuance.

The police department was notified to remove the "diphtheria germ carrier" placards from the homes of the recalcitrant students as a result of the lifting of the quarantine.

The lifting of the quarantine does not mean that the cases of the six girl students under arrest and pending trial will be dropped, according to Dr. Pape.

"Today's action in lifting the quarantine," the health officer says, "is entirely due to the satisfactory conditions in the matter of diphtheria which now exist."

Marymont Gets News of Death of Mother

Joseph Marymont, of Marymont & Upright, Thirteenth and Washington streets, received word yesterday of the death of his mother, Mrs. Yenta Marymont, in Warton, Poland. The news of her death arrived just three weeks after Marymont had sent $1800 through the joint distribution committee of the Jewish Relief Society to cover the transportation charges for six members of the Marymont family from Poland to the United States. The last letter Marymont received from his mother stated that she was in good health and that she expected to join him soon in Oakland.

Mrs. Marymont died on September 13, the Jewish New Year. She was 84 years old. Her son in Oakland had prepared a home for her and all was in readiness for the arrival of the family.

Marymont came to the United States thirty-five years ago. He was penniless and did not speak English. He went to British Columbia where he soon acquired considerable property, later coming to Oakland where he engaged in the department store business.

BOARD PLANS TO AID CIVIL SERVICE

The civil service defense committee is arranging for a series of meetings at which well-posted speakers will present arguments and facts against the adoption of the proposed amendments to the city charter. Speakers will also make brief talks in behalf of the firemen's initiative ordinance, which provides for an adjustment of the pay of firemen because of the increased cost of living since the firemen's salaries were last fixed.

Adjutant Fred Mallman of the Oakland Post, American Legion, chairman of the executive of the citizens' committee, has issued a statement setting forth the results that will follow the proposed civil service changes in the charter.

"The injustice that will be done city employees by these charter amendments can be seen at a glance by the mention of a few facts. An employee discharged by a commissioner cannot appeal to the Civil Service Board but must ask for a hearing from the commissioner who fired him. This makes the commissioner the complaining witness, the jury, the judge and the court of appeal. What justice is there in such a situation? It would make of every city employee a politician who would have to obey his boss to save his job. That one argument ought to suffice to kill those amendments."

Encinal Yacht Club Will Close Season

ALAMEDA, Oct. 16.—The Encinal Yacht Club will bring its 1920 season to a close with a grand celebration at the club house at the foot of Grand street tomorrow. VOLUME XCIII— OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 17, 1920. A B—PAGES 1 TO 12 NO. 139.

WIFE NAMED AS AFFINITY SUED BY HER SPOUSE

Following the filing of a suit for divorce by Mrs. Mildred G. Pinkerton against Jay M. Pinkerton, automobile salesman, which ended in a reconciliation four days later, Attorney H. S. Craig has filed a divorce action for A. W. Stultz against Mrs. Birdie Stultz, who was named in the other suit as Pinkerton's affinity.

Stultz charges that his wife went on an automobile trip to Oregon with Pinkerton, who had been married to his present wife for more than 21 years, and that they registered at the Imperial hotel in Portland. The same charge was made in Mrs. Pinkerton's action. It was asserted that the two were together on the trip for 14 days.

Stultz also alleges that his wife called him a "dirty spy" and other names. He asks the custody of two children, 7 and 5. They were married in 1912.

In the Pinkerton suit it was declared that the husband also was intimate with a woman called "Pat" in Los Angeles. He earns, it was asserted, $400 a month. Craig states that Pinkerton caused his wife to believe there was no truth in the charges and that they are now living together.

Asks Divorce When Wife Wastes Bread

Mrs. Ruby Irene Burns Bult spent most of her time visiting with the neighbors, threw perfectly good bread in the garbage can, and by insisting on having her mother live with her and her husband, destroyed the latter's piece of mind, according to the allegations of Charles Bult, who was granted a divorce by Judge Fred V. Wood, sitting for Judge T. W. Harris.

Bult is an enameler, earning, he said, $9 a day. They were married in Oakland, August 12, 1918, when Bult gave his age as 40 and the bride hers as 29. They have one child. The family home was at 2223 East Fourteenth street.

VIENNA MOTHER SEEKS HER LOST SON IN OAKLAND

From Vienna a mother's love is calling for Ernest Meuser

Seriously ill in the capital city of the once-great Austrian empire, Mrs Julie Meuser during the five long years of war, has clung to life, her only hope being that when the strife had ceased she would be able to see her son again

This hope has sustained her despite the fact that husband brothers and sisters have been wiped out in the great catastrophe From her lonely home at St Poelten, a suburb of Vienna, she addressed a pitiful appeal to the director of police in Oakland, asking his aid in her despairing search

"My life is almost to a close and after our bitter experiences death will not be so hard to bear" she wrote "But before the shadows fall, I would once more see my only remaining son. It is my last wish and a mother's heartfelt thanks will reward you for aught that you can do to help me

"The last I heard of my boy was a card dated from Cincinnati in the Province of Ohio November 20, 1916 He then said that he would seek the Pacific Coast Since then silence has prevailed. If he is still among the living I know he will respond to my appeal"

Mrs. Meuser further said that her son is the only heir to a vast fortune accumulated by her husband before his death She offers a liberal reward in dollars and a "few thousand Austrian Kronen" to anyone who can locate her son.

Ernest Meuser is described as 27 years of age, well educated and of a pleasing appearance Anyone knowing his whereabouts is asked to communicate with H Reinhardt, 80 Rutland road, Brooklyn N. Y

now in this scientific way

People who know—millions of them—now end all corns in this way.

They apply Blue-jay either in liquid or in plaster form. It means but a touch and takes but a jiffy

The corn pain stops. Then the Blue-jay gently undermines the corn so it loosens and comes out.

The modern way

Blue-jay was invented by a chemist who studied corns.

It is made by a laboratory of world-wide repute.

Old-time treatments were harsh and inefficient. Blue-jay is gentle, quick and sure.

Now all corns are needless. All these pains can be avoided. To let corns remain while you pare and pad them is folly.

You can stop a corn ache the moment it appears. You can end a corn completely before it can develop.

Blue-jay has proved these facts to millions. It will prove them to you—and tonight—if you let it.

Quit the old methods of dealing with corns and see what this new way means. Your druggist sells Blue-jay.

Easy Divorce Laws Makes Paris World-Reno for Rich American Wives

SOCIETY LEADERS FOLLOW EXAMPLE OF MRS. MACKAY

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The war caused the greatest upheaval in the home, between husband and wife, since the day Christianity formally decreed the ties of marriage to be binding throughout a lifetime, overcoming the customs of the Greeks and Romans by which a woman was a man's wife only as long as he was physically attracted by her.

"Today we are living in a reversal of the ancient custom, for, since the war, it appears that a woman is a man's wife only as long as she is attracted to him."

The above declaration, spoken solemnly before a congregation in the Church of St. Philip du Roule, a stone's throw from the fashionable quarter of the Champs-Elysees, by the Abbe Weherle, is borne out startingly by recent divorce statistics. These make it clear that Paris has become the world's divorce clearing house.

Paris hotels are full of husbands and wives whose sole purpose in coming here has been to secure a divorce. In many instances they are instituting counter-suits and are establishing residences in hotels a few yards from each other.

There are Norwegians, Finns, Swedes, Dutch, Belgians, Italians, Danes, Swiss, South Americans and English. But by far the greatest number of any single nationality are Americans.

MRS. MACKAY STARTED FASHION

The facility of divorce for foreigners in Paris first became widely known due to the publicity given in America to the comfortable ease by which Mrs. Clarence Mackay, now Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, secured freedom from her multi-millionaire husband.

All sorts of difficulties arose in America when Mrs. Mackay tried to obtain a divorce there. Chief among these was the million-dollar counter-suit for alienation of her husband's affections instituted against her by Mrs. Catherine Ketchum Blake. After futilely trying to arrange matters in Maine, Mrs. Mackay suddenly moved to Paris, and within a few months she had her divorce.

Then Frank J. Gould applied for divorce before a court in Versailles. By appearing in person at the preliminary hearings it was held that Mrs. Gould had duly recognized the jurisdiction of the French courts—the one necessary contingent—and the Court thereupon granted the divorce in Gould's favor, giving only 3,000 francs a month to the wife. This the former comédienne, Edith Kelley, refused indignantly to accept, and appealed twice against the decision, but to no avail. She is now endeavoring to have a New York court set aside the French judgment and grant a divorce in her favor, on the ground that she did not recognize the French court's jurisdiction, and that neither she nor her husband were legally domiciled in France.

GOULD'S DIVORCE SOUND

Charles G. Loeb, Gould's lawyer, who has the reputation of being a Paris "divorce wizard," maintains his conviction that the decree as granted in Paris is absolutely sound, and that Frank J. Gould is entitled to marry again.

Exactly the same view is held by former Prime Minister Rene Viviani whose ability to rush a divorce through the Paris courts in record time and secrecy is well known. Viviani, however, is reputed to be the most expensive divorce lawyer in France, and only millionaires such as Frank J. Gould can afford to retain his services.

Although it is only recently Americans have discovered in Paris the new Reno, France has been an easy place wherein to secure divorce since 1886. The law of 1892, whereby man and wife could be divorced "by mutual consent," and which resulted in so many divorces that the courts were overstocked for two years, was finally repealed.

Charles Gerson Loeb, who is conceded to be the greatest authority on American divorce in Paris, prepared, at the request of the Universal Service, a summary of the French divorce law as it affects foreigners. The summary follows:

SOMEWHAT LIKE AMERICAN

"In general, the French idea of divorce is similar to the American. It differs only in its aplication and in the court procedure, and in the secrecy that surrounds it. But, as in America, it involves the severing of matrimonial bonds, the liquidation of their property rights and payment of alimony, guardianship of the children and general termination of the marriage relations. Thus a divorce obtained in France is good for every practical purpose in the United States.

"Jurisdiction is optional with the courts and with the persons. That is to say, the French courts have always a right to refuse to take cognizance of a divorce proceeding between two foreigners, and at the same time either of the two parties has a right to deny jurisdiction and stop procedings.

"The plaintiff, of course, agrees to the French jurisdiction by the mere fact of bringing the suit. The defendant may agree explicitly or he may agree tacitly. If he does not raise the question of jurisdiction at the first hearing of the case the defendant is taken to have approved the jurisdiction of the court tacitly. Thereafter he may not question the divorce. This was established clearly in the Superior Court's finding on Edith Kelley Gould's appeal against the judgment given Frank J. Gould by the Versailles court. In upholding Gould the Superior Court held that because Mrs. Gould had appeared at the first hearing and had not denied the jurisdiction the decree must stand.

THREE CHIEF CLAUSES

"The grounds for divorce are prescribed by the French civil code are:

"Adultery.

"Excesses, bodily injuries and grave insults.

"The condemnation of one of the married couple to a penalty involving imprisonment for a criminal offense.

"The fact of a man refusing to allow his wife to live with him is considered as a 'grave injury' and, reciprocally, the fact of a wife refusing to live with her husband is equally a 'grave injury.'

"In construing cruelty and personal insults the French courts take into consideration the social standing of the parties. Thus an act which might not be considered a serious insult in one social station might be so considered in a higher one. Rough language by a man of culture to his wife, if she be a lady of refinement, might be a 'personal insult' calculated to hurt her feelings seriously, whereas the same language used by a man in one of the rougher classes would be considered more or less normal.

RESIDENCE TERM NOT REQUIRED

"No fixed period of residence is required of a foreigner coming to Paris to seek divorce. The only delay is that caused by the grinding of the official machinery.

"The question which the French court considers is not if the parties are domiciled in France, but whether they accept the French jurisdiction. If the parties accept the jurisdiction the French judges have then the option of accepting the case or not, as they choose. If the parties have a bona-fide residence the judge will, as a rule, accept the case without discussion.

"But they would unquestionably refuse to take cognizance of a case wherein the parties had come to Paris only a few days before beginning of proceedings, with the intention to leave immediately following the divorce. The rule is that the plaintiff at least must have a bona-fide residence in France.

JUDGES EASILY SATISFIED

"On the other hand, 'bona-fide residence' does not necessarily mean that the parties must purchase an apartment or residence, or otherwise make themselves known as fixtures. Generally speaking, a month or two in a hotel, or even a few weeks, providing it is given the semblance of permanency, is sufficient to satisfy the French judges.

"If the defendant does not accept the jurisdiction of the French court and does not appear through attorneys, the divorce is only possible if the plaintiff proves a genuine legal domicile in France, such as would be defined as a domicile in America. That is to say, the plaintiff would have to show the abandonment of all other domiciles in favor of one in France.

"When defendant does not appear personally or by attorney the proceeding is sometimes very slow. "No particular time is fixed as to the period the plaintiff must remain within the jurisdiction of the courts.

HEARINGS IN SECRECY

"But the feature of Paris divorces that appeals most to Americans is the secrecy by which under French law they are surrounded. No French newspaper is permitted, under penalty of imprisonment for the editor and a heavy fine, to publish even the remotest details about divorces. When the decree is a fact they may state as much, but as to why it was asked, or when, or how, or what evidence was introduced, no French publication is allowed to breathe a word. Although the law does not prohibit public attendance to a divorce court, it is a fact that no one is allowed to get in. Whether it is the lawyers connected with the case or the interested parties themselves who 'fix' the court attendants, it is impossible to state definitely, but the fact remains that strangers are curtly turned away whenever they attempt to enter the judge's room.

Only rarely do details of American divorces in Paris leak out, and then only by admission from the principals. The premises in the Gould case were known—that Mrs. Gould left the "conjugal domicile" with an "affinity"—but although every French newspaper knew the facts not one dared publish them.

NO DETAILS ON MILLS DIVORCE

In the case of the beautiful Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and as much a ruler of the "forty" in Paris as of the "four hundred" in New York, not a single detail has yet been obtained as to why, or exactly when, she obtained a divorce in Paris from her husband. All that is known is that Mrs. Mills came to stay with her mother early in 1919 and soon thereafter returned to America—a free woman. Not even her most intimate friends could have known that a divorce was intended, for in that event some facts would have certainly become known.

Similar secrecy surrounded the divorce of Mrs. Leonard Thomas, New York suffragist and society woman, who moved so quietly that the fact of her decree was not known until she herself chose to give it out many months later in New York.

"LOVELIEST WOMAN" FREE

Mrs. Philip Lydig was another of the crop of 1919 Paris divorcees who utilized the convenient Paris law to keep details of her quarrel with her husband from being known. Mrs. Rita Lydig was called by Boldini, the famous painter, for whom she posed, "the loveliest woman in France."

This year, however, New York society is not represented, as far as is known, in the number of couples patiently awaiting their turn in the Paris divorce mill. In their stead are dozens of the new-rich, mostly from the West, including not a few oil millionaires.

"Men who married to have a cook out West found the same woman would not do for a wife when oil spouted in the back yard," declared a noted Paris divorcee lawyer to Universal Service. "They wanted women who could wear diamonds and aid them in establishing themselves in society.

"Sometimes it was the other way about. There is a woman awaiting a divorce in a Paris hotel now who two years ago was the humble wife of a miner in a tiny settlement in New Mexico. Last year a relative died and left her a small tract of land in Eastern Texas. Two months after the legacy was read to her she received an offer from a syndicate to sell outright her holding at a large figure.

DIDN'T SELL

"But this woman had brains. She refused the offer, but signed a contract, carefully drawn, providing that she was to have a royalty on all oil discovered. In a few weeks a well was drilled and oil struck. Others followed and the woman, if not a millionairess, is now very close to being one.

"Rich and independent in her own right she took her husband and went to live in New York. But her husband was a rough, uneducated miner who could barely read and write. To the ambitious woman he was an encumbrance of whom she daily grew more ashamed. So finally she came to Paris to get a divorce and she is here now. Her husband is here also and seems quite as eager to be as free as she does. This, under the French law, is not collusion, for French law says that people who plainly do not want to live together should not be forced to do so."

Others of the new-rich, who have a long, hard path to tread before they reach their goal in the social registers, are here from Nebraska, Iowa, Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Missouri and other Western States. In a large majority of cases they are women. The tango palaces and fashionable restaurants are crowded with them.

And almost all are here either applying for a divorce or seeking information which will enable them to get one later on.

For the purpose of registering a formal protest against the proposed merger of the Union and East Bay Water Companies, a mass meeting, under the auspices of the Elmhurst Community Club, has been called for Tuesday evening.

According to Mrs. E. A. Baxley, secretary of the club, the merger would result in a material increase in the water rate, and it is for the purpose of determining some method of halting the proposed project that the conference has been called.

The gathering will take place at the hall situated at the intersection of Ninetieth avenue and East Fourteenth street, at 8 o'clock.

COTTON CROP OF MEXICO DAMAGED

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 16.—Heavy rains in the laguna cotton section, which includes the eastern part of the State of Durango and the western part of the State of Coahuila, have seriously damaged the crop.

Some reports from the section state that the crop, which before the rains promised to amount to about 200,000 bales, had been reduced to 100,000 bales.

As Mexico uses about 100,000 bales, this would leave no cotton for export.

Charles H. Cunningham, commercial attache of the United States Department of Commerce, estimates that the loss due to rain is about 50,000 bales. This would give Mexico 50,000 bales for export.

LEGION PARTY NOV. 29.

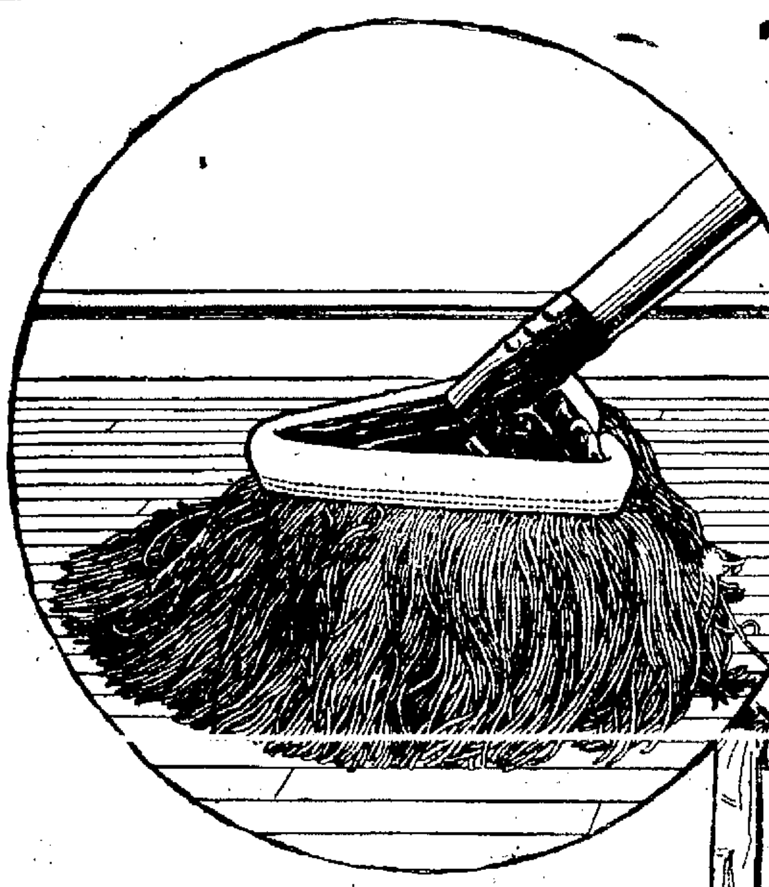
to get your
O-Cedar Polish Mop
at The Old Price
Advance Prices Effective Nov. 1st



BUT a few days remain for you to buy an O-Cedar Mop at the old price.

Increasing manufacturing costs make the raise in price necessary if we are to continue to give you the biggest, most convenient—time, money and labor saving household utility.

The increase is only 25c—but 25c is worth saving.

Originally, (before the war), the price of the O-Cedar Polish Mop was $1.50.

During the war, we used war materials—short length cotton—mill ends of drill—surplus steel for centers and by making the mop smaller we were able to keep the price down.

Now the sources of supply of most of these items are cut off. We must go back to before-the-war materials and pay todays prices for them. For instance cotton cord cost 14c to 16c per pound before the war. Today it costs us 58c. Handles that cost 4c in 1914 cost 12c today. Our labor costs have advanced 200%. And so on.

We will not make a mop that is not up to the O-Cedar standard. We can't continue the O-Cedar standard at present prices. So the advance of 25c is absolutely necessary for us to continue O-Cedar Mops as the millions of housewives want them.

The 25c advance in price is effective November 1st. Even if you do not need a new O-Cedar Mop just now it will pay you to buy one at your nearest store today.

Almost every woman in America knows the work—the time—and the money the O-Cedar Mop saves. And how much prettier, brighter and cleaner it makes the floors. They know it saves back-breaking stooping and bending. When you use an O-Cedar Mop your floors will be the envy of your neighbors.

Easy and Simple to Clean and Renew

Second only to the wonderful utility of the O-Cedar Mop is its simplicity. No trick to learn to wash, clean or renew it. It can be washed and cleaned without bother and muss to take it apart, and fuss and work to put together. When an O-Cedar Mop needs renewing, simply wash it in boiling water, pour a little O-Cedar Polish in the can and let mop stand in it over night. The next morning it is practically as good as new.

Get an O-Cedar Mop today. Your dealer guarantees it to give perfect satisfaction or will return your money.

Today's Prices: $1.25, $1.50, $1.75
Prices November 1st.: $1.50, $1.75, $2.00

Prices Advance on November 1st.
Conditions beyond our control have forced us to add 25c. to the selling price of every O-Cedar Mop on November 1st. Save money by buying now.

THE "SHOE CHAPTER."

Sale of army shoes in the so-called "army and navy stores" throughout the country must give cause for wondering speculation to many a service man who knew the value of a good pair of shoes in France. With a great many others he is asking, where do they all come from? There is no secret to the matter.

The administration at Washington bought during the war more than 32,000,000 pairs of shoes for 4,000,000 soldiers and there were "some" left over. Congressional investigation has brought out the reckless, or even criminal, manner in which money was spent by agents of the war department during the eighteen months the United States was engaged in active conflict. If the purchases had made certain that each soldier should never be without a good pair of shoes much criticism of method might be withheld in respect to the motive.

A well-known writer, mother of a soldier who fought in France, Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr, has written the following:

I had a boy in the service. He was too young for the draft so he enlisted in the regular army and went over with the First Division in August, 1917. Quite providentially I met my boy at Aix-les-Bains in February, 1918. He had earned a commission, but he could not have had it if I had not sent him the money to pay his hotel bill and other expenses. When I saw him the first thing I noticed were his shoes. The soles were worn through and his feet were on the ground in February. 32,227,450 pairs of army shoes were delivered to our forces at home and abroad, nearly ten pairs for each soldier. I don't know where they all went. I know that my boy's feet were in the snow in February, 1918. I know also that enormous stocks of American army shoes were sold to the French after the armistice for about 50 cents a pair. I know that many thousands of pairs of shoes were sold to speculators in this country. A woman told me the other day that her husband had just paid $7 for a pair.

Two years after the signing of the armistice army shoes are for sale all over the land, bought by the administration at war prices, then sold for a song, and finally offered at many times the prices at which they were disposed of by the government.

This is the "shoe chapter" in the story of Democratic extravagance and one that speaks for itself.

"SELLING" AN EXECUTIVE.

In the language of the modern commercial life the publicity man or propagandist "sells" his company, his city or his idea to the country or world. If the organized campaign to set forth the merits of any proposal meets with success the proposal is said to have been "sold" to the country and the old idea of the public having been "sold," in the sense of fooled, is not in any way intimated.

In this connection, then, it has been said in all seriousness that George Creel, with his machinery for publicity in the days before the United States entered the war, as well as those later days up to the armistice, "sold" President Wilson to Europe. His advertising of the President prepared the foreign countries for the visit of Wilson and was partly responsible for the welcome and enthusiasm displayed.

It is only to be regretted that Creel did not have the power, the forethought, or the machinery, to "sell" Europe to President Wilson. In that event the executive might have been saved a great deal of embarrassment in the possession of a knowledge of the desires, intrigue and intentions across the water. The selling plan is a good one when all sides of the question are presented.

THE GREATEST COMMONWEALTH.

The census gives Texas a population of 4,661,027. This isn't so much in excess of California, though Texas exceeds this state in area by more than a hundred thousand square miles, California containing 158,297 to Texas' 265,896. It is claimed by enthusiastic Texans, however, that it could support a population of fifty millions.

As the largest commonwealth, and on account of its peculiar history, any facts concerning Texas are of general interest. It may not be a matter of common knowledge that when Texas, as a republic, consented to be annexed to the United States she enacted the important condition that she might at any time subdivide herself into five states without action by Congress. The fact is somewhat startling. Should the privilege be acted on, eight additional Senators would be enrolled in the national body, sufficient at the present time to decidedly change its political complexion. Another condition the republic exacted was that she should retain as a state asset the public lands within her borders. Consequently, public lands of Texas have a different status than those of California and other of the newer States.

Texas has 253 counties, some of which in turn are as large as some of the Eastern States; but one-third of its population lives in seventeen counties. There are sixty counties without an incorporated town. There are 454 incorporated towns altogether. Of these but two exceed 150,000 in population. The population of Texan counties vary from 37, that of Crane county, in the western part, to 210,000, that of Dallas county.

When division of the great State comes, as come it probably will and as the best informed Texans admit is likely, it will be owing to the dissimilar interests of the sections. Eastern Texas is Southern and Western Texas is Western. Friction is already observable, and must increase as the great expanses populate.

NO NEED FOR HASTE.

Proposal No. 10 on the ballot for the November election is for the calling of a constitutional convention to draft a new State constitution. If the proposal should be approved the legislature at its next session will enact measures for calling and holding such convention.

The constitution may need revision; a great many citizens are of the opinion that a general overhauling will do it good. But will a constitutional convention bring any improvement? Such conventions often fail in their purpose; it is to be doubted that success would attend a convention in California at this time.

For all pressing purposes, or even for reasons which merely seem to be pressing, the people are amending the constitution from election to election. They have substantially changed the constitution by additions and in large part written a new fundamental law. They do not seem to be through with their experimenting. Then there is much difference of opinion at present as to what the fundamental charter of government should be. Judgment is shifting and unstable. Theories and a love for experiment are the trials of the passing day. We are in the midst of a great upheaval and readjustment of thought and retesting of knowledge.

Under such circumstances no harm will befall the people if the proposed constitutional convention is postponed a few years. There is nothing a new constitution would give us that cannot be obtained by direct law-making or legislaitve enactment. Let those measures recently written into the constitution by the people be tried awhile before turning the mover to the enthusiastic tinkers of a convention.

Proposal 10 should be rejected at this time. Vote "No."

A SIMIAN RACE?

A writer who is gifted with a facility of expression and a steadily working imagination has announced his apparent belief in a discovery which he says means that it is through little more than an accident that the human race is what it is today, "the descendants of simians," instead of finer developments of the cat, horse, or some other animal. We are, says this man, who may be said to put more relish than credence in his own theory, a simian race. If the cat, for instance, had gained supremacy among the animals at about the time the monkey recorded the highest development, there would be today a civilization of marvelous feline creatures and with the accompanying changes in culture and material accommodations.

It might have been possible, argues this man, that the ant or the bee could have forgotten its routine of duty long enough to have been caught up in an evolutionary process, and that a man with the traits of one or the other would have been the result.

The difficulties encountered by Clarence Day Jr. in the expansion of his theory is not concerned so much with the reasons why the cat, ant, bee, hornet, or something else, did not become the "man" in the world, as to how it happened, according to the same reasoning, that the monkey did. So long as the so-called missing link remains missing and the ape of the sideshow and zoo remains our only exhibit, he must be acknowledged an unpromising one. The race may be, as Mr. Day says, a simian one, but it cannot be said that he has added anything in proof.

NOTES and COMMENT

Some things that come mighty high in times of war come mighty low in times of peace. For eighteen wooden hulls moored at Alameda the sum of $90,000 was offered. Each must have cost at least that in those exciting times when everybody received whatever pay he asked, and did as little as he was a mind to.

Some Legal Aspects of The Freeholders Election

By HENRY G. TARDY.

Attorney-at-Law, Former Associate Editor American State Reports, author of "Tardy on Receivers"

Much misapprehension exists in regard to the procedure and rights arising under the proposed freeholders' election for a consolidated city and county government. Many of the proponents of the plan are acting under hearsay information as to what can be done under the law relating to this subject. Regardless of what may be said in favor or against any proposed form of consolidation any plan proposed must be executed under the restraints and limitations raised by the Constitutional amendment found in Section 7½A of the Constitution. Whether by design or inadvertence that section of the Constitution offers a field for county division and turmoil rather than that of the ideal form of consolidation desired by many well meaning people.

A board of freeholders elected for consolidation purposes are bound by the law to do certain things in formulating a charter and may do other things which will entail a series of elections resulting in uncertainty and a probable annexation of both small and large cities to other cities and counties without their consent.

The general purpose of the Constitution is to permit the formation of a consolidated city and county but the freeholders may as an alternative propose that a lesser area than the whole county be organized into a consolidated city and county government. Such an alternative proposal necessarily gives rise to various problems as to what shall become of the parts of the county outside of the consolidated area. The complexities of this problem grow when the geographical position of the three principal cities of the county is considered. Those problems are only known to such people who have read and studied the constitutional amendment under which action must be based.

A proposal to organize the whole county into a city and county government must be approved by a majority of the electors in each of the incorporated cities and towns voting separately at an election called for that purpose. It is not generally thought that the larger cities, especially Berkeley and Alameda, will vote in favor of a consolidation of the whole county. Nor is it thought that any body of freeholders would place whole county consolidation solely on the ballot in view of the fact that they have the right to place an alternative proposal by consolidating a lesser area of the county. Consequently the real question to be considered is what can be done in respect to the alternative proposals—a question which is full of dynamite as to possible results from different angles.

The dangers arise from the actions of a body of freeholders in determining what are "essential" cities to a proposed consolidation, and the vote upon the proposed consolidation in respect to such "essential cities." The phrasing of the constitution is that if an alternative proposal is submitted, the board of freeholders must include in such alternative proposal such cities and towns as they deem "necessary and essential to effect consolidation" but they must name any city having a population of over 150,000 as such a "necessary and essential" city.

Hence the city of Oakland must be named as a part of any consolidation of less than the whole county but there is no obligation on the part of the freeholders to add Berkeley or Alameda to such proposed consolidation, although if the alternative proposal is approved at the election held for that purpose the freeholders are obliged to include in the boundaries any city of less than 10,000 population surrounded by the proposed consolidation or which is contiguous thereto and not contiguous to the largest area of the remainder of the original county.

Upon the vote of the alternative proposal any city which is named as an "essential city" rejects the proposal the proposed consolidation fails. If, however, the alternative proposal is voted upon favorably in all of the "essential cities," a district is then formed of the area to be comprised in such consolidation, and a separate election is held at which the whole county votes upon the question of whether the district will be allowed to separate from the original county. The separation may be consented to by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon in the whole county. The effect of the law is that if Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley are named as essential cities, an unfavorable vote in any one of such cities would defeat the proposed consolidation. If Berkeley and Alameda are left out of the proposed consolidation and Oakland alone or with some adjacent territory is made into an alternative proposal for consolidation by the freeholders, and such consolidation is approved by Oakland as an essential city, the city of Berkeley by consenting to the separation of Oakland from the rest of the original county could make such separation legal without the consent of Alameda, if its vote with Oakland would comprise a majority of the whole county vote. In that event the city of Berkeley would be entitled to form a consolidated city and county of Berkeley and incorporate into its consolidation such territory as would lie between it and Oakland. Of course Berkeley could not create a city and county of itself unless it is left out as an essential city and unless Oakland would be made into a consolidated city and county government. If Berkeley has a design to form a city and county of itself, it may engineer the alternative proposal to include Oakland but exclude Alameda and then by its vote make such consolidation effective at the separation election.

A city and county of Oakland without Berkeley being included therein would leave Berkeley a right to organize itself into a separate city and county but if Alameda were separated from the rest of the county by reason of the Oakland consolidation, the city of Alameda having less than 40,000 population could not organize itself into a separate city and county and could not be annexed to the new city and county of Oakland but could be transferred by the legislature without its consent "to an adjoining county or counties." Alameda would be a civic orphan without any well established legal status.

If any alternative proposal is adopted, a series of expensive elections would take place with the result of dividing the county into parcels which on the whole could serve no useful purpose as an economical proposition by reducing the overhead expenses of government and which would undoubtedly result in divisions of the county not contemplated by the majority of the people at the present time.

ANSWERING THE CRITICS

To the Editor of The Tribune:

The TRIBUNE pages have lately contained many extracts from so-called critics of the Bible. I have read these articles with considerable interest, and wondered why they [illegible] believers in God's word. For myself, I am only an unlearned man, without the power of speech to express my feelings in defense of God's law. And like Hezekiah of old, I can only spread out the writing before the Lord.

Wisdom is not always with the wise. The Scribes and Pharisees were the wise men of Israel; but Christ upbraided them and pronounced many woes upon them for their wrong interpretations of the Scriptures.

The world today is ever looking for new religion, easier paths to walk in, more self-gratification, less self-sacrifice, something more congenial to the carnal heart, a shorter easier road into the fold. But the Scriptures say, Seek ye out the old paths.

What the world needs will always be profitable for inventors to supply. Therefore if the world needs a new Bible it will soon be forthcoming, regardless of the terrible maledictions pronounced against those who would dare to add to or take from the words of this book.

It is not the Children of the Kingdom that are demanding a new Bible, but that great multitude who would lull themselves into a position of false security, preach to us smooth things they say that our consciences may be stilled. Then follows the teacher with the itching ears.

"I do not advocate Koran or Buddhistic teachings especially," says the Berkeley professor. Well, I should hope that he does not. We have raised a hundred millions to send missionaries to China and India this year—to many of us a personal sacrifice—that we may teach these poor heathen something of Christianity instead of the doctrines of the Koran. But over in Berkeley they do not advocate "the Koran or Buddhistic teachings especially," probably because it is Christian money that pays the salaries.

My greatest regret is that 60 percent of the taxes I pay in so-called Christian America goes to pay salaries of men who temporize with error. And still they come, more money for schools to teach evolution, Protoplasm, etc., etc.

For my part, I am satisfied with the Bible account of it, knowing that the secret things belong to the Lord.

F. R. EMERSON.

NEVADA, MY LAND

Nevada, my land!
In dreams the phantom night-bird
calls me back to thee;
Each dusty sagebrush waves a
beck'ning hand to me;
I long again to climb the steep and lonesome ways
Where Hope urged on that treasure hunt of other days.
Nevada, my land!
From out whose hills white silver flowed the world around;
But yesterday a desert, now with blossoms crowned.
Chameleon land, I see thee as the plastic clay
From which men build a million homes in this, thy day.

(The author of the above lines is Mrs. Annie Dolman Inskeep of Berkeley, daughter of William Hickman Dolman, one of the earliest of Nevada pioneers. Of the poem Governor Boyle wrote the author, "I am frank to say that I consider it the very best of the many efforts made to signalize the spirit of the State.)

HEALTH and HAPPINESS

How to Care for Your Ears and Know When to Seek Aid

By Dr. LEONARD K. HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D.
(Johns Hopkins University.)

Wax in the ears hardens more quickly in winter than in summer, and unless gently removed the secretion may interfere with hearing and perhaps cause pain.

It is safe to wash the ears first with warm water and soap each day, and then to bathe them and the face in cold water. This method serves the purpose of cleanliness, and at the same time accustoms the skin to the surrounding air. The result is less likelihood of chapped skin and "taking cold."

When ears have accumulated hardened wax, it is not wise to use an instrument to make them free from the substances, but use warm water instead. The warm water having softened the wax, it will run out, and the chances of injury to the ear will have been avoided. If you find you cannot remove the wax by the gentle method you had better consult a specialist.

It is wise, if you have a persistent earache, to take a strong cathartic to help draw some of the blood stream from the head. This should help to remove the pressure from that region. Pain is thus reduced temporarily in the regions of the ear. Hot foot baths are also highly recommended for this purpose if the digestive apparatus should not be further taxed by more cathartics.

If hot foot baths are employed to lessen the pressure of the blood stream in the head, great care should be taken not to subject one's self to cold air. The contrast in temperature may thus be sure to cause "catching cold," which would greatly aggravate the trouble in the ear. It is best to go to bed immediately after such or any other hot treatment.

Few physicians now recommend hot applications for earache. They prefer ice bags to scatter the pain rather than bring it to a head by means of heat. If this treatment is preferred, again you must be careful not to subject yourself to too cold air.

Stuffing your ear with raw cotton to keep out the cold is not advised. Such treatment stuffs up the ear-hole, and poisonous fumes in the head and ear cannot escape through the aperture. Furthermore, a stuffed ear is a place where dangerous germs may thrive and multiply.

If you must put raw cotton in an ear that leaks, leave the hole open to do its work. Place the absorbent cotton in the hollow below; there it can catch whatever fluid exudes.

If your earache is due to cold in winter you should protect your ear. Either the hat should be so made as to come down far enough to shield the ears or earlaps should be worn. This advice applies especially to [illegible]

An application to soothe an ear that suffers from cold weather is made of a mixture of equal parts of olive oil and tincture of laudanum. Heat this slightly, and dip a tiny piece of absorbent cotton in it. Put this into the ear as far as it will go without causing a sensation of pain. You can remove it later with a hairpin gently handled.

Another good application for the ear is the following:

Sulphate of atropine ......... 2 grains
Pure water ............ ½ ounce

Paint the inner part of the ear with this every three or four hours.

Internal treatment of more or less serious nature should never be attempted at home. You can afford no risks with this very delicate apparatus. Such interference must be left to the physician or specialist.

Ex-Duke Marries Carpenter's Daughter

BERLIN, Oct 16—The ex-Duke of Saxe-Altenburg has startled German society by marrying a carpenter's daughter. He used the liberty given him by the revolution to divorce his first wife—Princess Adelaide of Schaumburg-Lippe—and left Altenburg for Berlin, where he lived as a mere baron in a small flat.

His bride was formerly an actress and the ex-Duke first met her when she was appearing at Altenburg. When he abdicated she followed him to Berlin and acted as his housekeeper.

NEGLECT RESULTS IN LOSS OF HAIR

Chicago Specialist Says Proper Care Would Prevent Many Cases of Baldness

The mere use of the comb and brush three or four times a day is not sufficient attention to pay to one of nature's most wonderful gifts, says Prof John H Austin bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, who now has offices at The Owl Drug Co.

Both men and women owe it to themselves to keep their hair healthy beautiful and abundant—and the proper corrective treatment of scalp disorders will do this

Nature's signs of distress—dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair, dry or brittle hair—warn you of approaching baldness Do not wait a day—see Prof. Austin, over 40 years a specialist—he will advise you what to do

By showing you the roots of your own hair, magnified thousands of times, pointing out to you the parasites that are destroying your hair day by day, gradually killing every root until, in time, the head becomes entirely bald, you will be convinced that any delay may be deeply regretted Prof Austin says the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, etc. is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp—both men and women invited—Private Office at The Owl Drug Co. 14th and Washington, Oakland, 778 Market St San Francisco. Hours 10 to 12 and 2 to 4.—Advertisement.

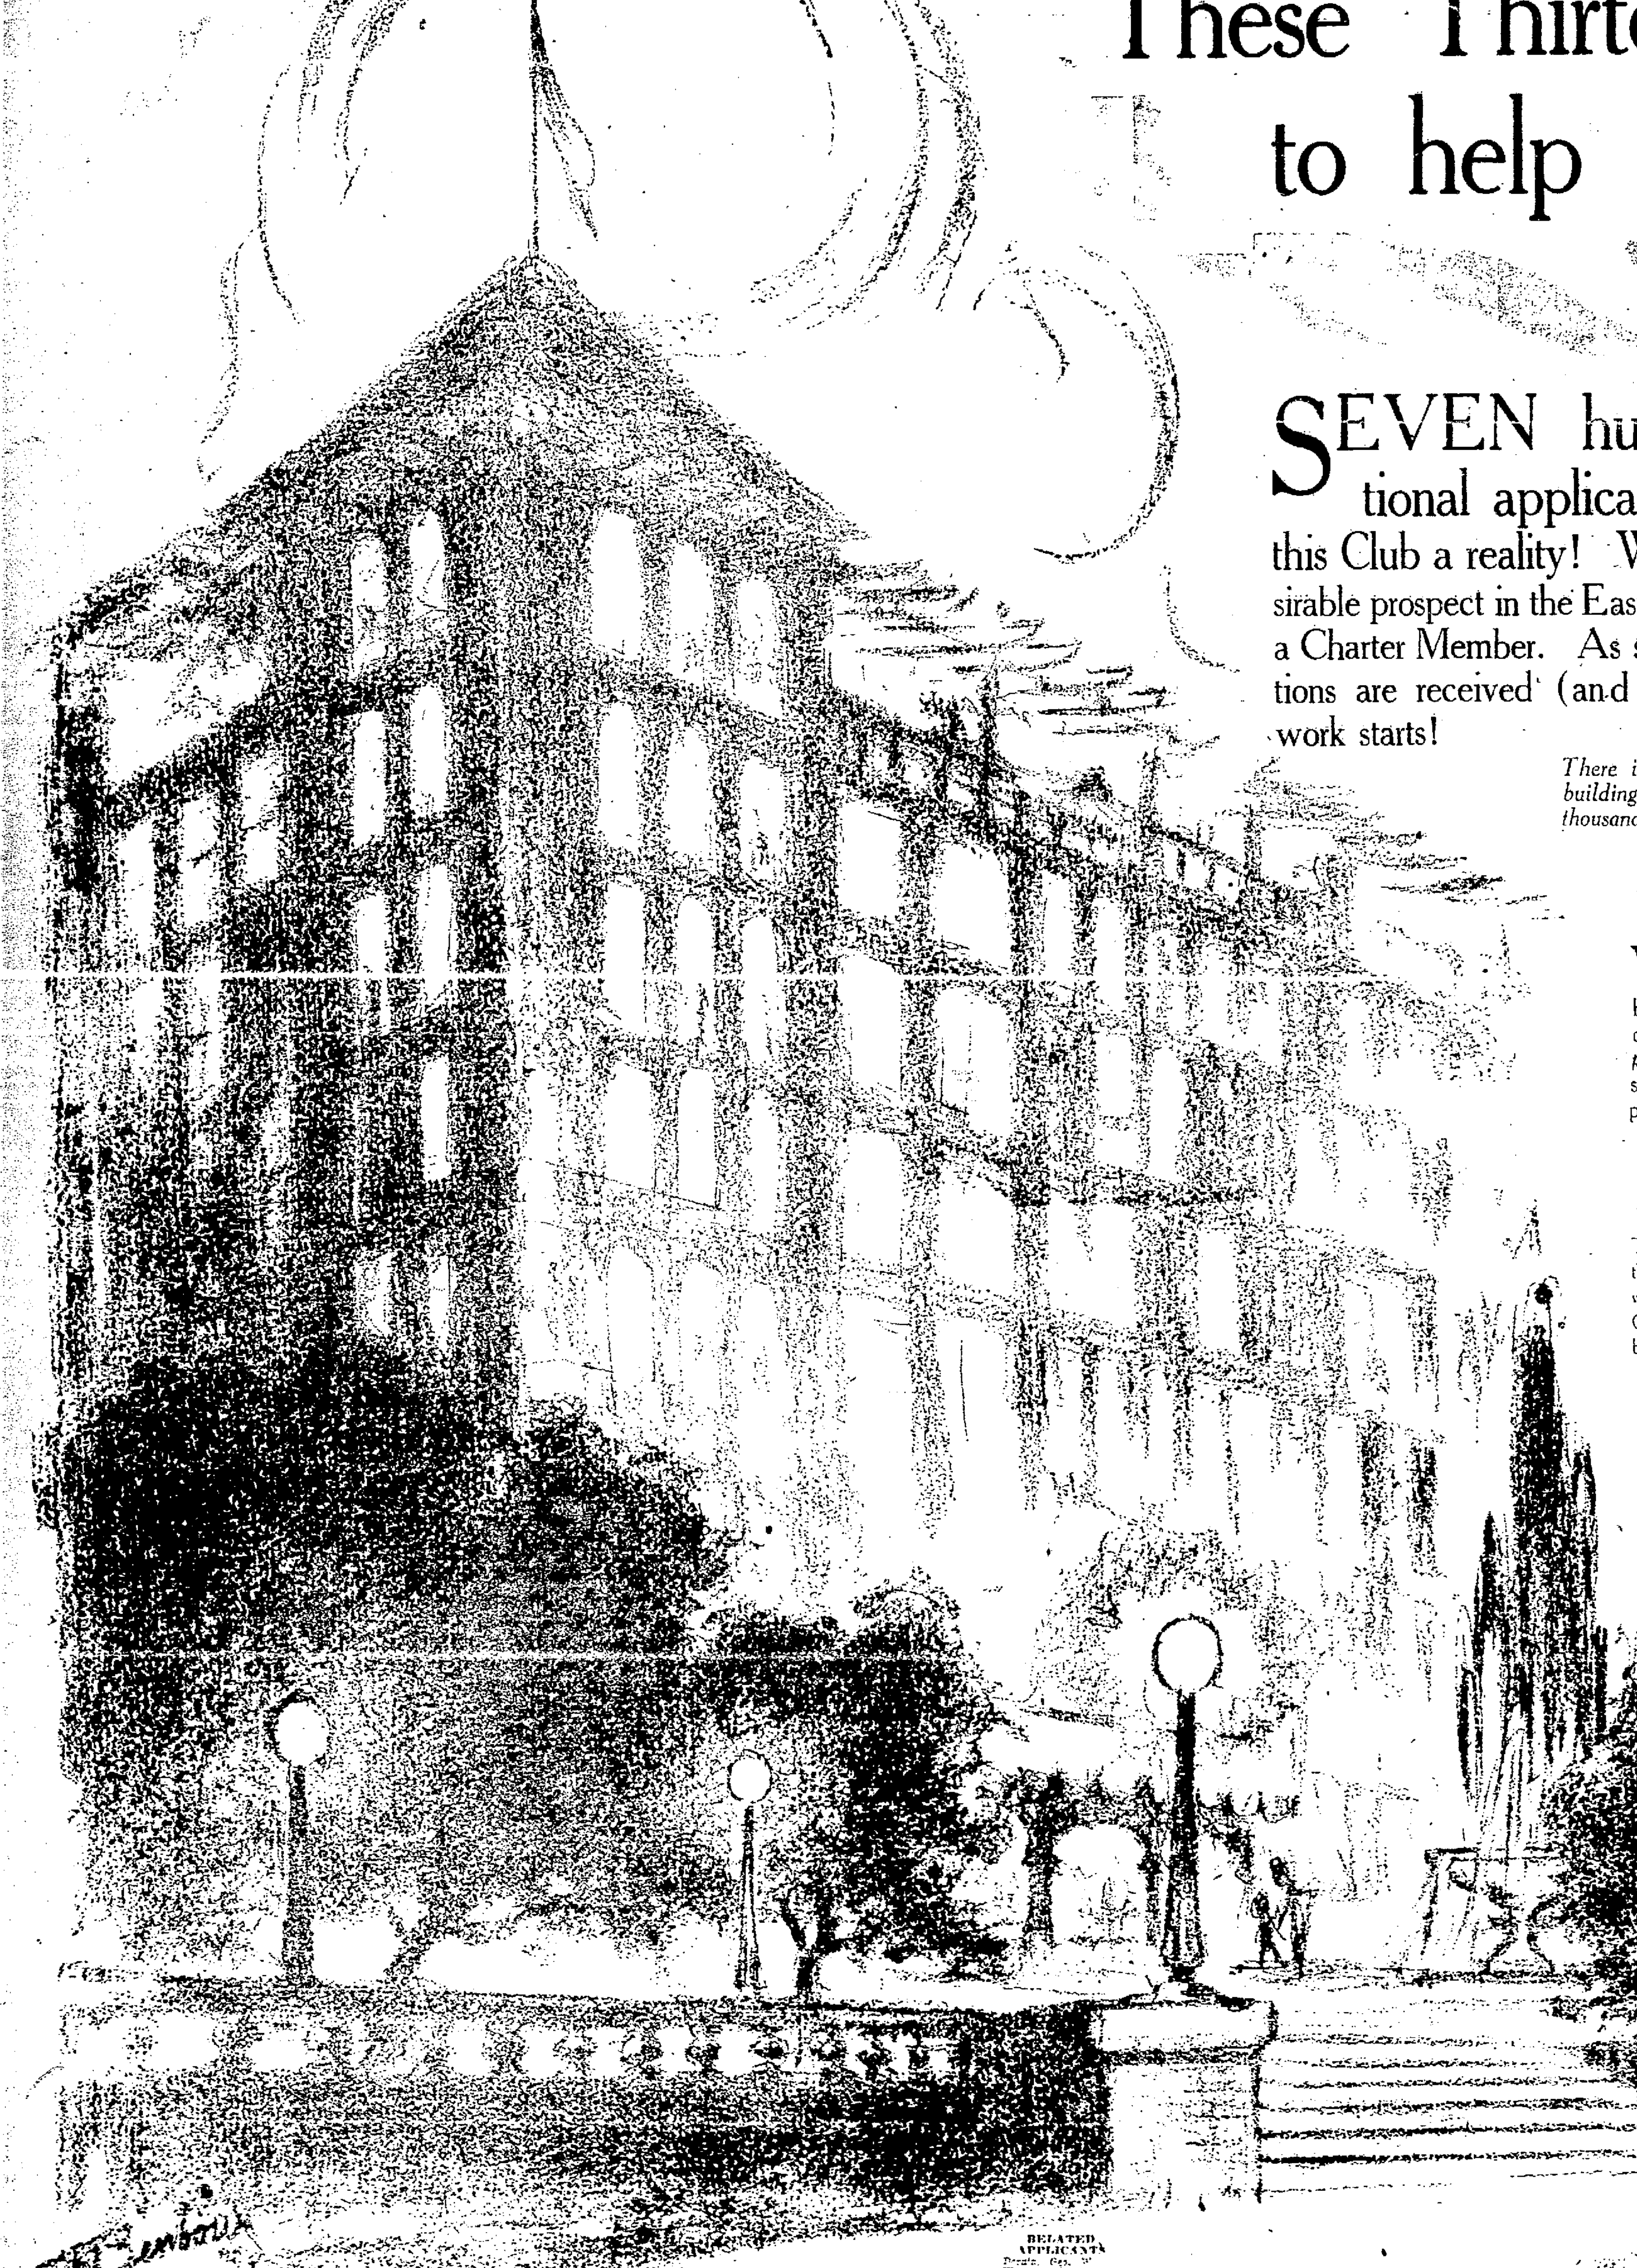
The new Athens Athletic Club — and the Men Behind it

These Thirteen Hundred Men Invite You to help put over this much needed Club for Oakland



SEVEN hundred additional applications will make this Club a reality! We want every desirable prospect in the Eastbay section to become a Charter Member. As soon as these applications are received (and accepted) the actual work starts!

*There is nothing definitely settled as to location, kind of building—nothing but MEMBERSHIPS. When the two thousand are in, they and they alone will pass on everything.

Plan of Organization

WE propose getting 3000 members, at $200 each; then build and equip a $600,000 Club. 2000 members will enable us to complete the project. No member can own more than one membership, which will be a proprietary interest (par value $200). Memberships will be salable or transferrable, subject, of course, to the approval of the proper committee.

MEMBERSHIPS SHOULD ENHANCE IN VALUE

The history of such institutions as this shows that memberships become very valuable. The Claremont Country Club, for instance, started its memberships at $100—now worth $1200!

HE Athens Athletic Club will not confine its activities to athletics. It will be a modern metropolitan club in every sense of word—social, recreational—with features that include the nilies of members.

JST think of all the things you'd like to see included in YOUR club—a gymnasium, swimg pool, lounging rooms, grill, dancing, billiards. lace to "put up" your out-of-town friends, and everything!

We do not want every man who has $200. We want the men who are RIGHT!

Athletic Affiliations

Members interested in golf will be able to qualify for tournament owing to their affiliation with the club. And this applies to other sports as well.

LEASE NOTE: If you ind joining later, but are waitg to see "what happens" you e holding the club back, it cannot be a reality until 000 men have signed applitions.

YOU probably know half the men who have already signed applications. Join them and put over this much needed institution.

See that your name is listed as a Charter Member---to be deposited in the corner stone---and engraved for all time as one of the builders of this club. Fill out the coupon at the right and send it in---NOW!

All promotion expenses so far, including this announcement, have been paid by the voluntary contributions of applicants for membership.

JOYOUS HEALTH IS YOUR RIGHT

If You Are Sick, Rundown, Nervous, Cheer Up, There's a Way to Restore You

Tingling, buoyant health and vitality is man's natural state. Worry, excesses, after effects of the "flu," wrong living, dissipation slow up and defeat Nature's purposes. If you are sick, clean out, tone up and give Nature a chance to restore you.

Beware False Stimulants Called Tonics

Beware so-called tonics that contain a large percentage of alcohol or other narcotic drugs. They make bad matters worse while deceiving by false stimulation. Alcohol and other narcotics give a sense of well-being while they poison the body, slow down the vital organs, clog the system and create a necessity for narcotics.

Neal-Tone

FOR WEAK MEN AND WOMEN

A Real Tonic

Neal-Tone is built on the most scientific ideas in modern medicine. It is sold only in convenient tablet form, contains no alcohol or other narcotic drugs. It is not a stimulant, it is strictly a tonic.

If you need a tonic, why not try Neal-Tone? It is tested and safe. Backed by 30 years' experience in dealing with nervous, exhausted, broken-down, debilitated men and women.

Compounded by a Well-Known Physician

Dr. B. E. Neal founded the Neal Institutes for drink and drug cases. His experience in dealing with cases needing tonic treatment is unusual.

Neal-Tone is its own testimonial. Try it! Ask your druggist for a free sample, or send 10 cents to cover postage and mailing expense to Dr. B. E. Neal Medicine Company, or W. S. Wallace, 1550 Fell street, Dept. B, San Francisco, Cal., for a five-day sample package in a plain wrapper.—Advertisement.

Danderine is "Beauty-Tonic"

Immediately after a "Danderine" massage, your hair takes on new life, lustre and wondrous beauty, appearing twice as heavy and plentiful, because each hair seems to fluff and thicken.

Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, plain or scraggly. You, too, want lots of long, strong hair, glistening with beauty.

A 35-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" freshens your scalp, checks dandruff and falling hair. This stimulating "beauty-tonic" gives to thin, dull, fading hair that youthful brightness and abundant thickness. All drug counters sell "Danderine."—Advertisement.

STOMACH TROUBLE

|---|---|---|
| Indigestion | Gases | Acidity |
| Sourness | Flatulence | Palpitation |

Let "Pape's Diapepsin" correct your digestion by neutralizing the harmful acids in the stomach and intestines, then you can eat favorite foods without fear. Prompt stomach relief awaits you.

WEAR AND TEAR BEGIN AT THE SURFACE

Save the Surface and You Save All

Paint Protection is Economy

A building painted with W. P. Fuller & Co.'s Paint is wrapped in a weather-tight covering.

Dwellings, Barns, Fences and other structures, whether of Wood, Metal or Concrete should be preserved from decay and disintegration by the use of good paint. A square yard of paint coating upon a surface costs a few cents, yet it will beautify and protect dollars' worth of property for many years. Destructive elements are always at work, a little chip here, a little spot of decay somewhere else, and soon the building is an old building, and paint, W. P. Fuller & Co.'s Paint, would have prevented the destruction.

OCT. 17-23.

Burgoyne surrendered to the Americans at Saratoga on Oct. 17, 1777. Thomas B. Reed, Congressman and author, was born on Oct. 18, 1839. Another surrender, that of Cornwallis at Yorktown, took place Oct. 19, 1781. On Oct. 20, 1837, the Indian chief Osceola was captured. Magellan entered the strait which now bears his name Oct. 21, 1520. On Oct. 22, 1844, there was considerable excitement as Miller, the Adventist, had predicted that date for the end of the world. Harlan P. Halsey, author of the "Old Sleuth" tales, was born on Oct. 23, 1837.

At Isleton a man named Brigham Young has brought suit for divorce because, he says, he found out that his wife had two husbands. Somewhere in this item there would appear to be a poetic victory for the feminine cause.

According to a despatch in the Fresno Republican Mrs. George Bass of the Women's Bureau of the Democratic National Committee has said:

"On the contrary, the League of Nations has taken cognizance of all conditions affecting women and children as well as opium and other dangerous drugs." G. B., who lives in Bakersfield wires in frantic haste, "Me, who thought I was a heroine find I am only heroin."

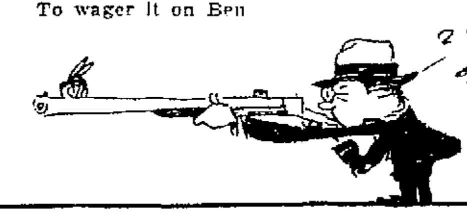
HOW DO YOU RATE THIS?

Ad in Berkeley Times: "Lost, pair of gray trousers near Shattuck and Center."

The gloom that once put Mudville
  On the sport and metered map
Was a rosy haze of gladness
  'Side of that in Windy Gap

For the eagle eye of Simpson
  Has been called an onion set
And the steady arm of Simpson
  Hasn't stopped its shaking yet

The shootin' match was under way,
  And all the hometown men
Had mortgaged everything they owned
  To wager it on Ben



And Ben, he touched the trigger,
  And Ben he cocked his eye
And folks said, "Goodby, target"
  When Ben, he let her fly.

On the wings of a mosquito
  Earthly fortunes took their flight
For one lit on Simpson's rifle
  And he took it for a sight.

Me, I wagered my tobacco
  And my horse and speckled vest
And I own a firm conviction
  That mosquitoes are a pest.

After looking over the new evening gowns it becomes more and more evident that many a woman this winter will not have a stitch to her back.

A speaker at the laundrymen's convention spoke on "The Flexible Family." One in which the old man may be bent before he is broke?

Says a millinery note: "It is popular this season to smother the crown in drenched ostrich." But think, dear, how the poor birds must suffer.

U. S. Thrift Plan Is Considered by U. of C.

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—The Department of Education of the University of California is giving consideration to a plan advanced by the Government Savings Organization of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District for the development of courses in personal budget making for public school students as part of the work in Americanization and citizenship. The Government Savings Organization has been promised the active co-operation of many of the county superintendents of public education in spreading the gospel of thrift and saving through the use of personal budgets by the school children of the state.

In a recent letter to the Government Savings Organization in San Francisco, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Will C. Wood, of California, said: "The State Board of Education, at its meeting in San Diego, endorsed the thrift program which you outlined. I wish you success in carrying out your Budget Plan."

In replying to the Government Savings Organization, Elmer C. ## When the film goes—watch and see

Learn now how teeth look—how they feel—when you combat the film.

Get from your druggist, without cost, this ten-day test. Note the instant results, then look in ten days.

Millions have already done this. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. Now show your home folks what clean teeth really mean.

The war on film

Dental science, the world over, is fighting a war on film. Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. And most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

Those troubles have been constantly increasing. The ordinary tooth paste does not end film, so the tooth brush has proved inadequate. Millions know how well-brushed teeth have discolored and decayed.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. And, despite all brushing, few escape these troubles caused by film.

New ways to fight it

Now dental science has found ways to fight film, day by day. Able authorities have proved the methods efficient. Leading dentists everywhere now urge their application.

The methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. To millions it has brought a new era in teeth cleaning. And to every home a ten-day test is offered free, so all may quickly know it.

Quick, visible results

Anyone can see and feel what Pepsodent is doing. No old method of brushing ever brought such effects. So we let this test convince you.

One ingredient is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. The alkalinity of the saliva is multiplied also, and at once. That is to neutralize mouth acids which cause tooth decay.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily adhere.

The effects of Pepsodent come with every application. We constantly combat, in efficient ways, the teeth's great enemies. And millions of teeth are given new protection and new beauty.

Millions now show the effects

In every circle nowadays you see glistening teeth. Ask the owners. You will find, we think, that they are using Pepsodent.

Go get this free tube and try it for yourself. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Then let the children use it. Their teeth need it most. Very few children reach the age of 15 without some tooth decay.

Let the man who smokes see how it takes the stained film from his teeth.

Let all find out how much cleaner teeth feel, how much safer, when brushed in this new way. Then this ten-day test may bring to your home some lifetime effects.

New Hair Growth After BALDNESS

On legal affidavit, John Hart Brittain, business man, certified to this: "My head at the top and back was absolutely bald. The scalp was shiny. An expert said that he thought the hair roots were extinct, and there was no hope of my ever having a new hair growth.

"Yet now, at an age over 66, I have a luxuriant growth of soft, strong, lustrous hair! No trace of baldness. The pictures shown here are from my photographs." Mr. Brittain certified further:

INDIAN'S SECRET OF HAIR GROWTH

"At a time when I had become discouraged at trying various hair lotions, tonics, specialists' treatments, etc., I came across, in my travels, a Cherokee Indian 'medicine man' who had an elixir that he asseverated would grow my hair. Although I had but little faith, I gave it a trial. To my amazement a light fuzz soon appeared. It developed, day by day, into a healthy growth, and ere long my hair was as prolific as in my youthful days.

That I was astonished and happy is expressing my state of mind mildly.

Obviously, the hair roots had not been dead, but were dormant in the scalp, awaiting the fertilizing potency of the mysterious pomade.

I negotiated for and came into possession of the principle for preparing this mysterious elixir, now called Kotalko, and later had the recipe put into practical form by a chemist.

That my own hair growth was permanent has been amply proved."

How YOU May Grow YOUR Hair

It has been proved in very many cases that hair roots did not die even when the hair fell out through dandruff, fever, alopecia areata or certain other hair or scalp disorders. Miss A. D. Otto reports: "About 8 years ago my hair began to fall out until my scalp in spots was almost entirely bald. I used everything that was recommended but was always disappointed until at last I came across Kotalko. My bald spots are being covered now; the growth is already about three inches." G. W. Mitchell reports: "I had spots completely bald, over which hair is now growing since I used Kotalko." Mrs. Matilda Maxwell reports: "The whole front of my head was as bald as the palm of my hand for about 15 years. Since using Kotalko, hair is growing all over the place that was bald." Many more splendid reports from satisfied users.

Novel Plan of Adapting the Aeroplane to Practical Use Is Given a Trial by the Oakland Real Estate Board

The practical use of the aeroplane in showing real estate was conclusively and successfully demonstrated by the members of the Oakland Real Estate Board at a memorable gathering of the organization at Durant Field last Sunday afternoon. Aircraft history was made on that occasion and a new chapter was written in the development of real estate salesmanship.

In response to an invitation from R. C. Durant, head of the Durant Aircraft Corporation, extended to the realtors by Captain E. V. Rickenbacher, some two hundred realtors and their families met at Durant Field Sunday afternoon and witnessed a practical test of a theory evolved by Rickenbacher to the effect that the aeroplane, no longer an experiment and a novelty, but a concrete factor in the business life of this community, is a suitable means of conveyance for the real estate salesman and its practical adaptability to the needs of his business.

Piloted by aviators of the aircraft organization, each one an ace with a memorable war record to his credit and all under the direction of Captain Rickenbacher, American ace of aces, fifteen members of the Board made the 30-minute flight over the east bay area and each one returned to the field not only enthusiastic over the pleasures of such a trip but thoroughly convinced of the practical efficacy of Captain Rickenbacher's theory regarding the usefulness of the aeroplane to realty salesmen.

HIS MAIDEN TRIP

F. Bruce Maiden, president of the Oakland Real Estate Board, was the first to leave the ground promptly at 2 p. m. He was shortly followed by James J. McElroy and F. F. Porter, vice-presidents of the organization, and by Carlos G. White, the board's attorney. Joseph A. Pizzotti and John H. Bolton, directors of the organization, Fred E. Reed, president of the California Real Estate Association, Leland S. Durham, Thomas H. Larkin, Arthur R. Mitchell, George Gould, E. D. Simpson, and Fred Watterson, members of the organization, Miss Watterson and Mrs. Leland Dunham were other passengers in the three standard biplanes which were used during the day's demonstration.

"A memorable milestone was reached in real estate salesmanship and a new achievement credited to the already notable list of Captain Rickenbacher when the Oakland Real Estate Board proved to its own satisfaction and to that of the public a usefulness for the aeroplane as yet unannounced," said F. Bruce Maiden, president of the Oakland Real Estate Board. "It is only from a vantage point of elevation reached in no other manner, that one may view an entire community at one glance and, by a graduat shifting of that point of view, be able to analyze the relation one to another of each of the districts of the city. By no other means can one visualize the city's plan, comprehend its topography and its geographical relationship to its various component parts and its surrounding territory so accurately and promptly and by no other means can all of these features be so realistically impressed upon the mind of one who is not a student of such subjects."

A PRACTICAL PLAN

This was the unanimous verdict of those who tested out the proposal of Captain Rickenbacher on Sunday afternoon.

Said Fred E. Reed, president of the State Realty Association:

"The visitor to Oakland, unfamiliar with its city plan, its system of transportation, its geography and its topography, unadvised regarding the location and relation of its various residence districts, its commercial centers and its industrial areas, but compelled to familiarize himself with all of these features as a precedent to intelligent investment in the community, must expend many days or weeks in touring the city on foot and by automobile, studying maps and pictures and even then, unless he be a skilled investigator along this line, the mass of information secured at various times will prove confusing. Every realty man has expended to no profit a vast amount of time and automobile hire in showing the city to intending investors and, becoming confused by what is shown, have ultimately made unsatisfactory selections or none at all.

"Our experience with the Durant machines has shown us that all of this information can be obtained in a few minutes, that first-hand accurate impressions thus obtained are registered on one's mind coincidentally with the result that a person who has made this study from the aeroplane returns to the field thoroughly familiar with the situation and with an intelligent understanding of the problem before him, equipped to deal with it to a greater degree than he could otherwise be and having done more effectively and more satisfactorily several weeks' work in as many minutes."

While "Cliff" Durant and his assistants, Captain Rickenbacher and Major Chambers, skilled aviators and enthusiastic believers in the commercial future of the aeroplane, have done much to develop aircraft in modern business activity, and while other concerns in other parts of the world have been working along this line, the event of a week ago was the first in this line where this usefulness for the aeroplane was proven. The success of the experiment has proven a basis for a report now being made by the Oakland Real Estate Board to the National Association of Real Estate Boards for presentation to its salesmanship department and recommendation to real estate men throughout the United States.

Oakland has led the way in this practical use of the aeroplane.

'PHONE CO. TO KEEP DEPOSIT

An order issued by the Railroad Commission gives the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company and all other telephone companies operating in the state authority to retain funds collected from subscribers for installation and extension charges. It has been the custom prior to the taking over of the lines by the government to return the installation charges amounting to $3.50 to the subscriber after a year's use of the phone installed. This custom was set aside by federal authorities, but it again was established as a practice when the lines again came under the jurisdiction of the commission. Recently the companies asked the commission for a modification of its order governing the practice. In granting the request after an investigation as to the costs of installation, etc., the commission says that moneys collected as installation charges from subscribers between August 1, 1919, to August 1, 1920, must be returned, but that charges collected after August 1 of this year may be retained by the company.

The charge for installing extension has been fixed at $1.50 by the commission's order of today, which also provides for a $1.50 charge for each station of private exchange service after the initial installation charge of $3.50.

Among the facts brought out at the hearings on the application is a record showing that in 1918, the last normal year, the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company completed in excess of 200,000 separate and distinct operations while gaining but 9000 stations. This was the result of taking out telephones ordered disconnected, disconnecting and reconnecting service for superseding subscribers and for subscribers moving to different addresses. The cost of these operations would have to be borne by the steady subscriber unless the expense is cared for through the retention of the installation charges. It was shown that the cost of installation ranges from $5 to $6.50.

Million Dollars In Cut Flowers Every Year

J. FRED SEULBERGER, County Horticultural Commissioner who Told an Eastern Convention of Alameda County Climate and Business.

The cut flower business of Alameda and San Mateo counties amounts to one million dollars a year, with more than two-thirds of that business located in Alameda county, and these flowers, many of them raised in the open all winter, shipped to Chicago and New York markets.

These remarkable facts were brought out in an address by J. Fred Seulberger, Horticultural Commissioner of Alameda county, delivered at the annual convention of the florists of the United States held in Indianapolis during the past week. The following excerpts taken from Mr. Seulberger's address will prove of interest even to the enthusiastic Alameda county boomer.

One million dollars' worth of cut flowers are shipped every year from Alameda and San Mateo counties, about two-thirds of which come from Alameda county. These two counties supply practically all of the cut flowers used commercially or shipped abroad from northern California. There are about 550 growers in these two counties who have from one small hot house to fifteen acres of solid glass. This figure does not include the local cut flower business, but only what is called the "export" or shipped flowers. This is given even greater care than the fresh fruit shipping for which the state has become famous.

About August 15 shipping commences with asters. They are grown by the acre and are a grand sight when in bloom. The early shipments are made only to about twelve-hour distances, but by the first of September they are shipped as far as Texas, and up and down the Pacific coast. Then come the Chrysanthemums, which grow out of doors under cheese cloth and reach the very finest state of perfection. They are shipped as far east as Detroit, and arrive there in fine condition. This popular flower is shipped all winter from November 1 until March.

From November 1 the hothouse flowers are shipped by the carloads in all directions, and continue until the weather gets too warm, which shuts down shipping to distant parts. I have been at the Oakland Pier where the trains are loaded for the north, east, and south, and have seen carloads of boxes of flowers leaving in each direction. Just before Thanksgiving the shipping consists mostly of chryanthemums, roses, carnations and violets.

About May 15 the straw or dried flowers commence to be shipped and that lasts well into the middle of September, so that flower shipping continues all the year around.

In Alameda county we have a number of growers who specialize in palms, ferns and other house plants, and at Christmas raise thousainds of poinsettias, and cyclamen plants, and at Easter time several varieties of potted roses, azaleas, rhododendrons, lilacs and other Easter plants, as well as thousands of Easter lilies, which are shipped to all western states, to Chicago and even Detroit.

The climatic conditions that exist around Oakland and the fertility of the soil account for the wonderful success attained by our growers at the least expense. No need for hail insurance here, and the thermometer never goes below thirty degrees or abov 87 in our hottest days.

It is estimated that about one million dollars worth of cut flowers are shipped every year from Alameda and San Mateo counties.

It is an interesting side fact that the Public of California has to pay the same price for flowers as in the East, as they have to compete with the price at Denver, Colorado, Houston, Texas and Vancouver, Canada, which makes our fine flowers costs about the same as in Chicago. This is a condition I wish to call to the attention of the Eastern florist; that a dollar in flowers does not go any further in California than it does in Chicago or New York.

SEVENTH STREET OPENED AT GRADE

The city of Oakland was last week granted by the Railroad Commission permission to extend Seventh street, at grade, across the tracks of the Southern Pacific at West Oakland. The entire expense of constructing the crossing is to be borne by the Southern Pacific. The cost of installing crossing gates to be moved from a nearby crossing is to be shared equally by the city and the railroad company. The private crossing now located about three hundred feet from the Seventh street crossing is to be closed.

The fact that the city has no money to spend for the construction of an overhead crossing is given by the commission as a reason for its order permitting the crossing at grade. The permit is described as temporary, the crossing to be maintained "until such time as traffic conditions warrant and financial conditions allow of the installing of a grade separation." The estimated cost of an overhead crossing is $200,000.

RAISE MOTOR RATES

W. C. and Henry Colberg, operators of motor boats carrying passengers and extress between Stockton and different sections of the delta region in San Joaquin county, have asked the Railroad Commission for authority to increase their rates. They say that existing rates have been made non-compensatory by increases in operating costs.

NEW POWER PROJECT

The San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation has applied to the Railroad Commission for authority to issue $2,625,000 of bonds to reimburse the company for or to provide the cost of constructing the Kerchoff power project on the San Joaquin river, including the transmission line and necessary substation.

OAKLANDERS HELP FORM REALTY ASSN IN SANTA CRUZ

Responding to a call for help from realty brokers of Santa Cruz, F. F. Porter, vice-president of the Oakland Real Estate Board and director of the California Real Estate Association, and R. Porter Giles, executive secretary of the local board and of the state organization, went to Santa Cruz and participated in the organization of the Santa Cruz Realty Board which was effected at the rooms of the Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday morning. Some 25 local brokers signed their names to the roster as charter members of the new organization. The election of officers and details of the organization program are to be adopted on October 19.

On instruction of State Real Estate Commissioner Ray L. Riley, the field deputies of his department touring the state for the investigation of complaints and checking up of licenses, are strongly urging the establishment of realty organizations in every town in every county where such bodies do not already exist. Fred E. Reed of Oakland, president of the state organization, is following up the work of these deputies with efforts on the part of the state body in perfecting such boards, as has just been done at Santa Cruz.

REALTORS PLAN COMMUNITY ADVERTISING

A campaign of advertising and publicity by means of which the purpose and community service of the Oakland Real Estate Board is to be promulgated, is to be launched at a general membership luncheon meeting of the organization to be held at Hotel Oakland on Wednesday noon, October 20. F. Bruce Maiden, president of the board, in consultation with his board of directors, has prepared an outline of a comprehensive plan which is to be presented to the general membership for consideration at this luncheon meeting.

The plan proposed is based on the procedure of the Cleveland and Chicago realty organizations and which has proven of enormous benefit to organizations and to realters of other cities and to the general public. It is the intention of the Oakland Real Estate Board to launch this campaign in the immediate future and to continue it for one year.

INCREASE WATER RATES

The Campbell Water Company of Campbell, Santa Clara county, wants to increase its charges for water, claiming that its present rates are not compensatory. It has filed an application asking for an increase with the Railroad Commission.

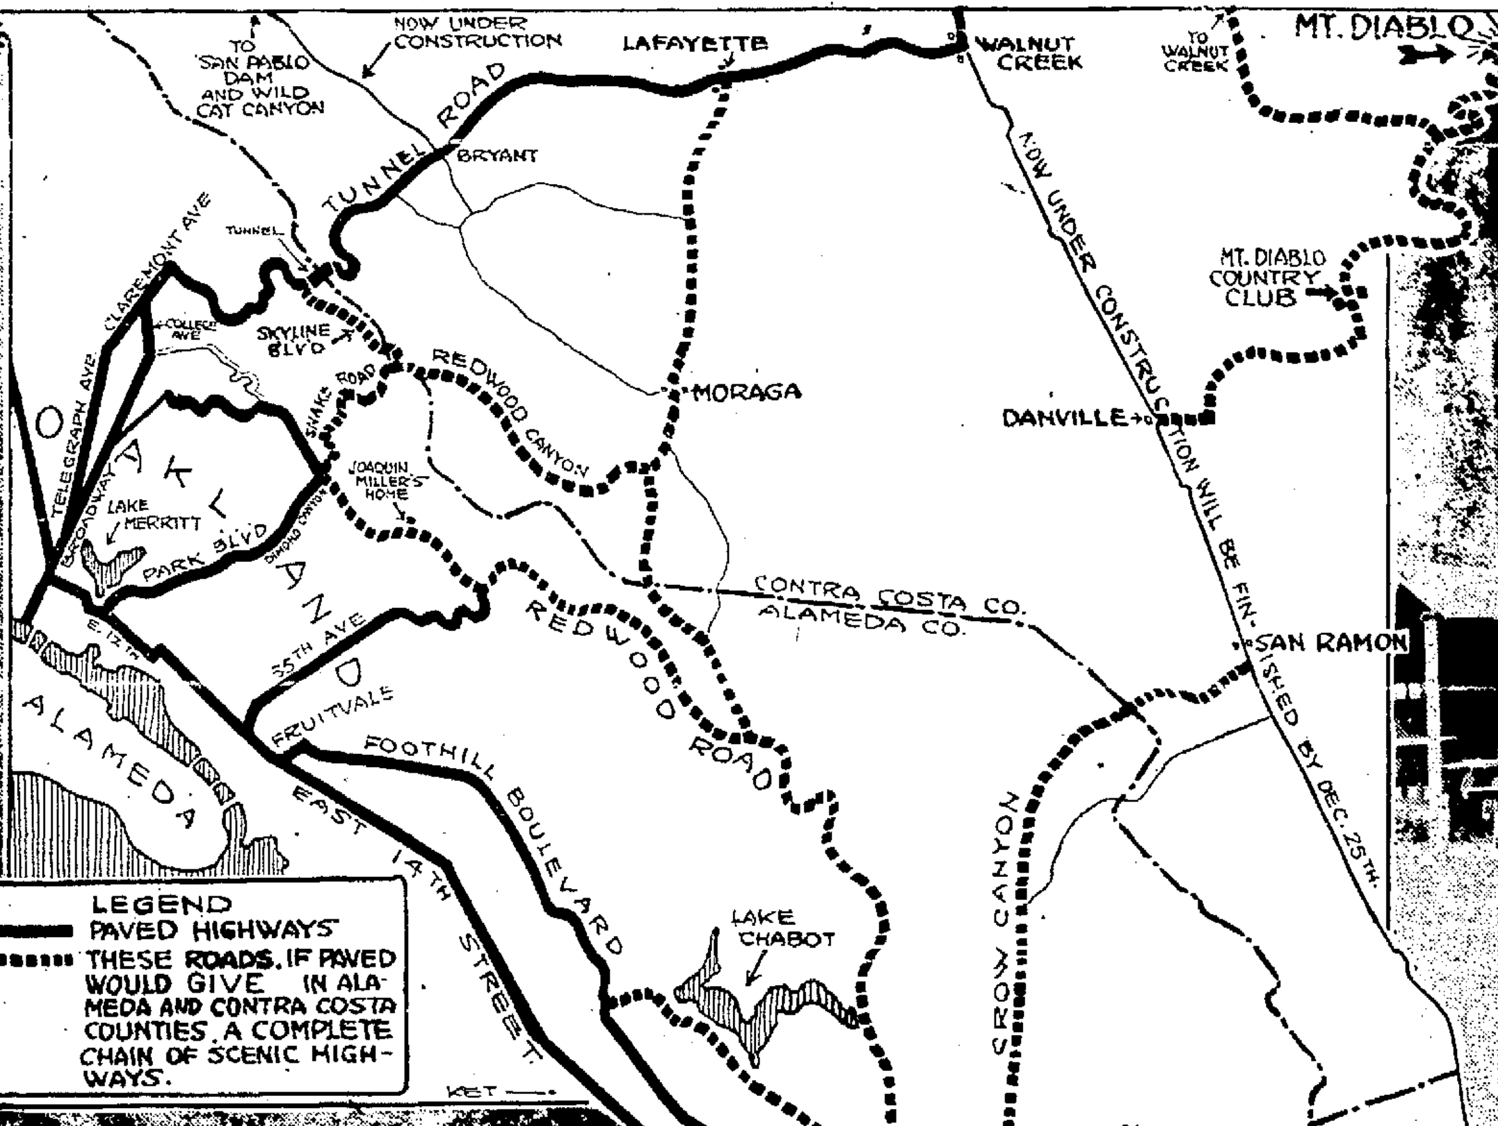
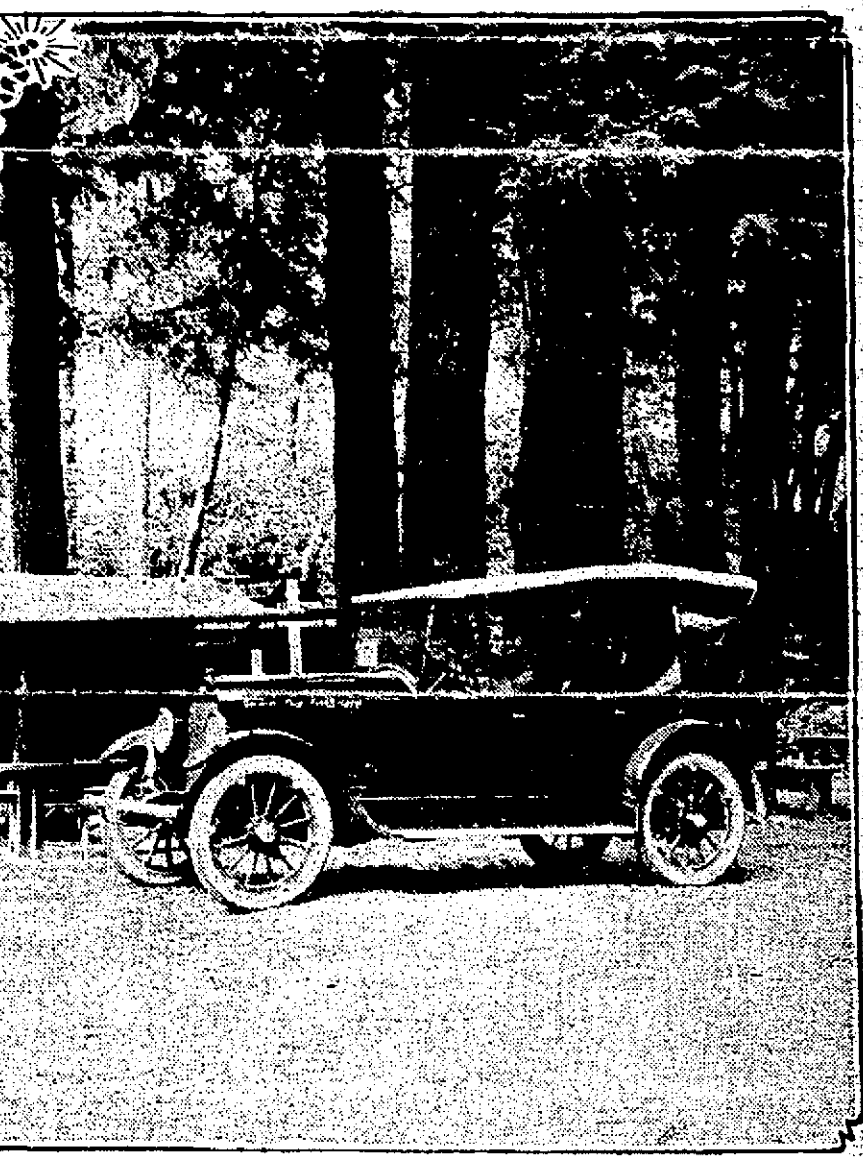
RETURN TO NORMAL CONDITIONS NEAR IN MOTOR CAR TRADE

ALONG THE WAYSIDE IN REDWOOD CANYON





A GARDNER FOUR AMONG THE REDWOODS IN PINEHURST CANYON

IN THE HEART OF REDWOOD CANYON. A GARDNER FOUR IN THE FOREGROUND.

ONE OF THE COILS ON THE SNAKE ROAD.

SALES AGAIN BEGIN TO BE BRISK

By JIM HOULIHAN

The storm clouds that pervaded the atmosphere in motordom when flivvers went down in price have begun to disappear and in their stead has been coming for the last four days, weather signs that indicate an early return to the boom time conditions in automobile trade circles.

Each day since Monday the number of shoppers has been on the increase and so have sales, in every institution that hasn't been stricken since the price break started. Among those organizations which have buckled down to serious business in realizing that a change has come in conditions, from a buying market to that of a selling one, there continues undisturbed a sales volume that surpasses last year's trade in instances where comparisons are made.

The salesman who has sold himself on the theory that the 'market is shot to pieces' is profiting in ratio to his despondency and lack of fight, while the chaps who are 'digging in' show a number of orders for the past three weeks that savors of the best days last spring.

Every source of information which has been tapped in the east proves pretty clearly that there will be no immediate reductions in prices from among those who have announced price guarantees until some next year. The manufacturer who hasn't lowered his price will hint pretty strongly to you that those makers who have declared startling reductions could well afford to do so because their profits have been running at a high percentage. Ford, of course, is getting the brunt of criticism and he is charged in many quarters with having sold his product at a price far beyond actual manufacturing cost. The critics will also hint that it was reduced demand for his car which forced him to lower its price.

REGISTRATIONS ARE BIG

Registrations summaries published by Automotive News show about a 10 per cent decrease for September as against the August figures. August was the largest month for business the motor car dealer has had this year, therefore, in light of disturbed conditions the mark which was reached in September is quite a respectable total.

As winter months approach demand drops some extent. This is a natural sequence because the touring objectives are not as numerous nor is the weather as favorable for real enjoyment as in spring or midsummer. If fewer sales come in October, most of it can be charged to conditions naturally prevalent at this time of the year.

Dealers in standard makes of cars say that there has been a continuous demand in the last four days for used cars. If the trade in rebuilt automobiles holds up it augurs well for good new car sales since the latter depends to some extent on how rapidly the used make can be disposed of. When the used car trade is slow the dealer is wary of taking many (trade-ins). When the market is active and he can sell his 'turn-ins' with little difficulty he'll listen to a trade if the terms are right.

TIRE PRICES NOT BOOSTED.

The larger Akron tire makers who announced to automobile manufacturers that they would increase the price of tire to motor car makers 10 per cent have deferred putting the raise into effect. Whether they will do so at a later date advices neglected to state. If the increases go through there will be a loud wail from Detroit, Cleveland ud other producing centers.

DEMAND FOR CLOSED CARS

There is evident now the usual fall demand for closed crs and the dealer who has a good stock of this type vehicle is pretty fortunate. Last season the scarcity of enclosed models was keenly felt and distributors suffered the loss of many orders. Crimpy weather causes a lot of interest in the closed automobile, a type by the way, which more and more is being used for all year purposes.

Over half of the 360,000 motorists in the United Kingdom are members of the Automobile Association and the Motor Union of London.

Motor Company Reports Profits of 67 Per Cent

Profits amounting to 67 per cent of the $7,000,000 of capital stock outstanding were earned by the Ford Motor Company of Canada during the year ending July 31, 1920. Gordon McGregor, general manager of the plant, reports that net profits for the year were $4,696,243, after deducting $968,590 for taxes and other expenses. Dividends totaled $1,750,000, leaving a surplus on July 31 of $8,216,305, compared with $5,270,000 in July, 1919.

CAR SALES IMPROVING ON COAST

A conference of Scripps Booth men which has been in session for the past few days in Oakland brings to light some interesting information respecting automobile conditions on the Pacific coast. L. A. Hannan, Portland branch manager of the Scripps-Booth organization states that the automobile business in Oregon has recovered from the slump during the summer months which was occasioned by the gasoline shortage, the seriousness of which was more keenly felt in the web-foot state than it was in California.

From the Seattle distributor, A. T. Smith came word that his district should son be getting its normal share of trade. Setbacks in Washington he traces to a number of conditions principal of which was a poor crop of all kinds. Weather conditions, of an adverse character created havoc in the agricultural sections and the effect of this was pronounced in a reduced automobile demand.

Southern California, according to Captain John Fahey, is taking cars at a rate wihc hequals any former big demand the south has had. Fafy stated that the reduction in prices of automobiles hasn't interfered with the sale of automobiles south of the Tehachapi and that every dealer of standard made automobiles is prospering.

Scripps-Booth road men from the central portion of California offered the information that farmers in their territory were enjoying the greatest era of prosperity they had ever experienced and were buying cars of all prices.

THIS MAP SHOWS SOME of the roads in the eastbay territory over which Jimmy Paps of the Victory Motor Sales Co. drove a Gardener Four on a pathfinding journey with a member of The TRIBUNE automotive department in order to suggest highways that should be hard surfaced and linked up with the present system of improved main roads that are now either finished or being built in Alameda and Contra Costa counties. The legend shows the proposed addition to the present concrete arteries of travel.

MILTON ONE OF BEST BETS IN L. A. RACE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—That Tommy Milton, despite his departure from the Duesenberg team, is still considered one of the best bets in the great Thanksgiving Day classic on the Beverly Hills speedway here, is the opinion of the racing experts who are already on the ground in preparation for the coming championship event.

Milton made his first appearance at the wheel of his new speed wagon—a Chevrolet Special—at the Fresno race, in which he proved

Repaving Fifth Street Road to Vallejo Pier

The Six-Minute Ferry Company is macadamizing Fifth street, in Vallejo, for a distance of 3000 feet. This artery is the main road leading to the Six-Minute Ferry pier at Morrow Cove and was opened early this summer through the efforts of the ferry officials who desired a more direct route from Vallejo to their pier.

Motorists who have used this ferry service recall that Sifth street was in poor condition and they will accordingly welcome the news that it is to be hard surfaced.

If good weather continues the road work will be finished by October 23.

General Manager O. G. Gordon of the Six-Minute Company states that the section of highway between Selma and Crockett which is being repaired within a section, 100 yards in length, will be completed soon.

DEALERS PUT STOP TO S. F. AUTO THEFTS

Concerted effort on the part of the Motor Car Dealers' Association of San Francisco is having a remarkable effect on those who have been thinking about stealing automobiles.

This campaign conducted through the district attorney's office and backed by the association, has led to a big reduction in the number of cars stolen.

MORE ROADS NEEDED TO GET TOURIST

Alameda and Contra Costa counties, as the next step in highway development, and to follow closely the present road programs, should consider a net work of scenic boulevards through the foothills and canyons that are so numerous in the eastbay district. If Oakland and the other eastbay communities hope to interest eastern tourist travel during the winter months there must be provided an added system of highway varied enough to afford the visitor who may want to stay here for several weeks, a combination of trips over different roads each day of his stay.

No criticism can be given that which has been done in the past for these two counties compare equally in the matter of roads with any in the State save Los Angeles county. The southern county has taken advantage of and built roads through every canyon or mile of foothill country it has, for the principal reason that it wisely wants to hold, just as long as it can, the stranger who invades that section of the State on a vacation tour. There are countless trips out of Los Angeles to interest the temporary ersident and this entertainment feature is about the principal winter diversion the southern city can offer its tourists.

A share of that travel could be enticed to the east bay cities if a greater inducement were available in having here a larger number of scenic drives.

Among the roads which might advantageously be rebuilt can be named the Snake, or, as it is also known, the Redwood Canyon road to Moraga, the road skirting the eastern side of Lake Chabot, the Redwood road from the Castro Valley cutoff which finally ends on the ridge south of Redwood Peak, the route past Joaquin Miller's home, the Niles Canyon, the Mission San Jose—Livermore road via Scotts Corner and the Crow Canyon road from Hayward to San Ramon. In this suggested new system of highways should be included either a paved or well graveled road to the summit of Mount Diablo.

While the amount necessary for construction of this proposed mileage might at first seem a heavy expenditure the revenue the community would later derive, would, in a few years' time, justify the outlay of funds.

The only roads contemplated now by Alameda county supervisors will be the connecting link between Newark and Niles, the Mission San Jose—Livermore road and possibly Niles Canyon. John F. Mullins, chairman of the board, declares that these three units are most important and should receive early attention.

He and his associates should give some study to making their community a more inviting winter playground, for by doing so they will be instrumental in bringing here a volume of travel that now eliminates the eastbay district from its itinerary.

LOW PRICED TRUCKS ARE HELD NEEDED

"Better trucking and cheaper trucking is the crying need of the time in this country today, not low-pricede trucks," declares General Manager Watt L. Moreland of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, in announcing the fact that the prices of the Moreland truck line are not to be reduced.

"If a truck has been honestly built, honestly priced and honestly sold we can see absolutely no justification in present conditions for a reduction in price. Speaking for ourselves we cannot reduce our prices without sacrificing the quality of our truck. For ten years we have aimed to produce the best quality truck possible and to reduce now would be a step backward, which we do not propose to take.

"We can see no present indication of a reduction in production costs. We do not intend to sacrifice our employees by cutting wages while they, along with the rest of us, are subject to the present high cost of living. Therefore to make a reduction in the price of our truck means that it must be taken out of the quality. When we can, through lower production costs for whatever reason, reduce the price and still conserve our quality, we shall pass the reduction on, but there is nothing to justify such action now.

"The best possible quality at a fair price is the greatest need of the country today in every line. Cheap first costs are invariably and inevitably followed by maintenance and operation costs so high as to make the total excessive and far from economical. The ideal economic combination is real value at an honest price."

FEW CARS ARE NOW STOLEN

tember. 1920, as compared with the same months for 1919:

| Reported Stolen | | Recov'd | Missing |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aug., 1919 | 129 | 122 | 7 |
| Aug., 1920 | 86 | 78 | 8 |
| Sept., 1919 | 127 | 126 | 1 |
| Sept., 1920 | 79 | 77 | 2 |

It will be noticed that the recoveries of stolen cars have materially advanced in August and September of this year compared with last year, and incidentally it is shown that thefts this year are about half as numerous as at this time last year.

In addition to this report, Epsteen notes that forfeited bail aggregating $2500, has been turned into the treasury of the city and county.

THIEVES SCARED

The work of the association was undertaken by its officials to reduce the number of thefts and make the property sold to various citizens by members of the association, safe.

That there is a marked tendency for the motor car thief to give San Francisco a wide berth is shown by the figures above.

Then, too, the police have done a great deal to make motor thefts unhealthy, and the outpost on the highway near the county line has aided.

The thing that interests the automobile owner is the fact that his car is safer than ever.

Motor Car Dealer Dies in Arizona

John Wholly, one of the first young men in Oakland to engage in the sale of used cars, died in Arizona about ten days ago, according to information just received by Ben Hammond, manager of the Franklin Motor Car Company.

He had been ill for about two years. He was in Oakland about a month ago on a short visit and declared at that time that his health was improving. A relapse occurred shortly after he returned to his southern home and his death rapidly followed.

TIRE TALK

NO. 15

The Reason Why

The law of compensation is an inexorable one and ever runs true to form, and the maxim that you get as much out of a thing as you put into it is an undiluted truth. The success and the public confidence enjoyed by some of our better known business and professional men has only been attained after years of hard work, endless toil and ceaseless striving to attain and maintain a standard of perfection or as near one as is possible to reach, and their reward by the public is only their just due.

It is the "sucker" variety that keeps the mushroom merchant, the fake promoter, and the false pretense business man alive. True, his existence is short lived, but just as there is a new crop of suckers brought into the world with sun-like regularity, the crop of parasites is just as prolific. Here, too, we see the law of supply and demand.

Happily the majority of us use our upper extremity for other purposes than a hat rack, and the public as a whole is hard to fool.

The tire business has just passed through a period of indisposition and we hope that convalescence is now taking place. Nevertheless, we cannot complain, and it is with pardonable pride we say that our store is one of the busiest in Oakland. Guess the reason.

Business in Auto Trade Gains
Good Conditions Found in East

"The financial stringency that has tightened credit throughout the country has reached its peak and money is easier now than it has been for some time."

This is the word brought back from the east to Carl Christensen, manager of the Victory Motor Sales company, by J. W. Frawley, head of the Frewley Motor company, distributers of Mitchell cars. He has just returned from a three weeks' tour of eastern cities, looking over the business sitution and particularly the automotive industry. He visited Chicago, Indianapolis, and then went to the Mitchell factory at Racine, Wis., and other manufacturing centers in the east.

"The Mitchell plant is in better conditions now than at any time in its history," says Frawley.

"I was particularly interested in the financial condition of the east because of its effect out here. I talked with many bankers, and found that they all agree that there is no intention on the part of the banking fraternity to discriminate against the automotive industry.

"Firms that are building well known cars, and handdling their business on established business lines, are having no trouble in securing all the financial assistance they need.

"Some of the smaller concerns, that were more or less the mushroom growth of the war, have been forced to liquidate or go out of business altogether, but those that are established and doing business on a firm basis are having no trouble.

"I look for greatly increased trade during the winter months. The money is in the country and prices have become stabilized and buying will result."

AUTO LEAPS GAP BEFORE BIG CROWD

With hundreds holding their breaths as the car soared through space, an Overland four jumped an eighteen-foot gap at Idora Park last Sunday. There was a huge crowd to see the demonstration, arranged by Harld D. Knudsen, manager of the Willys-Overland Pacific Company here, and they were not disappointed.

The car was started and driven to the incline. It gained speed as it rolled up the board runway, and when the leap was made, the automobile cleared the eighteen-foot gap without trouble. The car alighted with hardly any noise and rolled down the other side to the ground again.

DEMONSTRATOR USED

Originally it was planned to have a special car tuned up and put in excellent condition. Something happened at the last minute and Knudsen was forced to substitute a demonstrator that his men had been driving around for several months. There was no time, he claims, to make any changes in the car, except to put on slightly larger tires and strap the imitation horse on the hood. The machine was then rushed to Idora and put through its paces.

It had been raining all the night before and the ground was softer than it should have been for such a demonstration. However, there was only delay enough for Frank Trenery, the driver, to feel the situation out and get gauged for the test. He took a short time to find out how fast he could get going over the soft dirt, and then suddenly went up and over, while the audience was in suspense.

MOVIES TAKEN

Trenery, the driver, is sales manager of the Sacramento branch of the Overland company, and has had much experience in handling automobiles.

The car was a stock model. In fact it was a demonstrating car that had been in use for four months, with every man on the sales force driving it at various times.

The Tribune T. & D. movie man was there and the pictures will be shown at the T. & D. in the near future.

REPUBLIC TIRE CO. DENY RUMORS

A letter received yesterday by S. A. Corgiat from the Republic Rubber Company at Youngstown, Ohio, denies very emphatically a rumor that the Republic company is going out of business. The communication charges competitors with having circulated the story in order to harm the Republic tire business.

The letter states that the reorganization which was recently effected has placed the company in a better financial situation than it enjoyed until the change occurred and also declares that a sales campaign will be under way shortly which will make their product one of the biggest in sales among tires.

Corgiat has been Republic tire distributor in Oakland for three years. Recently he opened a downtown branch at 1641 Broadway, in charge of which he has placed C. E. Forbes.

A brother, Gene Corgiat, until a short time ago an ensign in the navy, is also a member of the sales staff.

Niles Canyon Good Outing Place
Motorists Are Attracted to Spot

Since the rainy season is here and the time for long tours is past, there enters the mind of the motor car owner the idea of getting out somewhere and enjoying the wonders of the warm winter without going out too far and still going distant enough so that he can get away from the city streets and the crowds.

Oakland is so well situated with regard to outing places that no owner of an automobile need hesitate about getting away from the throng. There are numerous places to go for a day's outing.

THROUGH NILES CANYON

Have an early luncheon some Sunday and take this trip, or, if you want, take some luncheon and make a day of it.

Go out the highway to Niles and through Niles canyon. The roads are all well marked, easily found and smooth. Turn under the railroad tracks in Niles and travel through Niles canyon. This road is gravelled and in good condition. The river has a little water in it now, and the grass is beginning to come up, after the rains. In another week, the whole country will be green.

PLEASANT TRIP

Phillip S. Cole, head of the Haynes Company here, sent a Haynes car there last week-end and the party had a lot of fun. They took lunch along and had a picnic beside the stream in the canyon.

You can go on to Sunol and have a party there, under the trees near the water temple. There are tables there and places to sit and plenty of water to drink.

Try this trip some of these Sundays. It is pleasant.

Rubber Firm Gives Extra Day Vacation

Splendid evidence of the understanding that is fast coming between employer and employee may be had in the extra day's vacation given to all employees by the Miller Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio. The day was given in lieu of the company's annual picnic.

TOMMY MILTON A SAFE BET

Murphy's strongest competitor for first place throughout the greater part of the race.

Two bad "shoes" at the same time coupled with slow work by his pit men, put him too far behind to threaten Murphy again, but he made a pretty race of it with Gaston Chevrolet, and beat the celebrated Monroe pilot—hero of the Indianapolis classic—to third money, much to the delight of his followers in the stands.

This Chevrolet Special job is powered with a Dusenberg motor, so Tommy is only making half a change at that. It was assembled under "Cliff" Durant's direction at the Oakland Chevrolet factory, and is in every sense of the word a Northern California product, and as such, not entirely a favorite with the Los Angeles race-going crowds.

However, Milton is a popular racer and still carries with him a great deal of support from the fans.

Jimmy Murphy, Ralph de Palma, Gaston Chevrolet, Eddie O'Donnell, Roscoe Sarles, Joe Thomas and each of the other famous pilots have their own "gallery," and as the practice progresses it looks more and more as if the Thanksgiving Day race at Beverly would be a bitter battle. The racers are out for the money, for the title and for blood.

BEVERLY HILLS ATTRACTS FANS

With the races at Fresno a matter of history, racing fans all over California are looking forward with much zest to the great speed classic that will be held at Beverly Hills, near Los Angeles, Thanksgiving Day.

There will be gathered the greatest collection of speed kinds that have ever entered a contest. The track is the fastest in the country, and one of the best from the spectators' point of view. Better speed will be made this year than last, it is expected, by those who know and have watched the cars develop this year.

At the race last February at Beverly Hills track the average speed of the fifty-mile race winner, Tommy Milton, was 112 miles per hour, a thing unheard of a few years ago. In the 250-mile race Jimmy Murphy averaged 105 miles per hour.

Practically all the racing cars are equipped with the Alemite Lumbricating system.

THE NASH SIX

The Actual Value of The Nash Six Has Never Been so Clearly Recognized As it is Right Now

That is because motor car buyers are scrutinizing and comparing automobile values now as they have not done for years.

A market such as this always brings into sharp relief values that are really sound.

It shows which cars are overpriced and which cars are worth every dollar asked for them.

This process of comparison is emphasizing anew the superiority of Nash Six value.

It is making plain just how low priced the Nash Six is in comparison with those cars which even approximate it in cost.

It is gratifying to Nash Six owners and those contemplating its purchase to find that while the increased price of other cars since 1917 has averaged 76%, the Nash Six has increased but 31%; really 24% considering the addition of cord tires and other equipment as standard.

The soundness of Nash policies has been demonstrated.

You may purchase a Nash Six now or at any time with the positive assurance that the price represents actual, intrinsic value plus the smallest possible manufacturer's profit.

AUTO MAKER REFUSES TO SLASH PRICE

Following a thorough investigation of the material and labor markets the Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis has found that it is impossible at this time to make any reduction in the price of any Aero-Eight models. This information is contained in a letter to L. D. Allen, the Northern California distributor, from J. E. Roberts, general sales manager of the Cole.

While making an analysis of the automobile situation from both the manufacturing and sales viewpoints, Roberts communicated with all of his distributors asking for their opinion. They were unanimous in declaring that they would be disappointed were any attempt made to sacrifice present quality in order to lower the selling price.

"The Cole Motor Car Company was the first in the field to guarantee its prices," said Allen, in commenting on Roberts' letter. "As early as last June the factory announced that if conditions permitted of any price reduction before the end of the year that the amount of the reduction would be refunded to buyers."

Following is Roberts' letter to Allen: "Cole prices have always been kept on a reasonable plane. Increases have only been made when they were deemed absolutely necessary, due to advance in material and labor, or the cost of improvements to the car itself.

"In 1918 this company adopted the policy of constantly manufacturing a finer motor car, adding thereto from time to time such improvements and refinements as have proved to be of value to our owners.

"It is absolutely contrary to our basic program to let any condition interfere with this purpose to build a car that at all times represents the highest value which it is possible for us to afford for the price it bears.

"Furthermore, it is not the intention of this company to let anything stand in the way of the development of our product, and we will not hesitate to advance the price of our car if by so doing we are able to add to its refinements and efficiency."

TIRE ADVICE IS GIVEN AUTOISTS

Trouble and annoyance is saved the motorist if he will examine his casings after a puncture, before inserting a new tube. A nail, fragment of glass, or rough and broken fabric surface, remaining over from the first puncture, will often quickly ruin a new tube.

After careful inspection of the casing, the tube should be slightly inflated before being inserted, in order to prevent its being twisted, according to Miller tire and tube experts. Where the tube is inserted flat, there is danger that due to a twisted condition, it will tear under high air pressure.

Another good rule is never to place the tube on the ground. A porous condition is often a direct result of the dirt and sand which adhere to the tube which has been laid on the road beside the car.

A fourth principle of tube conservation is to lightly dust the inside of the casing with soapstone or talc. This prevents chafing and sticking of tube and casing. Excessive use of either talc or soapstone causes tube blisters.

Highway May Bar Heavier Vehicles

Because the Lincoln highway was not designed for freight vehicular traffic, and motor trucks are not only tearing the road but becoming a menace to other traffic, Public Service Commissioners in Pennsylvania are taking steps to prevent the heavy vehicles from using and seriously damaging the road.

WATER, MUD ARE ENEMIES OF AUTO TIRE

Now that the rains have started and summer is over, it is time to think about tire equipment, with a view of making it last over the winter.

Water and mud are two enemies of tires that most of us neglect. If the tire has a cut in its side, and water and mud are allowed to get in, the tire soon deteriorates and then there is a loud sound, as of guns firing, and the car limps along, and the driver curses, when he has to get out in the rain and change shoes.

[illegible] cared for in time, dirt and water will be kept out and tires saved," points out Frank A. Busse, Brunswick tire distributer.

WHEELBARROWS HAD RUBBER TIRE

The manufacture of rubber tires for vehicles had advanced in 1850 to the point where such tires were being made for wheelbarrows is the interesting discovery made by a research worker in the library of the United States Rubber Company.

Charles Goodyear, inventor of the vulcanization process, whose patents were controlled by companies now subsidiaries of the Rubber Company, [illegible] giving a list of all the uses to which rubber had been applied up to that time. The book runs along for nearly 400 pages, discussing innumerable ways in which rubber had already become useful.

But the search for a record of tires brings out only this little paragraph, tucked away in a chapter of odds and ends toward the end of the book and marked "Miscellaneous":

"Wheel-Barrow tire. This is an English invention for preventing the noise of wheel-barrows in warehouses, at railroad stations, etc."

The tire business has grown since that time—last year about seventy per cent of all the rubber consumed in the world went into tires.

NEW AGENCY NAMED FOR EASTBAY

The Early Sales and Garage Company has been appointed selling agents for the Lexington car in the Eastbay territory. O. N. Hirsch, former dealer, has turned over all his equipment to the new representatives who will sell the car. Hirsch still maintains his establishments outside of Oakland.

The new dealers have a complete salesroom and garage on Broadway and are installing a service station so that all Lexington owners in this part of the country can drive in and have all necessary work done immediately.

William Sharp is general manager of the company, and has appointed as salesmanager A. N. Rowe, who is planning on enlarging his sales force and starting an aggressive campaign at once.

"We decided to handle the Lexington after watching its performance in the hands of hundreds of Eastbay owners and its general all-round ability," says Sharp.

"The car is built in Connersville, Indiana, and the manufacturers of the parts are all in one concern, so that they build to a standard that is remarkably high, and maintain their quality.

"By winning the Pike's Peak hill climb, the Lexington established a record that is liable to stand for some time. The two Lexingtons were forced to fight their way through snow and clouds, on the top of the world. Then again the car sets a record for economy in tests at Norfolk, Va. Here some of the best known motor cars on the market were entered and the Lexington carried away all honors.

"We are glad to welcome Lexington owners in this part of the country, and assure them fair treatment at all times."

Keys Elected Head of Airplane Concern

Kepperly and W. B. Stratton resigned as vice-presidents and directors, and J. R. Harbeck and W. P. Chrysler resigned from the board. Henry G. Hotchkiss, C. R. Keys and J. A. W. Smith were named directors to fill vacancies.

MINIATURE AUTO SHOW THIS WEEK

There will be a miniature automobile show in Oakland this week.

Phillip S. Cole has arranged a unique display of Haynes cars, and for the first time this year will exhibit a complete line of all models. This includes open and closed cars and the new speedster, which arrived from the factory a few days ago.

The affair will last only one week, and men will be on hand to explain the car and its mechanical features.

"The demand for automobiles has been great all this year, and we have never been able to get cars of all models together at one time, to hold such an exhibition as this, until this time," says Cole.

"The Haynes Automobile company built the first successful automobile ever used in this country, and they have continued in business from that time to this, building better cars each year.

"In the early days there were no closed cars. The open cars did not even have windshields. Year by year cars improved. Things were added and changes made that made the cars more comfortable and easier to handle.

"The first closed cars were cumbersome and hard to manage. Now the closed car is a thing of beauty and becoming more and more popular every year.

"This show will be held so that the many Haynes owners and "fans" can have a look at the complete line. Before this all we have had was catalogues, in which to show some of the models.

"The salesroom will be open evenings during the show."

Greasitorium, Name of New Auto Shop

Moore's Greasitorium is the name of a small shop which has been opened at 196 Twelfth street for the especial purpose, as F. J. Moore states, "to scientifically lubricate automobiles."

Moore believes he has a good chance of building up a profitable trade by engaging solely in oiling and greasing cars, cleaning motors, eliminating rattles from automobiles and tightening up loose body and other bolts.

By specializing, as his firm will, in just this work, he says he will be able to do his work quicker and cheaper than other concerns.

BIG ARMY MOTOR FLEET

Surplus supplies of motor and miscellaneous vehicles and equipment, which originally cost the War department $15,163,055.75, totalled $8,988,308.06 on September 10, after an extensive selling plan.

Georgia has four motor vehicles to every inhabitant in that state.

DESIGNER OF AUTO TO BE FUEL SAVER

The final solution of the gasoline supply problem cannot be found merely in the more careful use of fuel by present owners of motor cars. This is the opinion of the president of the Franklin Automobile Company, Syracuse, expressed in a letter to Ben Hammond, manager of the Franklin Motor Car Company.

As a manufacturer, Franklin is looking to the day when many more automobiles will be required for this country's transportation needs than are now in service. The achievement of this development, his analysis brings out, is vitally dependent upon an adequate fuel supply, at a cost per gallon that would not be prohibitive.

Franklin urges that automobile manufacturers interest themselves in the question in an entirely different way than present conservation plans include. The motor car designer must be depended upon for the solution, by building the car of the future to use less gasoline. The accomplishment of this objective, Franklin points out, involves three things: first, the reduction of weight; second, the limitation of the size of cars; and third, closer adaptation of the power plant to the actual performance requirements of an automobile.

"It is not a far cry," Franklin believes, "to expect our experience to parallel closely that of Europeans, who have always been compelled to stretch their fuel supply. In the face of this condition, the smaller cars and smaller engines have predominated. American engineers have before them, for the same reason, the passing of the so-called high-powered car. It is now realized that any excess or reserve of power over ordinary requirements is at the expense of an already limited gasoline supply. It is not unlikely that future American design will, in the smaller, normally powered cars to come, bring into play more gear work on hills, something which the European motorist is already accustomed to."

According to figures compiled by Franklin, the extension of the use of motor cars in the United States, so desirable in years to come, would be the natural outcome of this new line of deveopment. The saving of fuel in one year's time provided all cars were built to average 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline, would at this time supply 700,000 additional automobiles. Any evidence as strong as this, and applying so closely to the economic standing of automobiles should, Franklin thinks, compel the most painstaking study of the real fundamentals back of motor car economy on the part of the industry itself.

U.S. FARMS MUST MOTORIZE, CLAIM

Farms throughout America must be motorized to offset the deflection of 33 per cent of the men from the farms who have taken up their residences in the large cities, according to the recent reports published," claims Carl Christensen, manager of the Victory Motor Sales Company, distributors of Traffic Trucks.

"These reports also show that the number of abandoned farms is increasing. By motorizing completely the farmers will do much to overcome the loss of man power and will greatly simplify their work."

MAKING POOR MAN'S CAR

Automobile factories in Great Britain are building a poor man's motor to sell for $350. The car is two-seated, will make probably forty-five miles an hour, and climb any hill.

AUTO PRODUCTS REMAIN STABLE

Confidence on the part of the automotive industry that is represented by high-grade, quality products has not been disturbed in the least by the price situation, according to R. H. Morris, manager of the Mack-International Motor Truck Corporation. "One of the most noticeable features in connection with recent developments is the almost complete absence of cut price announcements by manufacturers of long established motor trucks," said Mr. Morris. "This is indicative of the rank this class of products enjoy in the industry.

"We have been congratulated by many owners on the announcement that our prices are guaranteed for at least six months from October 1. This is further indication of the confidence our owners have in our factory and sales organizations. Dealers in all parts of the State have wired or written to us saying that they are glad we have taken this position, as it will tend to be a stabilizing influence. In making this statement we have felt that we had an obligation to every recent truck purchaser. We would have violated this by announcing suddenly a reduction in prices.

"Everyone who is in any way familiar with manufacturing conditions knows that production at this time is from materials that were purchased at high prices. If the previous prices of a finished product did not represent inflated profit, then the public does not know what they do represent. Manufacturing facilities at our factories are unusually good, as these large establishments are devoted exclusively to a single industry. Since 1912 to the present date the average prices of Mack trucks represent an increase of only fifteen per cent, which is admittedly a wonderful record. It is not difficult to point to the justice of such a small advance, and consequently it also is an easy matter to explain why our prices are guaranteed."

Maxwell Stockholders Meet October 19

Annual meeting of the stockholders of the Maxwell Motor company will be held at Wilmington, Del., October 19, at which time directors for the ensuing year will be elected.

MANY AUTO PARTIES GO FOR DUCKS

When you pass rough-looking men, armed to the teeth, with bags over their shoulders, be not alarmed.

The duck season opened yesterday and a general exodus started to the blinds in nearby hunting stations.

Automobile loads of men, armed with shotguns, bags and hope, are leaving the city hourly, and more ducks have been promised than fly throughout the length and breadth of California.

That the duck season is open again can be seen easily with the naked eye, because the winter migration to Lake Merritt has set in. There are hundreds of ducks there now, and soon the lake will be black with the feathery creatures that make such good eating.

Trivett, Beattie & Co., Mercer and Jordan agents, sent a Jordan car to the lake last week and had a photograph taken of the car surrounded with ducks. There are enough there now to make it well worth while to go and watch them.

Automobile men are leaving town every minute for the duck lands, and they are not going alone. Unless a machine is filled to the brim with men, all with guns, and hunting licenses and hope, the driver thinks he is being neglected.

According to reports filtering into the TRIBUNE office, the ducks are numerous this year, and that augers well for many a fine duck dinner in the next few days.

Of course, there will be thousands of those who have been promised ducks hat will pick their teeth in anticipation who will never taste duck, but they will have had a lot of fun beforehand anyhow.

Hall, hall, the ducks are here!

OFFICIAL STARTS ON ANNUAL TRIP THROUGH STATE

Robert W. Martland, secretary of the California Automobile Trade Association, is on his annual pilgrimage to the Southern California organizations, and is putting in a busy month, visiting various cities and addressing the local associations.

He will be in Los Angeles, El Centro, San Diego and practically every town in the south before he returns early next month.

The growth of the Automobile Trade Association idea in California and in other states, is a remarkable tribute to the automotive industry. "The era of price slashing and cut throat methods has passed," Martland claims, "and members of the trade agree that it is better to work together than to pull apart and get nowhere."

NOBILITY DRAWING TRUCKS

WOMAN STOPS HER CAR TO POWDER NOSE

When you drive along the road be sure that you take no chances and are within the law before you criticize the other fellow. It is reasonable that you should be as "sore as a wet hen" is a car sneaks past you on your right when you are driving along the road. This is done occasionally by some fool driver who cares not how long he lives.

The only way to drive an automobile is with utmost care.

"I was coming into Oakland the other day, and was following along behind a woman driver, claims Lou H. Rose, Chalmers distributer.

"I was far enough behind so that she did not bother me, but suddenly, her car stopped, though there was nothing in the road ahead. As I drew up besirde the machine and passed the girl stepped on the running board of her car and merely put on her coat. Mind you, all this time her automobile was in the middle of the road. Move—not that woman until she got good and ready. She slowly put on her coat, powdered her nose and seated herself comfortably. All this time a frantic line of cars were waiting, including a couple of stages.

"It is just such things as this that make you wonder why the authorities allow such incompetents to run automobiles. Men do things just as foolish. They cut corners and spin around turns at entirely too fast a pace."

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

Compare increases in the price of various motor cars during the past two years. It is conclusive evidence of DORT value.

Another feature of the DORT that has been a powerful influence in attracting men to it, is its rare need for service. Frankly we are disinclined to print some of the records of owners for the simple reason that their stated cost for mechanical attention has been unbelievably low.

And right here we wish to point out that the saving in money resulting from the ability of the DORT to "stand up" and "stay fit" under hard use, is not the only saving.

When a car isn't in the shop, it is in use, and consequently you get more use from the DORT.

State-wide "ANTHONY SERVICE" adds still more to their value.

Cleveland Six Now Only $1435

The Cleveland again establishes a new standard of quality and value in the light car field. It offers so much more at such a fair price that other light cars—sixes and fours—can scarcely be thought of as competitive. Cleveland character is distinctive, its daily service is unsurpassed.

No Other Light Car Offers Such Worth

The exclusive Cleveland motor, the most highly developed of the powerful over-head type, gives an abundance of speed, a rare flexibility of power, and a dependability and endurance that surpasses other light cars.

The sturdiness of its chassis construction, the ease of its control, the soft cushion-like action of its underslung spring construction — all these qualities add immeasurably to the certainty and comfort of the Cleveland's performance on any road, on the steepest hills, and in crowded traffic.

A Selection of Body Styles That Meet Every Wish

Bodies of dignity and beauty are mounted on the Cleveland chassis, and no other car offers cleaner lines, more truly sturdy gracefulness or deeper lustre of finish than does the Cleveland Six.

NEW PLANTS ASSURE WORK TO MECHANIC

The future of the automobile mechanic on the Pacific coast is as bright, if not more certain, than are the destinies of men in any other craft affiliated with the motorcar industry, according to a statement made by Jim Houlihan in an address before the members of the Weaver-Wells Service club, which held its monthly meeting at a downtown restaurant last Thursday evening.

Houlihan based his opinion on the probabilities that in the next five years at least twelve plants for the assembly and manufacture of automobiles will be in operation on the Pacific coast.

"The first big corporation to name the Pacific coast as its Western industrial center was the eGneral Motors Corporation," said Houlihan, "which has built one of the finest assembling plants in the world in this city. The same corporation will soon start construction on another plant for the assembling of Scripps-Booth automobiles. Who knows when other cars controlled by this some corporation will be assembled or even manufactured in this vicinity.

"Certainly. I would not be surprised to see the Studebaker Corporation and many of the other standard car manufacturers put up plants in this community or at other points on the Pacific coast. Oakland seems to have been the logical place for these concerns. With the advent of these new factories there will be created hundreds of positions for executives and mechanics and the places logically belong to the men on the ground."

E. Wells, vice-president and general manager of the Weaver-Wells Company, gave an inspiring address on the subject of "The Rules of Success."

"Three things are necessary for success," said Wells, "these are honesty, brains and hard work."

Entertainment was provided by Jean Cowles and H. M. Shacklefors of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company and W. Silberman and T. A. Wallin of the eWaver-Wells Co. Russell Kenney, superintendent of the service department of the Weaver-Wells Company presided at the meeting.

DRIVES WEST IN 1910 ROADSTER

When Robt. H. Ingersoll wanted to drive from New York to California he had his old Packard roadster of the 1910 vintage cranked up and with his driver made the trip with no other troubles than three tire changes. Upon his arrival he was met by a member of Earle C. Anthony, Inc., who inquired as to his experiences with the old car, and Ingersoll very tritely remarked, "Time will tell."

After some weeks spent on the coast he plans to make the return trip in the same car.

This is one of several old-time Packards that have come to the Pacific coast this year after making the transcontinental trip, which is no longer a remarkable journey, but as a rule most of the cars that are seen in California with foreign license tags on them are comparatively new.

Ingersoll's remark as to time being the real test of a motor car might be taken in substantiation of the claim put forth by the Packard factory that the new model called the Single Six is a "ten-year car."

Bumps Into Curb Cause Tire Injury

One of the hardest things for a motorist to understand is that a tire frequently suffers serious injury when bumped against a curbstone. Because the tire shows no external damage, the owner is likely to feel that the tire is defective if some time later it blows out as a result of the bump.

All the ingenuity of the skilled tire engineer will never be able to make a tire that is comfortable to ride on and at the same time able to stand up under mistreatment of this sort, says the United States Tire Company.

AUTOS CARRY MORE THAN R. R.

That motor car passenger transportation greatly exceeds the transportation furnished by the railroads of the country is shown by a recent article in the Marmon News just received by the A. W. Rawling Company.

Extracts from the article follow:

Until the gasolineless Sundays of 1918, followed by the coal famine of early 1919, few realized how greatly the automobile figured in city and rural transportation. These economic trains, however, gave us a glimpse at the real facts of the case. It was shown then that the 4,000,000 cars, serving between twelve and fifteen millions of people, saved more than a hundred million tons of coal a year, which would otherwise have been burned in steam locomotives or in power plants of electric lines to carry the millions who habitually traveled by automobiles."

Automobile thieving is decreasing in Detroit, Mich.

NEW HOME IS TO BE OPENED ON JANUARY 1

The Chevrolet building now under course of construction at Twenty-first and Franklin streets, will be ready for occupancy about the first of the year.

Representating an investment of half a million dollars the structure is the last thing in modern architecture, the plans being prepared by J. V. Phelan, architectural supervisor for the General Motors Corporation. Maury Diggs is responsible for executing the architectural work.

The building is four stories in height covering 130x100 feet and has a total space of 43,000 square feet. Each story of the building will house a separate department of the business.

The furnishings will be elaborate in every detail and will be personally selected by President Norman de Vaux and Vice President and Sales Manager R. C. Durant. No expense will be spared in making the Oakland home one of the most modern and elegantly equipped of the thirty-two Chevrolet retail stores that are maintained throughout the United States.

In construction the Oakland store will in a great way follow the idea set out in the palatial Los Angeles branch, which recently was opened.

Their great faith in the future of Oakland prompted De Vaux and Durant to erect the magnificent new home for Chevrolet automobiles.

FALL IS TIME FOR AUTO TRIPS

The Fall is the best season of the year for making a transcontinental trip, according to George F. Peterson and Robert Kernott, two young Pennsylvania business men who have just completed a trip from Pittsburg, Pa., to California.

Kernott hails from Washington, Pa., and Peterson from Monongahela.

They traveled in a Cadillac phaeton and followed the Santa Fe trail practically all the way from Kansas City. They made one side trip to Colorado Springs and Pikes peak, also spent a couple of days seeing the Grand Canyon.

Peterson favors the fall for transcontinental travel as there is less likelihood of heavy rains and the weather as a rule is enjoyable for touring.

The car carried a full camping outfit and the party camped out practically all the way after leaving Colorado. They covered 3600 miles and encountered very little mud. Their roughest going was in New Mexico and Arizona, where summer travel had left the roads in very bad shape.

EUROPEAN CARS ADVANCE

While prices of some passenger automobiles are declining in the United States, there has been a considerable advance on all English and French cars.

5 YEARS SERVICE FROM BATTERY

E. E. Jeffery of Marland and Jeffery coast distriutors of Ozol who owns a 1915 Studebakes which he has driven 30,000 miles won the first prize, a Willard threaded rubber battery offered by the Auto Electric Service Company to the motor car owner who coul dproduce the oldest Willard battery still in active service. The battery in Jeffery's car has been giving service for five years, according to the proofs he submitted to Ernest Fetter, Willard agency manager. In that period Jeffery's statement showed that it had been recharged only five times.

P. Mohrduck, owner of a 36-4 Kissel Kar came very close to capturing the prize. He presented a Willard battery, seven years old which had been rendering service until about a month ago. Had the contest been held in August he would have been an easy victor.

The purpose of the test was to reveal the limit of service possible to secure from a battery if the right kind of attention was given by the owner and the results, as borne out by the data the Auto Electric Service Company received should prove very valuable to them and they should also make interesting reading if compiled in some form for distribution to motorists.

Canada Imports Many U. S. Autos

During the fiscal years, 1917-20, the importations of passenger automobiles into Canada totalled 45,633, valued at $35,829,393, of which 11 being from Great Britain, one from an unnamed country and the remainder from the United States.

is down to bedrock. The decrease of $500 to $800 on all Franklin models represents the greatest opportunity for saving ever presented the motorist.

AS a result of Franklin's sensational reversion to pre-war price levels, Franklin distributors and dealers all over the country are selling cars by the score, while dealers whose factories made no price reductions, or whose price cuts were reductions in little more than name, are standing by complaining of a slackening in business.

This state of affairs will continue indefinitely unless other manufacturers can approach the pace set by Franklin more closely, and of this there seems little probability.

Compare the Franklin price with that of other cars. You will find that the man who buys a Franklin car today is getting the biggest dollar's worth he has had in many months.

Franklin sets the pace for the whole automobile world, not in price alone, but in gasoline mileage, in road ability, in tire mileage and in low depreciation as well. No other automobile can equal the Franklin national averages.

WHEN WORDS FAIL!

—the power to describe the great enthusiasms of life in the language of the race is not given to the ordinary mortal.

—there are times in every man's life when his soul is afire with a great ideal, a great purpose, a great belief—these are the times when words fail.

—such an enthusiasm comes to every man after he has driven an ordinary automobile and sits for the first time behind the wheel of a Studebaker Big Six.

—the thrill that comes from the knowledge that the slightest pressure of hand or toe on the throttle will force this big machine from a speed of two miles per hour to 75 miles per hour with a quietness and freedom from vibration that is so remarkable it cannot be described.

—the men who first invented engines were at a loss to adequately describe their power but the term "horsepower" is illuminating.

—imagine 60 horses straining every muscle in a tremendous pull and a little child controling them with its tiny hand and you have some idea of the power and ease of control of the Studebaker Big Six—a masterpiece of Studebaker design and manufacture behind which is the experience of 68 years of the successful manufacture of transportation vehicles.

—ask the owner.

PAIR REACHES BAY WITH N. Y. AIR IN TIRES

Arriving in San Francisco with New York air in three of their Miller tires, A. C. Lewis Jr. and Alfred Day Jr. have completed a trip across the continent that is unique among motor runs. They drove a Dodge roadster and started from Steubenville, Ohio.

The first leg of the tour was to New York. They then started west and came through to San Francisco, with varied experiences, including a hold-up by Gypsy bandits in the mountains of the northwest.

THROUGH CHICAGO.

Their journey west led them through Chicago via the Lincoln Highway to Salt Lake city. There they branched off and went to Yellowstone National park and through the Northwest to Spokane, Seattle, Portland and into California.

While in Coeur de Alene, Idaho, the travelers were warned to be on the lookout for bandits in the mountains through which they would have to pass on their way to the Pacific coast. So the boys stuck their guns handy and waited results. They came fast and furious. They passed a man standing in the road, who looked suspicious. He asked them for a match, but they did not stop. Further along the road they were stopped again, this time by a Gypsy woman, who asked the time. While one of the boys reached for his watch the Gypsy covered them with a gun, or tried to, but the other traveler was too fast for her. He used his gun first and the woman dropped her gun and sped into the bushes.

ON ROAD EIGHT WEEKS.

Lewis and Day both decided that they would give up swearing on the trip, and the way they "got away with it" is a detail of the tour that should be chronicled here.

They called the Miller tire equipped Dodge "The Dammer." Try this on your car and you will see how you can swear off swearing and still swear if something goes wrong. They traveled some rough roads and the Dodge had hard work getting through at times, and the two boys believe that the name helped some. They were on the road eight weeks and enjoyed every minute of the run.

"THE DAMMER," THE MILLER TIRE EQUIPPED DODGE ROADSTER, IN WHICH A. C. LEWIS Jr. and ALFRED DAY Jr. crossed the continent. There is New York air in three of the tires now. Their trip included an attempted hold-up in Idaho.

Sales Agent to Boost New Truck Enterprise

P. B. Brown, formerly with the Liberty Motor Car company, of Detroit, where he was engaged in special sales work, has just been appointed general sales and advertising manager of the Thomart Motor company of Kent, Ohio, recently organized for the purpose of manufacturing a high-quality, moderately-priced commercial car of the "speed wagon" type. The company expects to start production within the near future. G. W. Thompson is president of the company, and James L. Stewart, vice-president and general manager.

Auto "Laundries" Predicted in N. Y.

As a result of discontinuance of service in 400 of the 500 garages around New York city in an effort to end the wage fight between owners and the Garage Workers' union, it is predicted that automobile "laundries" will soon make their appearance. These are stations where cars are washed and cleaned while the owner waits.

COACH WORK ON AUTO IMPORTANT

The Locomobile owner is now beginning to regard his car as simply another room in his house," according to a claim made by R. M. Miller, local dealer. "Not only that, but he realizes that it is one room that is always in evidence. Consequently, more attention is being paid to what were formerly, but improperly, called luxuries—the car's appearance and the passenger's comfort.

"There has always been a striving toward better appearance, even in the cheapest cars, and among the quality cars the development is even more pronounced, with simplicity as the keynote. Now that a well designed motor car is accepted as an evidence of the owner's good taste, we find that people with a reputation to maintain give their personal attention to the coach work."

Merger of Motor Concerns Approved

Consolidation of the Locomobile company and the Mercer Motors company under the title of Hare Motors has been approved by the directorates of both companies, and all that remains is for the stockholders to ratify the action. The net assets of the two consolidating companies will exceed $11,000,000. The Simplex company, which was taken over by Mercer last spring, automatically becomes part of the new arrangement. The consolidation affects only the manufacturing companies, the Locomobile at Bridgeport, and the Mercer at Trenton. The operating company, Hare's Motors, Inc., will continue as operating and distributing company. The new company will manufacture the same lines as heretofore.

A RIDE A DAY WILL KEEP THE DOCTOR AWAY

"A ride a day, keeps the doctor away."

And as a doctor is the one who gives the advice, it may be presumed that it is just about correct.

Dr. A. J. Atkins, well known San Francisco specialist, keeps himself "in trim" month in and month out, with the aid of his Oldsmobile.

"It is the kind of medicine I give myself. My motor car is an infallible tonic," declares the doctor. "When weary and tired out, a little run down the Peninsula gives renewed vigor, rest and a desire to return and take up my work, where previous to owning a motor car, it took many hours for such a desire to return."

In France a bare chassis today costs 60,000 francs, which was the price of a small-sized apartment building in Paris before the war.

GUESSES ARE CLOSE IN GAS ECONOMY RUN

When E. A. Hamlin, of Hamlin and Boqua, Eastbay Essex dealers, handed Luther Baptiste, of this city, gasoline tickets, it marked the final ending of a remarkable economy run.

The test was handled by United States Marines, under the command of Major N. P. Vulte, and was closely supervised. The cars, four in number, three of wihch were driven by their owners, and the fourth, the SX Arrow, by a representative of the dealers, were kept going day and night without pause. In spite of fatigue and lack of sleep, the drivers stuck to their posts.

Aside from the central idea of gasoline economy the run of four Essex cars recently conducted by the local dealers developed two interesting features. One is largely psychological, dealing with various traits of humanity; the other throws a sidelight on the labyrinthian pathway that must be traveled in order not to run foul of the views taken on certain matters by officials of the Postoffice Department.

When the first advertisement was prepared notifying the public of the contemplated economy run it merely specified that three prizes of gasoline would be awarded to those guessing the closest to the average mileage of the four cars on 11¾ gallons. In view of its experience The TRIBUNE decided that while not a lottery in any sense of the word, inasmuch as the guesser stood no chance to lose anything in any event, it would not be advisable to use the advertisement in the mail editions. Accordingly the forms had to be changed several times during the press run.

HAD CLEAR SAILING.

Before publication of the second and third advertisements the superintendent of mails here was shown the first publication and asked to decide whether or not it would be objectionable from Uncle Sam's view point. He asserted that with the interpolation of one clause, providing that in the event of two or more persons making the same winning guess the gasoline would be apportioned to them according to the number of guessers, the department would permit the newspaper to go through the mails. The amendment was inserted and thereafter TRIBUNE and dealers had clear sailing.

Widespread interest was created by the offer of gasoline prizes to the lucky guessers, just 512 persons taking advantage of the opportunity "to get something for nothing." Some of the guesses were of the character, showing that the persons making them merely chose figures at random, without giving the factors of topography, drivers, cars entered, quantity of gasoline in the tanks, past performances of the Essex or anything else the slightest consideration. The highest mileage guessed was 1316; the lowest 85.2.

On the other hand a Berkeley woman, whose guess was only a few miles out of the way, dropped into poetry in the expression of her desire that she be awarded one of the prizes. Some of the coupons containing guesses contained figures showing that the persons filling them out had given little attention to the plain wording of the provisions governing the affair.

MAKES CLOSE GUESS.

That the winner of the first gasoline prize—Luther Baptiste, 1725 Nineteenth avenue, Oakland—carefully considered every factor that might assist him in accurately estimating the average mileage of the cars, is evidenced by the fact that the figures he submitted, 412.5 miles, were within .62 of a mile of the average officially determined by Major N. P. Vulte, officer in charge of the U. S. Marines, San Francisco district, under whose supervision the economy run was conducted. Walter A. Johnson, 223 Greenbank avenue, won second prize, with an estimate of 410 miles, missing the official average by only 1.88 miles, and Robert A. McLean, 514 Forty-first street, third prize with a guess of 35.4 miles to the gallon, which is the equivalent of 415.95 for 11¾ gallons, and came within 4.07 miles of the official figures.

In a letter from former Sergeant Harvey A. Kern of the U. S. Marines, who is now in Oroville with the Essex transcontinental mail car, which made the record of 4 days, 14 hours and 43 minutes across the continent, the Oakland economy run has caused widespread comment among motorists of the interior and aroused keen enthusiasm among dealers everywhere.

PRICE REDUCTION WAS NECESSARY, MAKER ASSERTS

Edsel B. Ford is reported to have given out an interview recently in Canton, Ohio, and, according to "Financial America," said among other things: "It is the drop in raw material cost that has enabled us to get back to pre-war prices. With raw material costs low and decreasing steadily, we figure that the best way to prevent business stagnation is to cut prices of our products to the consumers. We believe that this policy will appeal particularly to the farmers who use the larger part of our products. No change in the design or equipment of the Ford car is contemplated as the result of the cut in costs. With our present production, which is standardized, it would be impossible to make any changes of any kind quickly, even if we wanted to."

TOUR OF S. F. OVERLOOKED BY AUTOISTS

Have you ever taken a trip through San Francisco?

You can laugh all you want when you read this, but it is a safe bet that only about one person in every sixteen has seen all there is in the Golden Gate city. It makes a wonderful day's outing to take a run about San Francisco and view what there is to be seen.

In order to make it official, let's start at the ferry building, go out Market street to Twin Peaks and over the wonderful boulevard that makes a figure eight about the famous hills. You can stop here for a while and thoroughly enjoy yourself just looking. Many Easterers who have never seen the bay and ocean and know of open water only from their geographies give a good deal of money to the railroad companies every year just to get the chance to see this wonderful sight. We at home overlook its possibilities.

Much of the time in summer the view is cluttered up by fog, but now there is little fog.

Frank McCorkle of Brasch and McCorkle sent a Stephens Salient six out this road the other day and his party had a lot of fun on the Sunday outing.

From Twin Peaks drive down the other side and go out through the great home parks to the Ocean boulevard. There is enough to be seen to please most nature lovers. Then drive along the Great Highway, skirting the ocean, and let the sea breezes sing through your hair, and they do sing, hard sometimes. Then up past the Cliff House, that is famous all over the world, and beyond Sutro Heights. It is a good idea to stop here and take a dip into the old homestead.

Then drive along Clement street, through Lincoln Park to the end of the Lincoln Highway. Here, again, is a wonderful view of the bay and ocean and Marin hills.

Drive through the Presidio, see the soldiers and armament and later go over the boulevard to Golden Gate Park and look at the wonders there. There is Stow Lake, and the Chain of Lakes and the Old Dutch windmill and a hundred and one other things to see.

These are only a few of the high spots to be seen in a tour of the city. There is also old Mission Dolores, Telegraph Hill, the aviation field on the Marina and other places.

Try this some time this winter.

Automobile Factory Is Again in Operation

According to C. A. Earl, vice-president of the Willys-Overland company, Toledo, O., all departments of the company are again in operation. Mr. Earl says that a daily production of 300 cars will be maintained with a force of 6500 workers.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA FOOTBALL TEAM SMOTHERS UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, SCORE 79-7

Nevada First To Score on California

Forward Passes Enable the Sagebrush Boys to Cross the Line.

By DOUG. MONTELL.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Oct. 17—It matters not that the California Varsity beat the University of Nevada yesterday afternoon on California field by the score of 79-7, nor would it have been of any more consequence had the Bruins chalked up twice that number against the visitors, the damage was done when the Sagehens registered that lone tally in the third quarter. The whole California team had in mind but one thing yesterday and that was to put over a shutout on Nevada. All week the Bears have been drilled daily to prevent the Nevadans from slipping over a score. And just when things were going so nicely for the Blue and Gold, young Mr. Bradshaw cut loose with a flock of forward passes that reached their destination.

Of course, by piling up the score that they did against Nevada the Bears have not injured their reputations, nor did they show that they were weak on defense. Quite the contrary, for during the game Nevada made first downs but five times. However, these came bunched, so as to allow a score to be rung up. All of which spoiled California's chances to go through the season without being scored against. Nevada had been known to be strong on open field work and forward passing and the Bears had been drilled against this style of attack. As a result, out of the fifteen forwards attempted but five were made good. But of these five, two came at critical moments to allow Captain Reed to make the lone touchdown.

THREE IN FIRST QUARTER.

California started off strong and soon convinced all present that they would exceed expectations in the line of scoring. During the first quarter California slipped over three touchdowns and as many goals. In the second the good work continued and by the end of the first half California was leading 45-0. The score exceeded the California rooter's expectations, as was voiced by Hal York, that prominent citizen of Blackfoot, Idaho, when he said: "How come?" California just helped themselves to every opportunity that presented itself and was holding Nevada well in check. [illegible] vadans failed to gain a single yard from scrimmage.

TOOMEY IS A STAR.

There is no doubt as to the stars of yesterday's game. On the side of California Crip Toomey was the outstanding star, with two long runs to his credit in the early part of the game, one for 55 yards and one a few minutes later for 50 yards. Karl Deeds in line plunges more than lived up to expectations and led California in scoring, putting over three of the ten touchdowns. Toomey, in addition to his running, kicked all seven attempts at goal following touchdowns and in the second quarter made a beautiful drop kick for 25 yards for three points.

For Nevada the whole shooting match was Bradshaw, the shifty little quarterback. Without a line in front of him to allow for opposition in aiding him to get away to end runs, and without any interference on running back kicks, Bradshaw stood out as the one man on the Sagebrush team. His forward passing was spectacular, for while he shot many that didn't find their way to their destination he was directly responsible for the sole Nevada score when he shot a 25-yard pass to Martin in the third quarter and followed it a moment later with a 10-yard pass to Captain Reed over the goal line. With a good line Bradshaw would be one of the best backs on the Coast.

The game was far from being good football, as is shown in the box score of plays. Fumbles by both sides marred the play and many incomplete forward passes should have been caught on the part of both teams.

Score by quarters:

| | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Nevada | 0 | 0 | 7 | 0 | —7 |
| California | 21 | 24 | 21 | 13 | —79 |

Substitutes:

Nevada—Fisher for Grant, Church for Dunne, Foster for Bradshaw, Middleton for Johnson.

California—Nesbit for Morrison, Rowe for Toomey, Gallagher for Latham, Hall for Muller, Eells for Deeds, Barnes for Dean, Goerlitz for Majors, Higson for Erb, Toney for McMillan, Cline for Berkey, Stephens for Hall, Van Sant for Rowe, Clark for Cranmer.

Touchdowns—California (10), Deeds 3, Toomey 2, Nesbit 2, Eells 2, Morrison 1, Muller 1. Nevada (1): Reed.

Goals—California (10): Toomey 7, Erb 2, Cline 1. Nevada (1): Howard.

Field goals—California (1): Toomey.

The $300,000 gate they speak about proves that Barnum had the right dope only he didn't have 'em born fast enough.

Morrison Cup Race Is Feature Today at Emeryville Track

What should prove one of the most interesting cards yet arranged for the Emeryville dog racing park will be staged today. Dr. E. W. Morrison, the track veterinarian, has donated a handsome cup for the weekly stake race, and some of the fastest dogs in training will compete. There will be five other contests, and with the mechanical rabbit working in perfect shape and the track fast some new records may be made.

TYRUS RAYMOND COBB ARRIVES FOR GAMES

Georgia Peach Is Pleased That Game Is Being Cleaned Up.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the "Georgia Peach," and considered the best all-round ball player in the world, arrived in San Francisco late yesterday afternoon and will start his California exhibition games at Stockton this afternoon.

Tyrus admitted he was a Democrat, that he was mighty glad to be in California even if it did take him six years to make up his mind to visit the west, that he [illegible] dismissed Chicago ball players, is innocent, and he is very glad that the game is being cleaned up.

"We ball players do not own the national game," said Ty. "We are just the trustees. When the present generation of ball players passes out of the picture others will take their place. Ball players come and ball players go, but the grand old game is going to go on forever."

"Are you going to manage Detroit next season?" Ty was asked.

"I would rather not discuss that," he replied. "Personally I prefer to remain in the ranks. The resignation of Hughie Jennings was a big surprise to me."

St. Mary's High Football Team Wins Another

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Oct. 16.—St. Mary's High School maintained the lead over University High throughout the game staged on California Field this morning, the charges of Coach Nulands of St. Mary's running a score of 21-7 to beat the University High eleven. Good football was in evidence throughout the game, although fumbles proved costly to the Blue and Gold lads on numerous occasions.

St. Mary's took the lead in the first quarter and shoved over two touchdowns before the forces of the University outfit could rally. Captain Silva of St. Mary's proved the star of the day, scoring both touchdowns on straight line bucking. Terry made good on both goals. The second touchdown came as a result of University High committing a foul on their own 16-yard line, a 15-yard penalty giving St. Mary's the ball one yard from the goal line on first downs.

[illegible] hard fought and neither side could get the ball across the line, both losing the ball on downs on numerous occasions. Forward passing by both teams was ragged and a number were intercepted. Capt. Miller of University High added fire to the work of his team in the second half and the University boys shoved over a score right after the opening of the fourth quarter. Smith kicked goal.

Coach Nulands resorted to some trick stuff and made good on his forward passing game so that toward the close of the quarter St. Mary's was doing all the offensive. Ryan scored the third touchdown with less than a minute of play left and Terry kicked goal. The work of Collins at end for University and the goal kicking of Terry were other features of the game.

Yell Leader Charles Bock Jr. of St. Mary's added pep to the game.

Three Games For Baseball Fans Today

All-Stars Will Play Tractors at San Leandro Grounds.

Three big ball games are slated to take place this afternoon on diamonds in this vicinity, and with the Coast League season coming to a close today and fans ready to give more attention to the activities of the bushers, the little fellows will be out displaying a lot of pepper. The Crystal Laundry and Espee teams will wage a battle at Lincoln park in Alameda to see which club will get the eighth berth in the Class B division of The TRIBUNE League. It will be the third meeting between the clubs, the first two resulting in [illegible]

The real big attraction outside of that game at Alameda will be the contest at San Leandro between an All-Star team picked by The TRIBUNE and the Best Tractors. With the exception of Pete Starasinich, who will be in the series with Hollister against Gilroy for a couple of more Sundays, the Tractor team will be the same as the one which will be entered in the Class A race of The TRIBUNE League. Gene Caldera and Heinie Lay are the chuckers for the Tractors and Wagner intends to start Gene Caldera against the All-Stars because there are more than a few left-handed batters on their roster.

SOME ALL-STAR LINEUP

Howard Gregory and Pat Kilhullen, the old "cronic" battery, will perform for the All-Stars, with Pop Arlett of the Oaks ready to relieve Howard if necessary. A feature of the meeting between the All-Stars and Tractors will be Walter "Seacap" Christensen and Bill "Doc" Moskiman, a couple of San Leandro residents playing against the Tractors. Moskiman will be on first base, while Pop Arlett will be at second. Tommy Fitzsimmons short, and Cornelius "Red" Lynch will play third to complete the infield. Claire Goodwin will also be in the infield for the All-Stars providing he can get back from Sacramento in time. He was unexpectedly called away last night. Christensen will be in the outfield with Tools Bankhead and Clark Boldt. The game will start at 2:30 sharp.

CALGARY VS. MILLERS

The third game of the afternoon is to take place at the Coast League park, where Frank Cotton will have his California Cotton Millers of East Oakland out to play Joe Devine's Calgary Club. The Millers are to play [illegible] vision of The TRIBUNE League and Cotton [illegible] for Devine by delivering a winner the first time out. Roy Bliss, southpaw chucker, and Al Drolette, one of the best catchers in the semi-pro ranks, is a new battery for the Millers and will be seen in action today. Rod Allen is also a new man with the Millers. Stechgrafe or Thollander will work for the Western Canadian League champs. The game will start at 2:15.

SHASTAS VS. MOOSE

The Oak and Moose team will meet the Shasta Limited at the Key System park, Fortieth and San Pablo, at 2:15. The Moose start off in the Class [illegible] next Sunday. "Lefty" Fein will chuck for the Moose.

The Richmond Elks will meet the Mayrose Butters of San Francisco in a return game at the Richmond ball park. The Elks defeated the Mayrose boys in a close game the first time out. Dave Hole pitched a no-hit no-run game for the Elks in the last game.

St. Mary's Freshmen Win From Sophomores

The sophs had the [illegible] until [illegible] carried a [illegible] over the opponent's goal. [illegible] by both teams but another touchdown by Landergen put the score in favor of the freshmen.

PARADE ON SATURDAY WILL INAUGURATE THE WINTER BALL SEASON

Twenty-four Clubs and Upwards of 300 Players Are Enrolled in Three Tribune Leagues

By EDDIE MURPHY

With twenty-four teams and upwards of three hundred players enrolled The TRIBUNE Midwinter Leagues will commence operatione next Sunday with an even dozen games. While the east is snowbound and they're buying fur overcoats and things in Chicago, Oakland is just preparing for the greatest season of amateur baseball on record. Three leagues—Class "A," "B" and "C"—will provide the fans with baseball every Sunday during the winter months. The TRIBUNE has offered pennants for the winning clubs, individual trophies for the members of the championship teams and other prizts for run scoring and pitching. Next Saturday afternoon a monster parade of amateur players will be held down town. Three hundred uniformed ball players will be one big feature of the parade. Movies will be taken of the event and the east is going to sit up and take notice when pictures of a ball players' tarade in late October are shown.

The TRIBUNE League will enter into its third successive season under the present set of officers, of which Fred L. Krumb is president. Before the organizing of the present TRIBUNE League there were other winter and summer leagues conducted by The TRIBUNE, but this one has become a permanent organization, and through the efforts of the officers and directors it can now be an assured success. J. Cal Ewin, Del Howard, Francis Woodward and Herbie McFarlin of the Oaks, Charles Doc Strub, Charles Graham and George Putman of the Seals, and Clyde Wares, Ernie Johnson, and last, but not least, President Billy McCarthy of the Pacific Coast League, have endorsed The TRIBUNE League, not only as a medium for developing young ball players, but also as an advertisement for the California winter climate. Every one of those men are big boosters for the league, and if their time isn't taken up with the investigation into the baseball scandal, President McCarthy and J. Cal Ewing will probably parade with the bushers next Saturday.

Lions, Rotary, Kiawanus Clubs Support League

More than a dozen young players graduated last spring from The TRIBUNE Midwinter League and only one of them failed to complete the season in organized baseball. Joe Devine, manager of the Calgary club, which won the Canadian League pennant, and his sterling catcher, Pat Kilhullen, tell of how the fans of the Western Canadian League idolized youngsters who graduated from The TRIBUNE League last winter and starred in their league. It was not only Oakland that got advertising all over the country through the youngsters playing in different towns, but San Leandro, Alameda, San Francisco and Emeryville were also advertised. Up around Canada the fans got the habit of calling players by the towns they came from; for instance, they used to call Walter (Seacap) Christensen "San Leandro."

Realizing what a fine medium The TRIBUNE League is for advertising the bay section, the Lions, Rotary and Kiawanas clubs of Oakland are out boosting for the "bushers." These clubs have promised to have representatives in the monster parade next Saturday afternoon. Mayor John L. Davie also realizes the value of the league as a booster for the bay district.

Working Man Gets His Chance in This League

A feature of the league is that it affords recreation for the youngster and for the workingman. An age limit has been suggested, so that only lads learning the game would be able to perform during the winter. But after much discussion by the directors and officers of the league a decision was reached not to have an age limit. There are dozens of former professional stars now employed around the bay who enjoy an opportunity to get out on the diamond each Sunday after putting in six hard days at some shop, shipyard or rattling their brains over a set of books. These sort of players will be cared for in the Class A Division of the league, which will also have at least an equal number of youngsters who have yet to make their debut in organized baseball.

The semi-professional ball player does not play in the Midwinter League for the money that he gets out of it, although managers in the Class A League are allowed to pay their men.

Practically every player from around the bay who played in the San Joaquin Valley and Mission leagues the past summer will be seen in action in the Midwinter League. During the summer months there was hardly a player in either of these leaues who didn't get upwards of $25 a game and expenses. Many of those players are not being offered any guarantee to play in the Winter Leaue and the "cuts" of the gate are not going to bring them anything like what they got during the summer. The boys are in the Winter League mostly for the sport.

Players Making Living At Game Are Barred

But the amateur ball player will have two leagues. The Class B and C leagues are for the amateur players only and they will take care of inexperienced players from 13 years of age and upward. The TRIBUNE League is for the boy and man who is out for the sport of the game and not to make a living at it. Players who were under contract to clubs in organied baseball last season or who were under contract to any organized club during the month of July of this year are barred from participating in any of the games. Also, any pitcher who has record of five consecutive months of inbund work in organied baseball is barred. So it is evident that the league is for the young ball player and the workingman who likes recreation on the diamond after a hard week of labor.

The schedules for all three divisions of the league are prepared and will be published within the next few days. It looks like a grand winter for the bushers around the bay and many more players will step into fame on diamonds of organized ball and be living advertisements for the bay district.

Oakland Sportsmen Organize Hunting and Fishing Club

A new fishing and hunting club, composed of local sportsmen has taken over the famous Cook's ranch, in the Sierras and will install some improvements that will make the hunting lodges one of the finest in the country. Located near Bruce's camp, the Cook place offeres access to the Mokolumne river and Panther creek, two of the best fishing streams in the west. Bruce's camp, which offered the only way to reach these fishing grounds in past seasons has been taken over by a Syndicate of Stockton sportsmen and is now closed to the public. In addition to fine fishing there is good quail, deer and squirrel hunting in that country. Dick Drum and Ferris Wheeler, local automobile men are lining up members and the list will close when fifty enroll.

ECONOMY TIP GIVEN OUT TO MOTORISTS

By 'Hot Spark'

In this present era of erratic spending and high prices, it behooves the motor car owner who intends to get the most out of his vehicle for the minimum expenditure, that is for most of us, to keep careful watch over his bills and the matters of operation and maintenance that run into bills. When the various products of automotive use were cheap, the temptation to waste was almost irresistible.

Today, however, there is real need for economy. The large majority of car owners are ignorant of many of the ways of saving money on the upkeep and operation of their vehicles and they should welcome a few hints as to methods of reducing the omnipresent bill.

ITEMS OF COST

The principal places where real savings may be effected are in fuel and oil consumption, tire wear and general wear and tear. The first item to consider is fuel and the car owner should not scorn the small savings in this connection, for in their aggregate they make a formidable total. To begin with every owner should reduce the idling periods of his engine to the smallest possible minimum; he should stop every smallest gasoline leak, should have the carburetor adjusted so that it consume the smallest quantity of fuel consistent with efficient running. Attention to these three details of operation and adjustment will save many gallons of gasoline per annum for each motorist who heeds the warning.

We touched on the subject of lubrication before and we would again emphasize the fact that wherever there is a moving surface not thoroughly lubricated there is wasted power. Lubrication must be copious, complete and correct if the full power-producing value of the fuel consumed is to be obtained.

Then there is the question of tires. It is an unquestioned fact that power is wasted when the tires are operated underinflated, so that an excessive area of the tread comes in contact with the ground. Incidentally, while this practice, all too common among American motorists, wastes fuel, it also injures the tires, which is a very expensive form of waste. It is better to run the tires at a few pounds over the prescribed inflation point than a few pounds under it.

In addition every owner ought to have the alignment of his front wheels checked up once in four months. When the tires are running out of alignment, a scraping movement is set up, which not only wastes power but wears out the tires very quickly. The owner who cares anything for his pocketbook probably needs no hint as to the desirability of plugging all cuts in the rubber tread as soon as they appear.

If the suggestions made above are conscientiously heeded the result will be an appreciable saving for the individual owners of motor vehicles and an enormous saving in our national resources of motoring necessities, which were part of our equipment for waging the recent war. The man who operates his car with real economy is not only benefiting himself, but is performing a patriotic duty at a crisis in his country's history.

Next, it is essential to reduce to its inevitable minimum the friction in the mechanism, and this must be accomplished by proper lubrication. Freedom from carbon in the cylinders promotes fuel economy. Efficient functioning of the ignition system is a vitally important factor in any attempt to obtain economy of fuel consumption. To obtain maximum ignition efficiency the owner must pay strict attention to the battery, wiring, spark plugs and other units of the ignition system. If the spark is not correctly timed or lacks life, heat, the fuel vapor in the combustion chamber will be but partly fired or will explode at a time when some of its force will be wasted. Further, there must be no leaks in the engine itself, as distinct from the fuel system. Valve leakage is one of the commonest causes of lost power, which in the final analysis means excessive gasolene consumption, since it will require additional fuel expenditure to make up for the waste. The valves must be kept accurately seating all the time because a very small leak here will cause a very large waste of fuel.

UNNOTICED WASTE

In the interior of the engine a great deal of unnoticed waste will result from piston rings that are too loose. When this condition develops a quantity of the fuel forces its way down past the rings into the reservoir, and is, of course, wasted. The owner who has reason to suspect this condition should try fitting some of the leakproof piston rings of patent construction, designed to correct just this fault. This same condition is sometimes produced by the use of a lubricating oil of too light a body. The oil is thinned by the heat present under running conditions and lacks the viscosity to make a perfectly gas tight seal at the piston. As a result the fuel forces its way past the rings and into the reservoir.

CHARLIE HEBRANK IS PROUDLY DISPLAYING ON THE radiator of his Elgin Scout car, the six-pointer that fell prey to his careful aim on a recent deer hunt. It is the largest brought into Oakland this year.

HEBRANK BRINGS DOWN 6-POINTER

Charlie Hebrank, manager of Hebrank, Hunter & Co., killed the biggest deer which was brought into Oakland this season. It's the biggest, at any rate, which has been reported to the automotive department of The TRIBUNE. It was a six-pointer and weighed 210 pounds. Charlie is naturally quite proud of his conquest and he is having the deer prepared for exhibition in his salesroom.

On the hunt he was accompanied by C. J. Pfrang, Frank Salamid and George Haiden. They motored in an Elgin Scout car to the foot of Mt. Lassen, about 44 miles east of Red Bluff. Their route took them through four inches of snow.

One other deer, a forked horn, also fell prey to Charlie's trusty rifle.

Revenues Used to Improve Highways

Before 1908 none of the revenues received as fees for the registration of motor vehicles were expended for the maintenance and improvement of highways. Today nearly 80 per cent is set aside for this purpose.

CARBON IS INJURIOUS TO ENGINE

If owners of automobiles were familiar with only the elementary principles of the reason for the formation of carbon in the engines of their cars many a repair bill would be saved and many a machine would give longer service, according to Russell Kenney, superintendent of the service department of the Weaver-Wells company, distributors of Studebaker automobiles and Day-Elder trucks.

"It is necessary in order that anything may operate with efficiency, that the proper kind of substance be supplied," says Kenney. "If you supply the wrong kind of fuel to your furnace, or a poor grade of fuel, there will be an imperfect combustion of the fuel, with the result that clinkers, slags and other things will accumulate and prevent the furnace operating in the proper way. If improper food is taken into the body, digestion will be imperfect, with the result that a state of inefficiency will exist. In the same way, if an improper mixture of gasoline—which is food for the motor—is used, an imperfect combustion of the gasoline will result when exploded and a residue will be left in the combustion chamber, this residue being commonly known as carbon.

"Oil, as well as gasoline, naturally contains a certain percentage of carbon. Inasmuch as a certain quantity of oil is constantly escaping past the pistons into the combustion chambers, there will always be a certain amount of carbon deposit from the oil. These carbon deposits are greater in some oils than in others.

"All good oils are supposed to have a high flash test, in other words, they should not burn or thin out only under very extreme heat. Therefore, providing a good grade of oil is used, the explosion which takes place in the combustion chamber will not serve to cleanse the chamber from the oil by burning, but rather by being blown out by the force of the explosion.

PETROLEUM VARIES.

"Oil, like gasoline, is the product of petroleum. Crude petroleum varies so much with the locality from which it is secured that any statement about it is only approximate. In the refining of petroleum the products obtained, in the order of their refinement, are as follows:

"Naptha distillates.
"Burning oil distillates.
"Lubricating oil distillates.
"Paraffine.
"Coke.
"Other residue.

"From the first division is obtained through further refinement, naptha, benzine, gasoline and kerosene, while from the third division is obtained the different grades of lubricating oils to be found on the market.

OILS ADULTERATED.

The percentage of carbon which these different products will contain depends upon the locality from which the crude petroleum is secured. Many oils after refinement are adulterated and an owner of an automobile should always be very careful to secure a high quality of lubricating oil.

"It is permissable to experiment, in order to obtain the most satisfactory grade, but there should not be much experimenting carried on with cheap oils. Money spent in the purchase of high grade oil is well invested, and when a satisfactory lubricant is found the motorist should adhere to it and always insist upon it when touring through the country."

Hot Water to Move Pitch From Battery

Hot water may be used for softening the pitch which seals the storage battery. A convenient apparatus consists of a can holding about five gallons of water and provided with three cocks to which are connected three lengths of hose which run to the openings in the three cells. The water is heated by a single burner gas stove and when boiling hot is run into the cells until the pitch is softened. It is advisable to drain out the acid before starting. Also it is desirable to place the battery in a large pan or sink to confine any escaping water.

Assembling Plant Is Opened at St. Louis

General Motors corporation's new Buick assembling plant at St. Louis, Mo., commenced operation early in October and is turning out 25 cars a day. Within a short time this will be increased to 50 cars a day, and present plans call for an ultimate output of 200 cars daily. The home plant of the Buick in Flint has a capacity of 500 cars daily, which is inadequate.

Club Will Revive Grand Prix Race

The Automobile Club of France will revive the famous Grand Prix race in July, 1921. A maximum of five cars may be entered by one manufacturer, the fees being 20,000 for one car, 35,000 for two, 47,500 for three, 57,500 for four, and 65,000 francs for a five-car train.

The Hudson Super-Six Cabriolet

Hudson Alone Can Use the Super-Six Motor

It is true that approach to perfection in the mechanism of a car, tends to obliterate reminders of its presence.

That is why so many speak of the forgetfulness of mechanism which is permitted the driver of a Hudson Super-Six.

They note how silently it asserts its mastery. How, without seeming haste, it travels fast, because there is no fret or fuss. And only the traffic and roadway slipping back to mark the swift pace.

Sometimes we have thought there is a penalty in this distance of the mechanism from the thought of the driver. For we do not desire forgetfulness of the Super-Six motor.

Yet what difference if the driver does not know why the Super-Six principle develops 72% greater power, so long as he knows his Hudson meets every task with the ease of abundant power? What matter if he does not know it adds 80% to efficiency, so long as every comparison—in acceleration speed or hill-climbing—proclaims the clear-cut supremacy of Hudson?

NEWS OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF THE GREAT EASTBAY DISTRICT

Oakland Tribune ◆ Sunday, October 17, 1920

MRS. WALTER LEIMERT is snapped as she was starting out on a canter over the Piedmont hills on Chesterfield, a day or two before she and Mr. Leimert left for the McCloud river. Riding has come to be a hard rival to golf among the hill set, the leaders in the revival comprising the Philip Bowles, the "Ned" Howards, the Wiggington Creeds, the Wickham Havens, Arthur Homan and Ralph Kinney. At the upper left is MISS DORIS RODOLPH, one of the sub-deb set that has made an interesting winter out of a rather tame period for the "not-out" girls. Opposite is MISS BERNICE HUBBARD (sister of Mrs. Louis Switzer) a recent hostess at a luncheon at the Hubbard home in Berkeley.

High Stakes Taboo? So Saith Leader of Eastbay Smart Set

By SUZETTE.

HIGH stakes?

Who said it?

That's the question—who started the revolution?

But the facts are plain that hostesses whose positions are unassailable on both sides of the blue bay have set their foot down upon high stakes—for afternoon games, to be explicit.

For—sub rosa—the gossips have it that most embarrassing situations have arisen within the new moon, to-wit, that jewels have been pledged and husbands have been on the warpath when appealed to in the direful hour, and that something had to be done.

Moreover, the story goes that the high stakes have sent many a formerly stable household on the rocks, when presto!—out comes one of the social absolutists who says, "No guest in my house shall play for more than the old familiar half-cent a point. Moreover I shall not play anywhere for more. If gambling is taboo by the government, why should we—if we are law-abiding persons—defy it in our homes?"

"An aftermath of the stimulus of the war,"—say the social psychologists. "The innocuous quarter-cent games were fun," says a clear-sighted matron of the hills, "but when it comes to playing for stakes that makes my friends wretched, count me out."

And thus the movement has been started for the old game—the game for fun with enough lucre to lend interest.

How far will it go?

The most diverting episode of the month is the coming-out party of Miss Dorothy Cawston, the interesting daughter of the Tyler Henshaws, that will assemble five hundred guests on Friday evening from both sides of the bay—old family friends and, of course, the debonnair younger set, with the only other Eastbay deb of the year—Miss Laura Lindsay Miller—at her side to greet the new world that opens its portals to her as the daughter of one of California's representative families.

The debutante will receive her friends in the big window of the reception room in a bower of pink blossoms and green things from the forest.

Before the reception, which, incidentally, will resolve itself into a dance, Mrs. Alexander Marx will be hostess at a dinner whereat the debutante will be the guest of honor.

A flock of interesting things are on the cards for the neophyte—the bridge tea of Mrs. Frank Delger Moller on the 26th, the Paul de Fremery dance on the 2d, besides several yet uncharted affairs, among them episodes at which Mrs. William Hamner and Miss Edna Martin will preside as hostesses.

The debutante will receive her guests with a group of friends of the family, including the Mesdames William Griffith Henshaw, Alla Henshaw Chickering, George Hammer, A. S. Macdonald, Herbert Hall, William Pierce Johnson, R. Clifford Durant, Charles Minor Goodall, Harry East Miller, Frank Miller, E. T. Henshaw, Charles Keeney, Victor Metcalf, Fritz Henshaw, Dudley Dexter, Wickham Havens, Alexander Allen, Harry Josiah Knowles, I. Harrison Clay, William Thornton White.

Misses Alice Grimes, Laura Lindsay Miller.

It was a bit of rare divertissement that the Delta Delta Delta sorority offered its friends on Saturday, when Mrs. Patricia O'Connor Henshaw presented a group of French songs at the informal reception at the house on LeRoy avenue, incidentally one of the most interesting of the sorority houses that group around the campus.

Assisting the girls to receive were the Mesdames Harvey Hart, Tracey Crawford, Delger Trowbridge and a few other matrons whose interest in the affairs of their sorority wanes not with the years that separate them from college.

Mrs. Henshaw, whose voice made such a hit in the "Merry Whirl," surprising even her warmest admirers, may remain about the bay, in which case, she will probably open a studio and go on with the work that lies so near to her heart.

FOR MISS COOGAN

Miss Helen Coogan, who will marry Robert Gemmel Adams on November 24, has a busy week ahead, with three affairs on the calendar in her honor—Mrs. Albert Coogan (Marjorie Emmons) to entertain for her at a bridge party on Wednesday; Mrs. Grace Ewing Hunt on Thursday, and Miss Anne Barbour on Friday.

Mrs. Hunt will assemble her friends at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cal Ewing in Vernon Heights, thirty friends of the fiancee the guests.

Miss Barbour will be hostess at a bridge luncheon at the Barbour home—the last of the week's doings for the bride-elect, who, incidentally, was herself hostess on Monday, when a group of girls and young matrons met at the Coogan home.

Apropos of the wedding, it will take place at the home of the Timothy C. Coogans, parents of the bride-to-be, and will be primarily a family affair, the attendants yet to be selected.

Miss Marie Louise Winslow is back from a European trip that took her over a considerable part of the continent, her aunt, Mrs. Robert Oxnard accompanying her.

The Ernest Porters are again at their Piedmont home after a prolonged stay at Lake Tahoe, where they and their sub-deb daughter, Miss Frances Boardman, passed the summer.

FROM SAN DIEGO

Mrs. Kenneth Lowden, whose home is one of the show places on Lake Merritt, with its wide sweeps of lawn stretching down to the water, and its long low roof after the manner of rural English homes, was hostess on Wednesday at a luncheon, a dozen guests assembling in honor of Mrs. George Kendall, mother of Mrs. Lowden.

The Kendalls, who have been residents of San Diego for some time, have disposed of their home in the old Mission town, and are returning to make their abiding place in Oakland. They will be guests of the Lowdens at Lakeside Villa for the winter.

Most of the guests came from over the bay—the Mesdames Percy Murdoch, George Wilhelm and Horatio Bonestell attending from this side.

Mrs. George Burnham Dunsmore was hostess at a bridge luncheon on Thursday at the Sequoyah Country club for thirty friends, with another set for the 23rd, to recruit as many more. Like this week's affair, the second will be staged at the club.

"ACE" GUEST

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Murdock were hosts at an informal dinner on Wednesday evening at their home, a dozen guests being asked to meet the famous American ace—Eddie Rickenbacher, he who had more German machines to his credit than any other American airman. And to his other achievements is added the piloting of the first aerial mail service over the continent.

The flyer has made a host of friends among those who hold an appreciation of personality.

Among the guests at the dinner were the close friends of the host and hostess.

GONE SOUTH

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Simonds left on Thursday for a motor trip that will carry them to Coronado, where they will tarry a few days, stopping on the way at Del Monte and at Santa Barbara.

Returning, they will take the inland highway, making frequent stops, Fresno to hold them a few days where they will visit friends.

The Berkeley folk plan to be back in their Spruce street home by the 29th, when they will assist Edward Hulse at his Yama Yama party on the 30th—one of the merriest projects ahead for the Night of Frolic.

The Hulse dance will be given at the Claremont club assembly hall, where so many "different" affairs have been staged—a [illegible] rendezvous where a spirit of fellowship prevails in full measure.

Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Henshaw, who have just returned from a visit to the country home of Mrs. Grace Tubbs Henshaw in the Santa Cruz mountains, were hosts at a bridge party on Friday night, twenty-five friends [illegible] at the Henshaw home in East Oakland.

The guests were chosen from a group of congenial souls who play together with a worthy regularity.

Miss Gladys Robinson is another [illegible] for whom there is considerable entertaining since her wedding to Dr. Fletcher Taylor is dated for the coming month.

Miss Ethel Cluff has sent out invitations for a luncheon November 3, to be given at the Cluff home in Elmhurst. Miss Cluff is to be maid of honor at the wedding at the First Presbyterian church, November [illegible].

Mrs. Herbert Gray Hills will be hostess at tea Thursday for Miss Robinson and Mrs. Frank Edoff, Mrs. George Booth Jr. and Miss Naomi Smith have planned afternoons for the bride-elect.

FOR NEWCOMER

Honoring Mrs. James Warrack, who has elected to make her home in the City-of-the-Lake, Mrs. Giles Nelson Easton was hostess on Thursday at a bridge tea at her home in Jackson street, assembling seventy-five friends to meet the former Sacramentan.

And on Friday Mrs. Samuel Eaton—pretty Anne Eaton—entertained a group of her friends in honor of Miss Doris Bornemann, Mrs. Harold Cushman Lewis (Jeannette Maxfield) and Miss Eleanor Carroll of Spokane, house guest of the Eastons.

Incidentally, Miss Carroll made a host of friends during her former visits to Oakland, when she divided her time between the Hotel Oakland and the Easton home.

The wedding date of Miss Marjorie Bronson and Austin [illegible] of Alameda is set for November [illegible]. So much is determined. Whether it shall be a church service is still in the air, but in any case the wedding will be an interesting episode with attendants.

Joseph Rosborough will leave November 2 for New York to join Mrs. Rosborough, who opens at the Knickerbocker theater in New York in "Little Billie," one of the popular light operas to be presented. As Josephine Adair, Mrs. Rosborough has made a phenomenal success in her musical career.

A group of the younger girls will comprise the receiving party.

Miss Inkes is a student at the University and a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Stringham Tea For Debutante

There was an interesting bit of sentiment incidental to the tea given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Frank Stringham at her home in Berkeley with Miss Laura Lindsay Miller the special guest of honor. Years ago Mrs. Stringham, then Juliet Garber, was bridesmaid at the marriage of Miss Miller's parents. Mrs. Miller and her sister, Mrs. I. Harrison Clay, assisted the hostess in entertaining her young guests at bridge at the home in Tanglewood road.

A profusion of chrysanthemums and fall flowers were used throughout the living rooms. The day permitting, tea was served upon the verandas after bridge. Those who were guests were Mesdames:

A surprise to the Eastbay set was the announcement of the betrothal this week of Miss Blanche Verna Evans, daughter of Mrs. E. J. Evans of Grand street, Alameda, and Irving Richard Cocroft, son of Mrs. Gertrude Cocroft of Alameda avenue. The benedict-elect is a nephew of Mrs. Louis Cocroft of Vernon Heights.

During the war he served with the 19th Engineers overseas and is now engaged in business with a concern at Eureka. The wedding is to take place in the spring.

In Alpha Phi circles the betrothal of Miss Pauline Wood of Modesto of the class of '19, University of California, and George Lindsay, son of Mrs. Edith M. Lindsay of Hilgard street in Berkeley, came as a delightful surprise to college associates of the couple. Miss Wood was one of the bridal party at the wedding of Miss Anna Barrows and Floyd Wayne Stewart and has been a frequent visitor here.

Mr. Lindsay received his degree from the University of California with the class of 1917 and was affiliated with the Sigma Nu fraternity. He was a member of the First Army ambulance corps which left for France during the world war. He received the Croix de Guerre for bravery.

The wedding is to take place after the first of the year.

At the marriage of Miss Jean Wright and Henry Allyn Wood last evening only members of the two families and very close friends were witnesses to the ceremony performed by Rev. Paul Waterhouse of Pasadena, cousin of the bridegroom, at the Howard E. Wright home in Claremont.

Mrs. Elwood Wright served as matron of honor for her sister-in-law while a group of sorority sisters of the bride, members of the Alpha Phi fraternity, served as ribbon bearers. These were Mrs. Donald Kieffer, Mrs. Floyd Wayne Stewart, Miss Ella Barrows, Miss Eleanor Barnard, Miss Laurinne Mattern and Miss Vera Christie. Elwood Wright served as best man.

The bride was a former Vassar student finishing her course, however, at the University of California. She is a member of the Prytanean honor society. Mr. Wood is a Princeton man and also came west to complete his studies at the University of California. He is an Alpha Delta Phi fraternity man.

The newly-weds will make their home in Berkeley.

"THE REVELERS"

It was a diverting affair that the Revelers offered on Friday evening, when Miss June Clement of Piedmont and a group of friends motored out to the reception given by the club, the guests of J. Witt Dougherty, in compliment to his niece.

Some weeks ago Mr. Dougherty took a leading part in a vaudeville show at the club, when many of the guests of Friday were the privileged audience.

Preceding the Friday night affair, a dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Dougherty at the Hotel Oakland, where they make their home.

Alameda County Health Work Gains Merited Praise in East

The fame of Alameda county and of Oakland has stretched to the uttermost parts of the nation. The Public Health center has drawn comment from the editor of Literary [illegible] work so important that in the issue of October 9, an article written by Miss Annie Florence Brown, for The Modern Hospital Magazine has been published in full.

The Literary Digest says:

"California is becoming known as a state where the adoption of the county as a public-service unit has been successful in abolishing distinctions between well-served cities and neglected country districts in the same general community. Her county libraries are the envy of older states where the law does not permit the establishment of these public utilities by counties. The latest development of this sort would appear to be the county health center with its rural branches, where are consolidated and developed all the sanitary and hygienic interests of the region—the medical inspection of public-school children, operation of public clinics and dispensaries, and the co-ordination of local medical and public health associations. The center at Alameda county, located in the city of Oakland, is described by Miss Annie Florence Brown, a member of the executive committee of the center, in an article contributed to The Modern Hospital (Chicago). Writes Miss Brown:

"The Public Health Center is an organization which consolidates administers and increases the efficiency of public health, relief, welfare, and charitable work in the community. This is done by: (1) The consolidation, maintenance, and improvement of public clinics of all kinds; (2) the installation for their use of complete scientific laboratories; (3) the conducting of popular education in hygiene and sanitation; and (4) the elimination of duplication and overlapping of effort in the field of community service by co-ordinating relief and social service agencies through the maintenance of a central clearing-house or confidential exchange.

"Three factors were foremost in the minds of those who were present at the initial meeting held in Oakland, Calif., in 1918, for the organization of the Alameda County Public Health Center. They were (1) the need for better health instruction in our public schools; (2) the establishment of adequate dispensaries in the community; and (3) the co-ordination of existing public health organizations in the county, chief among which was the Anti-Tuberculosis Association, which had been well established for a decade.

"In June, 1918, a preliminary meeting was called for the purpose of organizing. * * * As a result of this meeting it was determined to urge that the health work of the public schools of Oakland and Berkeley, together with the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society of Ala- [illegible] rection of the proposed health center, which should be supervised by a director professionally trained in public health. * * *

"It was further determined at this meeting to develop the health center under the direction of an advisory committee. * * * Upon the appointment of the committee, each of the agencies in Alameda county performing health, relief and welfare work was invited to send two representatives—one a professionally trained worker, the other a non-professional representative, to hold membership in and join in organizing the board of governors. * * * At this first meeting a constitution was adopted defining the duties of delegates and vesting in the board of governors certain power to deal with questions of general policy. * * *

"The main health center is temporarily housed in a building at one time owned and occupied by the former Oakland College of Medicine. Here had been conducted for more than twenty years various clinics both medical and dental, by a group of public-spirited physicians who contributed not only their time, but also the funds for maintaining same. In a most generous and progressive spirit this medical college presented the site, building, and equipment to the public health center.

"The Alameda County Medical Association has its headquarters in the health center building and has located therein its medical library and trained librarian. This medical library forms a nucleus from which will develop the educational work in hygiene, sanitation and preventive medicine.

"At present thirteen different clinics are being conducted in this building under the supervision of the health center.

"Invitations were issued to all members of the Alameda County Medical Society asking for co-operation and requesting them to state in what department of medicine they desired to work. These invitations met with unanimous acceptance. Clinical committees have been organized from the physicians of Alameda county. The staff is divided into a consulting staff and a clinical staff. Each clinic is under a chief from the consultant staff assisted by a sub-chief from the clinical staff.

"Although clinics are operated mainly for school children, a full line of clinics is also maintained for adults. Persons occupied during the [illegible] service at night clinics. Admission to these clinics is not entirely free, as a fee of twenty-five cents is charged each patient at entrance with a ten-cent charge for all subsequent visits. Treatment at night clinics, however, carries a charge of fifty cents and one dollar.

"Before admission to a clinic, a careful examination of each case is made by a well organized social service department.

"As each case leaves the health center it is carefully followed by the Department of Social Service. A number of large hospitals in our community have turned over their social service work to the health center. The new county hospital now under construction plans to have all admissions of the patients through the social service department of the health center.

"In connection with this department there is being developed a clearing-house or confidential exchange for clinical, nursing and social service activities for other agencies in Alameda county as well as for the health center. A uniformity of record system and organization will [illegible] the social service work of the county.

"A site covering a city block located at the civic center of our community has already been purchased. An active campaign is now being conducted under the chairmanship of Dr. Daniel Crosby, former health officer of Oakland, for a fund of one hundred thousand dollars for a modern building.

"The plans for this proposed building contemplate a two-story U-shaped structure with a central court. On the first floor will be the lobby, waiting rooms, and administrative offices. In one wing will be located rooms for dental, medical, surgical and orthopedic clinics. * * * The opposite wing will be devoted to clinics for school children. In this wing will also be found the administrative offices for the health development work of the public schools. * * * An important feature of the new health-center building will be the large modern dental clinic and dental laboratories. * * * On the second floor will be located the library and meeting place for the Medical Association of Alameda County. On the same floor lecture-halls well equipped with stereopticon and moving-picture apparatus will afford ample opportunity for popular lectures on public health, hygiene and sanitation. During the day hours will be given talks to all the grades of school children. The evenings will be utilized for lectures to adults engaged in industries during the day.

"Provision is being made for a department of dietetics where instruction will be given to mothers in the value of different foods for children as well as for the sick.

"Although the main health center is situated in Oakland, (a city of 216,-361 population, the largest city in Alameda county), Berkeley, the seat of the State University, with a popu- [illegible] center, which has developed from a well-organized institution known as the Berkeley Dispensary. Soon Alameda, one of the sites proposed for the Pacific coast naval base, with a population of 28,806, will also have its health center.

"Numerous small towns remote from the populous district in Alameda county have called upon the main health center for supervision in establishing branch health centers. A number of these are now in operation, one in San Leandro, a town of 4500 population; another at Hayward, population, 4090; a third at Niles, population 1500. This latter health center will serve four or five smaller towns covering a district known as the Washington Township. Plans are now in preparations for the establishment of a health center at Livermore, population 2450, where is located a splendidly equipped institution for tuberculosis patients, known as Arroyo Sanitarium.

"In congested districts of the city of Oakland, where the foreign element predominates, branch health centers known as "Well-Baby Conferences,' 'Children's Clinics,' 'Malnutrition Classes,' and 'Dental Clinics,' have been established directly in conjunction with the public schools. These clinics are often operated in cottages upon the school premises and under the direction of the director of the health center assisted by the school nurse. * * *

"A marvelous and ever-increasing source of revenue is obtained from our former Red Cross shop, which at the close of the war was given to the health center for operation. On invitation from the health center the public schools of Oakland were asked to co-operate in gathering old clothes and salvage of every description. The shop is now known as the Junior Red Cross Shop, and each month yields a steady income of over three thousands dollars, all of which is used for the health work of the children of our community. * * *

"Until the community has learned the value of these health centers and asks for their establishment ,it is thought best not to urge too large an appropriation for this purpose. So, at preset, most of these school health centers are financed by women's clubs, prominent among which are: the Oakland Club, the Home Club, Collegiate Alumnaae, and New Century Club. The Mothers' Clubs are lending their effort in many directions to make these school health center a success."

Ebell to Hear Speaker Talk On Landmarks

What is the best method of collecting and recording historical data and marking the many still neglected landmarks?" That is the problem which the California history and landmarks section of Ebell would have answered. So they have invited De Witt of De Witt and Snelling to be the speaker on Tuesday afternoon and the entire membership of Ebell to be their guests. The section has in its possession much valuable data which it is cataloguing and indexing. Mrs J. E. Thane is curator.

The newly established dental chair at Garfield School has been in almost constant use for the past week. Dr. Hussey of Oakland Health Center has examined the teeth of the children of the lower grades, finding many deplorable cases. A record is being kept of each case and on receiving the consent of the parents and the payment of a small sum, the teeth will receive the attention due them. This is a new departure in the Oakland schools, and with the co-operation of the parents should aid in better health for the children with a consequential improvement in their studies.

Meeting of the Club House committee of the Business and Professional Women's Club will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. building, 1515 Webster street, for the club presidents.

Music Center At University Of California

By ROY HARRISON DANFORTH.

The University of California is the chief center of Eastbay musical interest for the week. There will be offered today the half hour of music in the Greek theater; on Tuesday evening, the second of the Beethoven sonata recitals, and on Thursday evening the opening concert of the campus season of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

The University Band under Leroy W. Allen's direction will offer a rather conventional program, including the "Gladiator's Farewell" march, the "Poet and Peasant" overture, Dvorak's "Humoresque" and others. The program will be commenced at 4 o'clock.

Sigmund Beel, violinist, and George S. McManus, pianist, have chosen four sonatas for their second recital. The profound interest shown in the initial concert last Tuesday is expected to secure for this week's affair a larger audience. The following is the program: Sonata in A major, op. 30, No. 1; sonata in A minor, op. 23; sonata in F major, op. 24; sonata in D major, op. 12, No. 1. The recital will be in Wheeler hall.

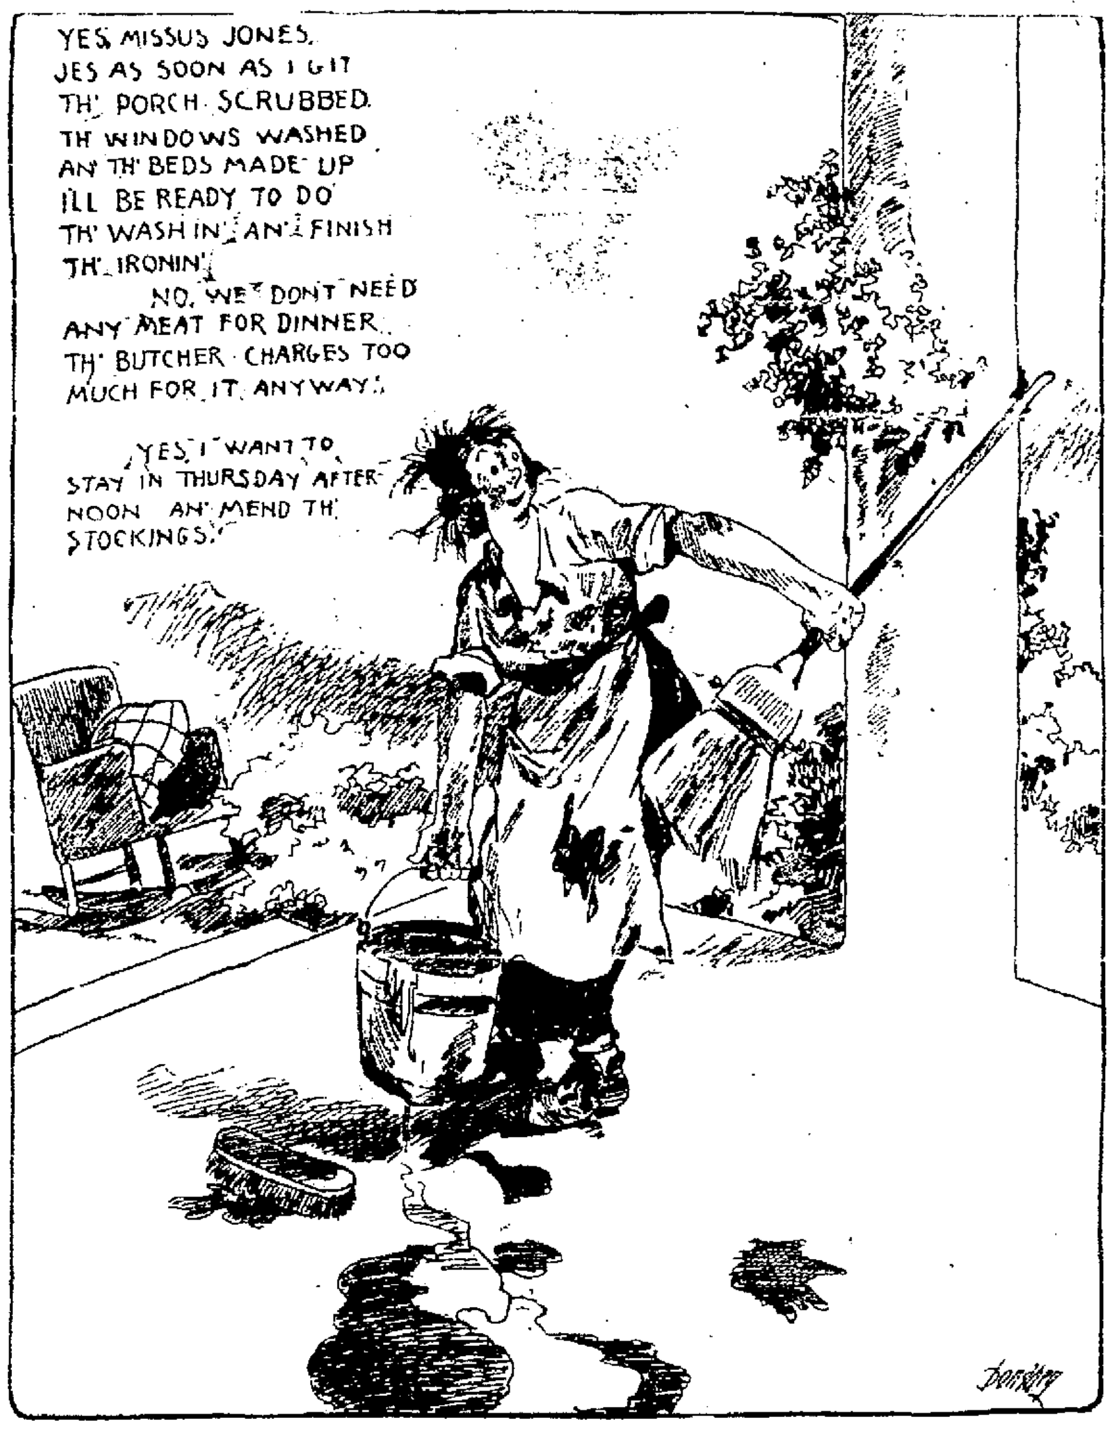
The Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Alfred Hertz, will play at Harmon Gymnasium Thursday night. Four concerts will be given on succeeding Thursday nights. This will be the third season of the San Francisco Symphony at the university.

Here are some scattered notes of artists who will appear here this season: Alice Gentle made a considerable hit in New York with the Fortune Gallo forces as Carmen. Serge Prokofieff has about completed the score of "The Love of the Three Oranges," to be given its premier this winter. Mme. Julia Claussen has been re-engaged by Gatti-Casazza for the Metrolopitan for the season. Both Paul Althouse, tenor, and Kathleet Parlow, violinist, are on tour. All of these wil lappear here this fall and winter in the Le Fevre-Brusher series.

The success of the recitals by Benno Moiseiwitsch here and in San Francisco is the reason assigned by Selby C. Oppenheimer for keeping the distinguished Russian player for a third recital. This will be given Sunday afternoon, October 24, in Scottish Rite hall, Srn Francisco. The ever-popular "Funeral March" sonata by Chopin will be in the program along with a number of exceedingly difficult technical pieces.

The musical festival of the American Federation of Musicians in San Francisco Wednesday night promises to draw an immense audience to the Exposition Auditorium. Most of the leading orchestras of San Francisco will participate in the program.

KIN YOU REMEMBER? -:- -:- By J. H. Donahey



KIN YOU REMEMBER that old-fashioned hired girl that used to work for three dollars a week? She did the washing, tended the furnace and sprinkled the lawn, always looked happy when she got an evening off.

Well, the lady of the kitchen told us the other day, if we didn't get her a baby grand, an upstairs girl, a second cook, a butler and somebody to answer the telephone, we could get our own corned beef and cabbage, as far as she was concerned—and she meant it.

MY HEART and HUSBAND

by ADELE GARRISON

What a magnificent animal he was! I could not withhold the mental tribute, much as I disliked him. With his coat off and bending over the tire I could see that either his confinement in the war prison or his army life had taken from him every trace of the grossness, the hint of coming obesity with which his indulgence in good food and wines had threatened him. His face, too, had lost the high color, the suggestion of flabbiness which had marred it in the last months that I had seen him.

He was evidently in splendid physical trim, his mentality unimpaired, but his moral sense? I realized as I looked at him, reviewed his mocking comments, his utter lack of remorse upon facing me—when he knew that I was aware of his infamous attempt upon Dicky's life—that he was the same selfish, unscrupulous, devil-may-care chap he had always been.

And Lillian, usually so sane, with so balanced a viewpoint, had put happiness out of her life because this man, once her husband, in the emotional remorse for the awful thing which even he would not have attempted unblinded by liquor, had sent an appeal to her saying he wanted to "begin over again."

LOST IN WORK

"He needs me," she had said to me.

I looked at the man bending over the tire and gritted my teeth in futile exasperation. For this splendide specimen of physical manhood, housing a reckless, selfish soul, heeded nobody. Good impulses, generous impulses he often had without question; but close association with him was only a crucifixion to a woman possessing ideals and a conscience.

A picture flashed before my eyes with photographic fidelity—that of Robert Savarin, falling almost lifeless at Lillian's feet after his quest of the man before me. She had nursed him back to life and then had made it worthless by sending him away from her because of her fancied duty to the man whose only bond to her was the empty legal one.

A sob rose in my throat as I thought of the contrast between the almost invalided artist, spent in Lillian's service, whom I knew she loved with her whole royal heart, and this physical magnificent wastrel whom she loathed, but to whom she felt quixotically bound. I bent closer over my knitting that my face might not betray my disgust if Mr. Underwood should look at me.

I need not have feared. He neither looked at me nor uttered a word until he had repaired the inner tube and had adjusted the shoe. Then he examined the whole machine with the air of an expert and when he evidently had decided that it would do he rolled down his sleeves, put on his coat and saunterer over to me.

"Haven't any cold cream and [illegible] in your knitting bag, have you, Lady Fair?" he asked mockingly. "I'm afraid my complexion in nearly ruined, and as for me delicate hands—hevings!"

Despite my disgust and anger I had hard work to repress a smile. I knew that he had had months of the hardest kind of ambulance service in France, and he managed to make his demand for cosmetics whimsically humorous. I felt subtly the old conviction stealing over me that there was no use wasting time in being angry at Harry Underwood. One could only take him as he was and keep out of his way as much as possible.

"I am sorry," I said quietly, determined to keep out of my answer anything save the most matter-of-fact air, "but I have nothing of the kind with me. Thank you so much for fixing the tire. I must hurry along."

I made a movement as if to rise as I thanked Mr. Underwood for repairing the tire. As I did so, he stooped, and before I could prevent him had taken my hands, knitting and all, into his powerful ones, and swiftly lifted me to my feet. He instantly released me, however, and there was nothing in the manner of his doing it which could possibly have given me offense.

"There!" he exclaimed boyishly, triumphantly. "How's that for a skillful ambulance driver and stretcher bearer? There isn't a stitch of the knitting dropped, is there?"

"Thank you, no," I said sedately, but a trifle breathlessly, for I had wondered when he had taken my hands just what ridiculous thing he meant to do—I had vivid memories of Harry Underwood's reckless teasing in the old days. "And—" I tried to be gracious as I perfunctorily thanked him again—"I am infinitely obliged—."

MADGE IS ICY

"Don't perfume your exquisite, spotless soul," he laughed mockingly, "and you can wait to thank me until you are out of the woods. Where are you bound for?"

His manner had abruptly changed. The last five words were uttered sharply in a business-like manner from which all hint of raillery had departed.

"I cannot see [illegible]" I began icily, then stopped as though hypnotized. His brilliant black eyes were fairly blazing with insolence.

"That it concerns me I suppose you mean," he snapped. "Well, just let me tell you something, my girl: that if it doesn't concern me it does concern you, and that [illegible] quickly. You're in the woods"—he looked round the surrounding woodland decked with sunshine, which I had thought so beautiful [illegible] while, at his words, seemed to take on a subtle, sinister shadow—"deeper in them than you think, and it's going to take nobody else but Little Old Me to get you out safely. So you'd better keep a civil tongue in your head, my dear. Not that it matters a rap to me, only you do look so [illegible] pretty when you're angry that I might be tempted to kiss you, and I pride myself on never taking advantage of Beauty in Distress."

Curiously enough, the blatant foolishness of his last words reassured me as to his attitude toward me. I think, indeed, that he meant them to have this very effect, and that he shrewdly counted on my seizing, as I did, upon the hidden menace to which he had referred.

"What do you mean?" I faltered.

UNEASY MOMENTS

"Simply that the nice, kind gentleman who blistered his face sitting in the sun in a rowboat out on the bay watching you for three days is still on the job. He's down the road a piece, and when he gets through fixing up a little trouble I made for him he's liable to jog along here at a right smart pace. I don't believe you'd care to meet him all by your lonely. I think even poor, old, tottering Black Sheep might be preferable."

Ye Olden Oakland Days

By Charles G. Reed

In the spring of 1850, the Patten brothers and Moses Chase, mentioned in my previous article, leased 150 acres of land from Antonio Maria Peralta and began farming, and the next year they leased some 300 or 400 acres more. Their line ran a little to the north of the residence of John Watson (east side of Lake Merritt) and extended east to the residence of John Carey (near upper Fourteenth avenue), and on the west and south their lease was bounded by the lake and estuary. In after years, the Pattens, Chase and others acquired title to the leased property, and also a tract extending east to Sausal Creek (Fruitvale). Chase made his home on his portion for the remainder of his life, and his house, No. 404 East Eighth street, is now occupied by his grandchildren.

The section first above described was laid out into blocks and lots and was known as Clinton, but was not incorporated. Adjoining on the east a section was laid out in blocks and lots and was known as San Antonio—later as Brooklyn. Near the foot of Commerce street (Fourteenth avenue) was the first embarcadero or wharf, from which the Spanish residents shipped their products. The site of the embarcadero was later covered by Laure's wharf.

In 1870, the town of Brooklyn was incorporated and embraced the former towns of Clinton and San Antonio, and also a small section to the northeast known as Lynn. On November 4, 1872, the town of Brooklyn was annexed to and became a part of the city of Oakland.

On May 4, 1852, an act incorporating the town of Oakland was presented to the Legislature by H. W. Carpentier and passed. Governor Bigler was advised not to sign the bill and at first refused to do so, as it was charged the parties in interest were squatters, and without title to the land sought about to be incorporated; and he was finally prevailed upon to sign the act.

The first board of trustees were A. W. Barrell, A. J. Moon, Edson Adams, A. Marier and H. W. Carpentier, the latter, however, did not qualify.

Belonging to the town there were about 10,000 acres of overflowed land, known as the waterfront, which by an ordinance introduced by Trustee Barrell was given to Carpentier by his associates in consideration of his building a small schoolhouse (22x38) and erecting a wharf at the foot of Broadway.

Delays Incident to Suits An Old Scheme

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—Delays incident to legal procedure are not a modern growth, according to Professor O. K. McMurray of the University of California Law School. Under the old common law procedure of several hundreds of years ago, the practice of slowing up the court machinery was widely used, according to the savant. The use of technicalities to hinder the progress of law suits caused many of them to be extended over periods ranging from sixty to seventy years, the professor declares, and even in those remote days, he notes, a single law suit was used to support several generations of a lawyer's family.

Lavish Color Features New Gest Offering

By Heywood Broun

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Morris Gest has quite outdone himself in his production of Oscar Asche's "Mecca," which opened the Century theater for the new season. If statistics are enough it may be said that there are more revelers, slave girls, warriors, and camels, than usual. But in addition to being huge and lavish and obviously expensive, "Mecca" is sometimes beautiful. It is a beauty of both color and movement. Probably the latter is more striking, for the feature of the performance is the ballet devised and drilled by Michel Fokine, the famous Russian.

The second act is animated by a bacchanale which is really wild and barbaric. Often and often again we have seen attempts to revive the high jinks of the ancients achieve nothing more than a fearful amount of effort upon the part of a number of transparently unhappy chorus girls. But there is spirit as well as plan to Fokine's ballet. It fairly innundates the theater with vivid splashes of moving volor. The final curtain finds the stage simply paved with recumbent women, scores and scores of them, as thick as good intentions, but perhaps it would be just as well not to go into motives. Probably Fokine's ballet is sinful. Certainly it is beautiful and the presumption is therefore against it.

THE PLOT HOLDS

When the supply of cloth of gold is unlimited there is much opportunity for the plot to trip and stumble, but Asche has succeeded in keeping his story simple enough and strong enough to make it stand out time and again above the scenery and the costumes. There is a good sultan and a bad one, and a beautiful dancing girl, which is enough to give you an idea of what it is all about, although it might be added that there is a particularly thrilling scene in which a wicked wrestler tries to break the good sultan's neck. He doesn't. Nobody does, but it is not for want of trying.

After having said that Mecca is perhaps the very best, or nearly so, of its kind we cannot refrain from adding the reservation that as far as we are concerned a play may become too big and too colorful. Nothing painted has quite the same magic as character and obviously there is no chance for such drawing in a pageant play like Mecca. The best stories are those which can be told in terms of three or ffour people. Dramatically speaking it seems to us that ten may be company but that four hundred dancing girls, Nubian slaves, pilgrims, Arab bandits and camels must be a crowd. For us one interesting heroine clothed and in her right mind outweighs two hundred dancing girls clad only in the mosquito netting of their native land.

ANOTHER JINKS PLAY

Like "Mecca," Edgar Selwyn's play, "The Mirage" is concerned with high jinks, only this time they are modern and there is also a moral. The play is somewhat after the fashion of Eugene Walter's "The Easiest way." First of all a boy and a girl lived in Erie, Pa., and loved each other. She went to New York and became bad and he stayed in Erie and remained good. Seven years later they met in New York and he asked her to marry him. She demurred a little but then she said she would. Only that night he chanced to be invited to a dinner given by a rich New York traction magnate with whom he was planning a deal. He thought it was a business engagement, but it proved to be diversion. When he arrived at the rich man's house ladies of dubious character were sitting on the floor shooting craps, and cocktails were being passed about and strange gentlemen received invitations from stranger ladies to be good fellows and buy square diamonds. The young man from Erie was shocked. Never before had he met anything like this in the trolley business. Transit in Erie was not so promiscuous. In fact each passenger before riding was obliged to present a letter from his pastor. The man from Erie said coldly that he was going home, but before he could leave the house another belated guest came in. It was the girl from Erie.

THE SELWYN FORMULA

According to Mr. Selwyn, no big business deal is ever put through without the aid of drink and dice and erring daughters. In "The Mirage" the services of six dubious women are required to complete the merger of two trolley lines. If this is the correct ratio per mile one can only wonder why Mr. Selwyn neglected the stupendous dramatic possibilities offered by a play about the Union Pacific.

"The Mirage" is not without entertaining features but it is difficult to take it seriously and the intent is serious. Mr. Selwyn has lived so long in the theater that he seems to take it for granted that no one questions the old dramatic axiom that people from small towns are good and people from large cities are bad. It saves time but it makes characterization somewhat less convincing. We have lived here all our life and of course it is very flattering to see these many plays in which New Yorkers are shown to be so wicked but we can't believe it. Mr. Selwyn himself does not try to prove it. He just admits it.

Manager Named

Harry David, now manager of the Imperial theater in San Francisco, will assume the management of Loew's State theater, as the remodeled MacDonough is to be known, according to an announcement by Ackerman & Harris, the lessees of the new theater.

David has for the past nine years been associated with the California and Portola theaters in San Francisco and recently assumed management of the Imperial. The State theater is rapidly nearing completion and it is now stated that it will be opened within three weeks.

YE LIBERTY—Tonight will see the final performances of the David Belasco hit "Daddies" and on Monday evening the magnificent production of "Robin Hood," which was the talk of Broadway only a few months ago when it was enjoying its sensational run at the Park theater, will be offered for the first time in the West at Ye Liberty playhouse. Ralph Dunbar is the producer of "Robin Hood" and that in itself is worth more than passing mention, for the name of Dunbar in theatricals is like the name Sterling on silver. In "Robin Hood" he has outdone himself according to the advance notices both in production and cast and a splendid week is looked forward to by the management of the theater.

FULTON—"The Crimson Alibi," the long awaited mystery spy play, is scheduled for presentation at the Fulton theater for the coming week. The play is rated as one of the most powerful dramas of recent years, and made a sensation in New York, where it was a triumph last winter. Katherine Van Buren, Maude Fulton's find of a month ago, will make her debut [illegible] Paul Harvey will be "David Carroll," sleuth in charge of the hunt for the murderer, and Talbot Henderson and Lou Morrison, distinguished thespians just added to the company, will be, respectively, "Larry Conover" and "Professor Bristol," suspected of the murder.

ORPHEUM—Graceful and youthful Sheila Terry enjoys topline honors at the Orpheum this afternoon in her extensive dance drama, "Three's a Crowd." J. Rosamond Johnson, eminent figure in the song making world, with his five artistic syncopators, also are featured. Dewey and Rogers will offer a novelty entitled "No Tomorrow." Lord Chester and Marven Morgan will deliver a telephone satire. Billy Shone's monologue, "A Day Off," should be appreciated by married men especially, it is said. Three Lordons, casters, and Wastike and Understudy, educated seals, are other interesting acts. Pictures are the comedy, "A Bashful Bigamist," Fox News and Topics of the Day.

T. AND D.—Olive Thomas, darling of the screen, and whose death in Paris a few weeks ago startled the entire world, will live again on the screen at the T. and D. theater today. The star will be seen in "The Flapper," one of the last two pictures made by Olive Thomas before she went on the European tour that ended in her death. And strange as it may seem, this picture strikes a startling analogy in the life of the star who sought experience and found a tragic death. The second feature is Bert Lytell in "The Price of Redemption."

PANTAGES.—Bringing the atmosphere of all the recent eastern successes, "The Revue De Luxe," the brilliant musical creation, will be featured at Pantages for the week commencing with the matinee Sunday. Bits from each of the New York hits are introduced in the progress of the revue and the audience will be keenly delighted with the varied selections. The younger patrons of Pantages will take particular delight in the special attraction, "In Details," the amusing offering by Harry Coleman and Miss Ray. Both are extremely clever ventriloquists and their happy little [illegible] a special number, Manager Myers has announced a special children's matinee for Saturday, October 3, when each little patron will participate in the gift of six of the famous walking dolls.

KINEMA. — The much-heralded Cosmopolitan Super Feature, "The Restless Sex," opens at the Kinema today. Few pictures have approximated the gorgeousness of the settings and costumes or presented such a marvelous sense of motion as the dances and mad revels of the merrymakers at the ball before the entrance of the dazzling heroine. A powerful story is built around a society idol who seeks excitement and novelty and hungers for opportunities to sense every emotion. Readers of this famous R. W. Chambers' novel will remember the mad adventures into which the heroine is involved in her chase for sensation and excitement. Wonderful Bohemian atmosphere is injected in the studio scenes and the "Ball of the Gods" is conceded the most gorgeous spectacle ever produced on the screen. M. and Mme. Yaretzki, dancers from the Imperial Russian ballet present a fitting atmospheric prolog.

AMERICAN.—Louise Glaum, in her remarkable new dramatic production, "Love Madness," and Emma Dunn, original star of "Old Lady 31" on Broadway, in the film version of this play, are the joint attractions commencing today at the American. "Love Madness" is a gripping, dramatic story of a woman's sacrifice and a man's regeneration, told with all the fire of Miss Glaum's splendid acting. "Old Lady 31" is a refreshing love story in which the lasting affection of an aged couple is blended into a sweet romance and parallel to it runs the love of a young couple, just setting out on the pathway of life as the older lovers approach its end.

COLUMBIA. — Another scintillant girlesque revue known as "Stolen Sweets" is to be proffered the patrons of the Columbia theater this afternoon, where it will remain for the week with the principal comedy in the able hands of Eddie Gilbert, Harry Harrigan, Gwendolyn Evans and Jess Mendelson, surrounded by a bevy of California's prettiest girls. The musical numbers scheduled to score next week are "Tommy Atkins," by Betty Lee; "Whispering," by Ethel Griffin; "If I Get the Guy Who Made the Country Dry," by Genevieve Murphy; "The Wimmin Won't Leave Me Alone," by Vera Knight; "Cleopatra," by Della Martell; "Humbo Gumbo," by Gwendolyn Evans; "Honey," by Babe La Rue; "Love, Honor and O Baby," by Hazel Beer; and "You're a Wonderful Girl," by George Stanley.

FRANKLIN. — Douglas MacLean and Doris May, that clever comedy pair, have a breezy comedy romance in "The Jailbird," beginning today at the Franklin. Sent to prison for an offense against the law, Clancy makes his escape in a novel manner. He falls heir to a small-town paper, but his modern ideas of journalism get over the heads of his townspeople. To rouse them he pulls a huge bluff on them only to be caught himself in a surprise finish. His society editor, who is in love with him, uses a woman's weapons to knock the crook tendencies out of Clancy, and through her influence he ends up in the same jail from which he escaped.

IDORA PARK.—Idora Park patrons will be treated to another feature athletic event this afternoon, when the shipyard tug-of-war championship will be competed for by the teams from the Moore Shipyard in Oakland and the Bethlehem yards in Alameda. With intense rivalry existing between the two teams of athletes, a purse of $5,000 has been contributed by the rooters of the two yards, who will be on hand when the championship is settled in the free stadium of the park at 3 o'clock.

BROADWAY.—Buck Jones, latest recruit to the screen's actor-cowboy colony, will be seen at the Broadway theater today and tomorrow in "Shooting Square." It will be the initial presentation of the comedy-drama in Oakland. Jones is rapidly gaining ascendency among the Tom Mix-es and Harry Careys of the screen. "Monkey Business" completes the program. Attractions for the week include "Treasure Island," and "The Twilight Baby," Tuesday and Wednesday and Rex Beach's "Going Some" and Anita Stewart in "The Fighting Shepherdess," Thursday and Friday.

ARCADIA.—The finals in the championship waltzing tournament, which has been interesting lovers of the terpsichorean art for the past four weeks at the Arcadia Dancing Pavilion, will be held next Thursday evening. Eight couples are scheduled to start in the prize contest, these eight representing the winners in the four preliminary events. Three winning couples will be selected in the finals, and to them will go the prizes of $100 and the honor of representing the East Bay in the State tournament, which will be held at Arcadia during November, with representative waltzing experts from other cities of the State.

Two Shows Booked

Two more shows have been booked at Ye Liberty playhouse, so that the boards at that theater are virtually full up to the end of November. "The Little Whopper" is one of the bookings and comes the week of Sunday, November 14. It carries a cast of fifty people. The McIntyre & Heath show, "Hello, Alexander," is the second booking and is due the week of November 22. This show carries a cast of 100 people and is a musical comedy of unusual merit if reports from the East can be accepted. In order to bring this production to the city, Ye Liberty management has purchased the show outright for one week.

Margaret Edwards Signed—

Margaret Edwards, Berkeley girl, who eight years ago gained national reputation by winning a national prize for having the most perfect measurements for a girl of her age (which was then 14), has just been signed for a season with the Poli circuit of stock company theaters in New England. Miss Edwards made her debut here at the time she won the physical development prize on the Orpheum stage. Since then she has played for the Schuberts in a motion picture which proved a sensation in motion picture business several years back, entitled, "The Hypocrites."

London Gets True American Musical Pep

By Roswell Dague

(Tribune Correspondence.)

LONDON, Oct. 1.—If you are an American with a genuine fondness or the stage and you suddenly find ourself transplanted to London one the first things you rush to do is go to some theater. For London as a half-hundred or more of them, ll well patronized these after-the-war days and with a very liberal percentage of them presenting American plays.

Two of us Americans who have seen many a play together in New York during the past five or six years, arrived on these English shores only three days ago. Last night we went to the Empire to see "Irene." Every one at home knows "Irene." Even if they haven't seen the musical comedy they have heard hotel orchestras play or have danced to "Alice Blue Gown," "Castle of Dreams" or the song "Irene." An American, James Montgomery, wrote the book and another American, Harry Tierney, the music. It opened early last fall in New York and is still playing there, with several other companies starting out on the road. We—this other man from home and I—had already seen it twice in New York, for it is worth seeing.

IT WAS WELL DONE

What we were curious about last night was to see how they'd do an American musical comedy in London, with a cast of English people. And to our surprise we found they didn't do it at all badly. Even the Man from Home, who is a rabid American, admitted that there was no lack of pep in the way the music was played. One reason for that may be that the star of the piece is an American, Edith Day, who originated the part of Irene in New York. She has made a big success over here, for the English seem to like our zippy American girls. And she certainly does the part of the little shopgirl delightfully, though we think Patti Harrold, daughter of Orville Harrold, the opera singer, does the role a bit better in the New York production.

Over here they've kept the dialogue unchanged, except for various English gags in the comedian's scenes. But the heroine's lines about Philadelphia's slowness don't get a laugh, whereas in New York they used to cause a roar. And, on the other hand, we sat in stony silence at some of the comedian's funniest English bits. The fact of the matter is we couldn't understand half he said, for his accent was as thick as they say the winter fogs are.

THE AUDIENCE

What really interested us the most, though, was the theater on our side of the footlights. The Empire is one of the best known places of amusement in London, and you enter the orchestra, or stalls, as they are called, by going down a long flight of stairs, way below the street level. There we found every one smoking [illegible] ettes, but pipes! This was in the section where people pay about $4 apiece for their seats and where most of them are in evening clothes. Imagine what would happen if any one at home tried to smoke a pipe during a performance! At that, though, I rather like it—and even the Man from Home admitted it was comfortable.

New Press Agent

A new system of handling the publicity and advertising of the local Orpheum theaters was put into effect last week. "Jack" Stratton, publicity manager of the San Francisco Orpheum, is now to head a department of publicity which will handle all of the advertising work of the Orpheum theaters of San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento and Fresno. Assisting Stratton will be "Jack" Burroughs, former feature writer on a San Francisco afternoon newspaper.

Behind THE Footlights

Marjorie to Play L. A. —

Marjorie Rambeau, who played in stock here years ago and who played a short season in repertoire at Ye Liberty playhouse last spring, is soon to appear for a week's stay in Los Angeles, according to word received here. Her vehicle there will be Channing Pollock's play "The Sign on the Door." There is a possibility that the production may come here next spring.

Della on Pantages—

Della [illegible] whose matrimonial and domestic affairs gained her some publicity here for a time last summer and who later turned the reputation she had thereby gained to account by going on the T. and D. stage as a dancer and by giving a short talk on "How to 'Vamp' Your Husband," is now touring the Pantages vaudeville circuit. She recently played the Pantages at Los Angeles in a "real harem" act entitled "A Dream of the Orient."

Cowan in Australia—

Word has been received here of the arrival in Australia of Lynn Cowan, who is perhaps one of the better-known old timers on the Orpheum circuit. He, with his wife, Estelle Davis, and Bill Bailey, opened recently in Melbourne, Australia, vaudeville with their act, "Little Production In One." They appeared in this act as a headliner on the local Orpheum stage about six months ago.

Walthall to Speak Here—

Paul Ash, conductor, and Anthony Linden, flutist, of Ye Liberty's "symphonijazz" orchestra, will render a short musical program before Ebell Club on the occasion of the address by Henry B. Walthall, motion picture star, before the club on October 27. Walthall comes here the week of October 24 in his own production of Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts." He has previously appeared in a motion picture production of this one of the Danish author's plays. "Ghosts" is now on the road. After its organization in Los Angeles it was given a premiere in San Diego, where it is reported to have been well received.

Bennison in London—

Louis Bennison, another old-timer of the Oakland stock companies, who was ten years ago an associate of Orral Humphreys, Marjorie Rambeau, Sydney Ayres, Franklin Underwood and others at Ye Liberty playhouse, has now gone to London, taking the production, "Johnny Get Your Gun" with him. He made phenomenal runs in New York with the production and has just concluded a tour of the country with the show which took more than two years.

New Orchestra Leader Comes To T. and D.

Fred F. Forman, native of Oakland, who is a well-known orchestra conductor of the country, comes to the T. and D. theater to take up the baton over a new orchestra a week from today following the expiration of the contract of Dr. Carlos de Mandil, who has headed the T. and D. orchestra for the past six months.

Forman, besides being a conductor of note, is a player of some versatility as he is an accomplished artist [illegible] trombone. He is also a composer of ability.

Roscoe Karns, former Oakland stock actor with the Hippodrome company at Ye Liberty two years ago, is now in the movies. He is associated with the King Vidor productions.

Walter L. Catlett, former Oakland boy, returned from London to New York city recently and has been signed by Flo Ziegfeld for the "Follies of 1921." Catlett has written his mother, Mrs. Mary B. Catlett, 1921 Eighth avenue, that he will probably visit home around the Christmas holidays. Catlett was one of the famous "So Long, Letty" cast and played in "Madame Sherry," "The Girl at the Gate" and in the olden days in the stock company of Ferris Hartman at Idora Park.

"Daddies" Closes

Last night at Ye Liberty saw the close of the David Belasco production of "Daddies." Miss [illegible] Harvey, who played the part of Ruth in this play, has been engaged as leading lady for one of the stock company houses in San Francisco and will start rehearsal there this week for her first production with the company.

Miss Harvey is a young actress from Australia. She was first seen in Oakland about two months ago at the Fulton playhouse production of "Too Many Husbands," the Somerset Maugham play, and this same play will serve to introduce her in her new engagement. After playing here in "Too Many Husbands" she temporarily played a leading role in "The Humming Bird," Maude Fulton's new play, during its run in San Francisco and later at Ye Liberty.

Artists and Their Work

By LAURA BRIDE POWERS

THE exhibition of Old Masters that opened on Friday afternoon with a private view and a reception at the Palace of Fine Arts has more than fulfilled its promise.

Art Director J. Nilsen Laurvik in his foreword to San Francisco about the collection he had assembled in New York for the delectation of his townsmen, understated his accomplishment.

Nothing comparable to it has been shown west of the art centers on the Atlantic, particularly in its collection of early Italian and Spanish paintings, upon which the whole structure of modern art has been builded.

These early schools are hung, quite logically, in the first two rooms leading to the Dutch-German-Flemish rooms. The great English masters are grouped in the next salon, leading to the buoyant French producers of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the formalist David, Mme. Vigee Le Brun, Louis Van Loo, Watteau Duvivier and a dozen efflorescent painters of the last century.

The room sings. It breathes the Gallic spirit and freedom from conservatism—the art of David, the classicist, excepted—he who was trapped unawares by the classicism of the Italian.

For the painters and laymen who have been obsessed with the primitive movement that swept the country a dozen years ago, the examples of El Greco are the high lights of the first gallery. Here are "Peter at the House of Simon"; the archaic panels, "St. Mary the Virgin" and "St. John"; and "The Annunciation" on the west wall, their ascetic simplicity in dramatic contrast to the ornate art of the foregoing Byzantine period with its profuse adoption of gold and over-ornamentation.

An interesting portrait by Antonio Moro, one of the collection of Old Masters that opened on Friday afternoon at the Palace of Fine Arts, hangs in the galleries given over to the Spanish-Italian collection, one of the most comprehensive ever shown in the country. The exhibition will remain open for a month.

FOLLOW POETS

The period represented by several of the neighboring paintings followed the age of Dante, Boccaccio and Petrarch, when new life was infused into painting as well as in the literature of the country. The Gothic spirit that had come down into Italy, is eloquently expressed, not only in the freedom of painting, but in the exquisite framing of the paintings—the frame with its delicate ornamentation as much a part of the ensemble as the painting itself.

Interesting as the gallery is from a retrospective standpoint, it is hardly a gay place to tarry in, the color of the period not having yet risen with the High Renaissance into a thing of glory.

La Spagna, brilliant pupil of Perugino, is represented by a canvas of interest, the style of the Spaniard Giovanni following rather closely that of his versatile master.

Here, too, are examples of Jacopo Palma, Lorenzo Lotto, the Venetian, Carreno da Miranda, Bronzino, the academist, who gives us a grand duke of Tuscany in armor—not a very companionable person, by the way. Whether the fault lay with the duke or with Bronzino or with the armor—which cannot be classified as a fetching rig—the fact remains he is not the kind of person to make a bid for popularity where so many other engaging nobles are assembled.

Goya, the Spaniard, and Tintorette and Paul Veronese, the Venetians—luminaries of their day, are represented in this grouping.

Francisco Goya's dexterity with brush or needle—whatever his medium—is revealed in his fascinating portrait of "Ascencio Gulio." Such direct, alert handling of the figure is characteristic of this tempestuous Spaniard who said what he had to say in the simplest possible terms—the secret of his eloquence.

Tintoretto is represented by two portraits, eloquent of his love for line, texture and richness of color.

"IL FURIOSO"

To be sure it is Tintoretto's figure compositions with their passionate, fiery style that have won for him his place among the great. But even in his protraiture are evidences of his intensity—"Il Furioso"—his contemporaries called him.

With Tintoretto (tintore—from his father's occupation as a dyer)—we have a portrait by Paul Veronese, the last of the great Venetians." The portrait is a vital impersonation, with the painter's love of grandeur expressed not only in the pose of the subject, but in texture of his costume—velvet, fur and jewels rendered with virtuosity that is the Veronesian manner.

So rich is the content of the Italian-Spanish galleries that to see them with anything approaching appreciation one must make a day of it.

But Van Dyck, Teniers, the younger, Rembrandt, Peter Paul Rubens, Ferdinand Bol, Von Goyen, the two Lucas Cranachs, Jan Wijants, Nicolas Maes, Jacob Ruysdael and a dozen more vital contributors to the period between the pre-renaissance and the breaking of the nineteenth century are waiting in the next gallery. And confidentially, the lighting is better and the air more hospitable—we are meeting old friends.

Rembrandt's contribution is St. Peter at prayer, with the shaft of light falling upon him in his supplication—well-known through its manifold reproductions.

Popular interest centered 'round "The Hunt" of Rubens, a large can[illegible] in color, in which the great master of the Flemish school reveals something of the influence of Velasquez, with whom he lived and painted for a prolific year.

The Teniers canvas presents the "Artist's Wife in Landscape"—a large painting presenting the lady, walking through a garden, holding a fan. (She probably didn't know what to do with her hands.) The landscape in which the painter presents his wife is overfull from the twentieth century viewpoint, a castle in the distance, with trees and figures about in the manner of his time and personality, but well balanced and harmonious in color. Incidentally the lady in question was the ward of Rubens, the romance drawing the painters together in a warm friendship in the last years of the older painter's life.

FROM THE SEA

A happy innovation has been introduced by Director Laurvik and his aide-de-camp, Mr. Estudillo—a rest room between the Dutch gallery and the English, where the doors that swing out on the lagoon through the lovely colonnade let in draughts of air from the sea. It doth greatly refresh the spirit.

The crowds are going to the English and French galleries. Here they are finding familiar names, and names linked with the development of the nations from which America's art has evolved.

A self-portrait of Sir Joshua Reynolds challenges attention, a forthright presentation of a man who loves the world and is on good terms with it. Another well-known Reynolds is the "Paviour," a marvelously modeled head, revealing the character of the man who spent his life in the humble service of his fellows paving the roadways that ran from his native town.

One of the interesting things in the gallery—a note of humor—is the caricature by Reynolds, in which he and his comrades are handled with a delicious spirit of play.

Here are four Gainsborough canvases, the most important the "Portrait Group in Landscape." Under a translucent blue sky flecked with clouds, in a tree-grown garden, are three children—two little girls in soft rose frocks and a lad, the three at play in the sunlight.

Beautiful in color and happy in arrangement, the canvas is a luminous thing on the north wall, where it is flanked by two portraits, the one on the left—the lady in grey—the most interesting in character and treatment. Few portrait painters today are reaching a broader expression of personality than this old master whom many critics proclaim to be the father of modern English painting. Be that as it may, his place in the development of England's art is fixed, though to John Constable must go the honor of being the creator of modern landscape painting. Until his time, landscape painting had merely been an adjunct of portraiture.

CONSTABLE HERE

To him external nature was a source of sensuous refreshment, so he painted the sky and the clouds and the hills and streams as he saw them, richly. And men loving nature, even in translations, were quick to acclaim Constable an innovator.

His canvas in the exhibition is thoroughly representative of the loose, broad treatment of nature that captured the imagination of France and revolutionized the viewpoint of her painters. The Constable landscape in the collection is the "Stoke-by-Nayland, Suffolk," a bit of countryside with a little church rising from among the trees.

Sir Henry Raeburn with his sturdy Scotch vigor is represented by a rugged portrait—"Professor Andrew Dalzell," the character of the life work of the man expressed in the books about him.

Adorable Lady Hamilton, for whom Romney had formed a romantic attachment, is one of the high lights of the room, the coy, lovely creature modeled with an inspiration that bespeaks the master. For simplicity and dexterity in modeling, Romney had few rivals among his contemporaries, though strange to say, he never had been admitted to membership in the Royal Academy—too uneven in his work, said some. Others, politics.

Sir Thomas Lawrence's portraits of the Falconers—husband and wife—the latter a beauty in white—round out the famous group of Briton portraitists.

The French gallery demonstrates with particular emphasis the truth that though art has no nationality, the art of every strong race is easily distinguishable.

The English painters have never felt the pictorial beauty of line as have the Latins, the differentiation being more keen in the beginnings of their national art expressions. The agreeable flow of line that David gives us in Mme. Severan is an instinctive thing, the outcropping of grace that is part of the national personality.

It is this grace of line, lucidity of statement and exuberant love of color that makes the French gallery the climax of the exhibition.

HUNDRED PAINTINGS

In the collection are one hundred paintings, not one of which is without interest, the aggregate commercial value somewhere in the neighborhood of $10,000,000. And as to their esthetic value, there is no unit of measure.

That this stupendous undertaking might be brought to fruition, a group of good citizens have underwritten it, and in consequence a small charge will be made to the public as at the Zuloaga, Anisfeld and Rembrandt exhibitions.

What effect will the retrospective exhibition have upon the painter folk?

Sober the ultra-moderns?

Incidentally, the reaction is on, when the grotesque and distorted are going back to the limbo whence they came.

Last year's exhibitions in Paris and New York were notably conservative, though far from the sterility of academism, and this winter the swing-back is, according to report, even greater.

The exhibition is open from 10 to 5.

Incidentally the reception and tea that marked the opening of the show was a famous success, many busy men finding time to attend, even as they do in New York and over the water.

The West—the 'way West—is coming on!

Elmer Wachtel and Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel of Southern California have brought their summer's work to San Francisco, and are exhibiting at Rabjohn and Morcom's new gallery.

The Wachtels are sincere painters whose work ranks with the best that has come out of the South.

Winifred Black Writes on Homes and Housework

By WINIFRED BLACK.

Flats, flats, flats—five-room, four-room, three-room, two-room. Apartments with a roof garden, apartments with hall boys; apartments with disappearing beds.

Rooms furnished for light housekeeping. Rooms furnished for no housekeeping at all.

Delicatessens, shops, cafeterias, cafes, restaurants, family hotels—where are all the homes?

"Going, going, gone," says my friend, the Real Estate Woman. "People don't want homes any more—they want a motor car and a place to roose. The kitchenette has driven out the kitchen, and the delicatessen is fast driving out the kitchenette.

"If I had the most beautiful home to let at a reasonable price, and had to stipulate that that home must be well-taken care of, I couldn't rent it to save my life, unless I leased it to a group of bachelors with a Chinese servant.

"It's the women—they won't do housework, and you can't get servants.

"Nobody wants to tie herself down to dusting and sweeping and three meals a day when there are so many movies and there is so much bridge; and then, think of the motoring! You can't blame them, can you?"

"No," I said, "I can't blame them, and I don't, really—and yet what would we think of the men if they should suddenly rise up and declare that they really couldn't bother with business any longer, now that the motoring season is in, and the golf links are in such perfect condition?"

Sure, It's Work

It must be rather a nuisance to a man to stick at his desk when he knows that the trees in the country are casting a wonderful shade, and that the brooks up in the mountains are fairly bursting with trout.

How often do you hear a man wail to the moon that he hates the drudgery of work?

Drudgery—of course housework is drudgery; so is office work; so is plowing; so is setting out trees; so is milking; so is reaping; so is standing behind a counter and selling neckties; so is adding up figures in a bank. Anything that's work, is work—it isn't play.

Why make such a fuss about it?

And as to all this hullabaloo about the servant question—isn't it just about time for the every-day American woman to make up her mind that it's her business to stop moaning and go to work?

Dishwashing is not a delightful and entrancing amusement—there's nothing thrilling about a carpet sweeper, and nobody can pretend that it takes a genius to put a piece of roast beef in the oven and get it done to a turn. But what of it? Somebody must do these things, and if they are done correctly and in the right spirit, they aren't half as hard work as running an elevator or stoking a furnace or adding up accounts and keeping bank books straight.

What is there so degrading about running out into the kitchen and peeling a pan of potatoes, stirring up some biscuit and putting a nice, juicy steak on to broil?

Here we are, with gas and electric ranges, every labor-saving device in the world, little flats and apartments and convenient houses to live in, and we raise such a wild and despairing cry about the scarcity of house servants that any one would think we were all born blind and deaf and halt and couldn't use half our faculties.

Why Not Help?

A tragedy—the shortage of servants? I don't think it's a tragedy at all. I think it's a remedy for a very serious disease—the disease of idleness and self indulgence.

Any woman who isn't feeble-minded or delicate in body ought to have the time of her life cooking and sweeping and taking care of her own little home for her own little family. That's her business in the world—and if she's worth her salt she'll throw herself into it, heart and soul, and make a shining, splendid, heartening, comforting, joyous success of it.

Here's to the broiler—long life to the muffin pan—hurrah for the popovers! There's just as much fun planning, cooking and serving a good, substantial, delicious dinner as there is in driving a bargain in real estate or winning a case in a court of law.

Have we American women been so spoiled and coddled and flattered and petted and pampered that we've lost all sense of proportion and forgotten all the rules of common sense? Why shouldn't a woman whose husband works for a living in a store or a factory or an office or in an orchard or on a farm, work in her own home for her part of the living, and have the time of her life doing it? That's what I'd like to know.

MOVIE ACTRESSES AND THEIR HAIR

Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popular count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, many are leading ladies just because of their attractive looks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or makeshift, but with a simple mixture by putting a teaspoonful of canthrox (which they get from the druggist) in a cup of hot water and applying this instead of soap. This full cup of shampoo liquid is enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use, the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is, its luster and softness are delightful.—Advertisement.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

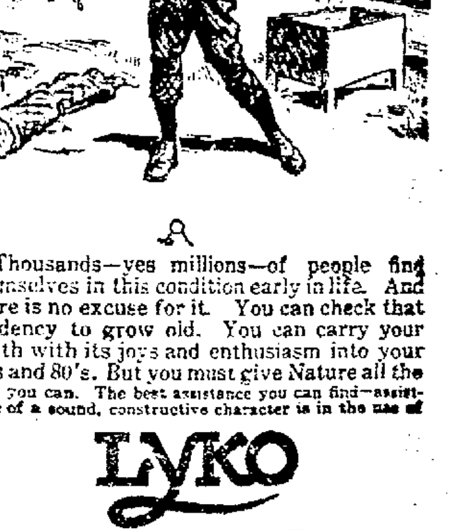
But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—Advertisement.

Be Young In Body, Mind and Looks Despite Your Years

How often you have wished that you could indulge in the strenuous exercise of out door sports with the vigor and enthusiasm of youth! But the end of the week finds you all in—you are tired, listless and lack the energy to go out for a vigorous walk or a round of the links—or any other exercise that requires much physical exertion. Many a man, even in his middle forties, has a vague feeling that he is "getting old"—and right at a time when he should be at his very best physically.

And he is growing old, not in the sense that the years are pressing heavily upon him—but in the sense that his vital forces are wasting away faster than Nature replaces the worn out tissues.



Thousands—yes millions—of people find themselves in this condition early in life. And there is no excuse for it. You can check that tendency to grow old. You can carry your youth with its joys and enthusiasm into your 70's and 80's. But you must give Nature all the help you can. The best assistance you can find—assistance of a sound, constructive character is in the use of

BALLOT LOADED DOWN WITH FORTY-EIGHT LEGISLATIVE MEASURES

The Knave

COLONEL IRISH APPEARS IN A HAT WITH AN INTERESTING HISTORY

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The ballot in this city is going to be voluminous and confusing. It is to contain, besides the names of the candidates for the various offices to be filled, forty-eight measures, consisting of proposed amendments and initiative and referendum provisions—twenty state and twenty-eight municipal. Very few voters will undertake to read all these provisions. Fewer yet will be able to understand them. Here and there there may be a voter especially interested in an especial measure, but such a thing as general knowledge of the laws proposed, the changes in existing laws and the constitutional amendments, will be impossible, even to one with a judicial mind and unwonted diligence. Whatever measures may get through are not likely to have had the intelligent consideration of voters. Which raises the question whether these initiative and referendum laws will not fall of their own weight. Any suggestion such as this has heretofore been fiercely combated as the suggestion of reactionaries; but when an election is to be clogged as this one is to be, by an avalanche of propositions which will only serve to confuse the voter, an argument in favor of severe modification of the laws should be desired.

Sunday Closing Law

Nobody would have believed in the wild, free days of San Francisco that a Sunday-closing proposition would ever be seriously considered by the body in municipal control. But, then, nobody would have believed that prohibition would descend upon the land in a way to make this wettest of all cities dry. But Sunday closing was seriously discussed by the police and judiciary committees of the Board of Supervisors last Thursday. It is up yet, with great interest manifest. An ordinance is proposed which would exempt many businesses and amusement places, including theaters, motion picture houses, dance halls, cafes, billiard halls, poolrooms, and other such places, and make it unlawful for barbers, bootblacks, undertakers, grocers and some others to keep their places open for business on Sundays. The proposed ordinance would impose a fine of $500 on the proprietor of a prohibited business who violated the first day of the week by seeking to turn a profane penny, albeit he could look on all sides and see those who were not prohibited doing even a better business than they were accustomed to on week days. It is a barbers' measure, and what fate it will have is not apparent at this time.

Franklin K. Lane's Illness

The friends of Franklin K. Lane, upon reading of his collapse in the East, and of his being ordered from business as a necessary step to regain his health, are remembering his collapse in Oakland on the occasion of his visit to California four years ago. It was apparent then that he was overworking, and it has been a surprise to those who had a more intimate knowledge of his work and official surroundings that he went through the last three years of his cabinet experience without suffering a collapse. It is not of record and cannot be stated as something susceptible of proof, but it is known that Lane's position in the President's official family, at least in the second term, was anything but a bed of roses. The administration was and is dominated by Southerners, with whose ideas the Secretary of the Interior sometimes clashed. That he was not sustained by the President is evident from the circumstances surrounding his resignation. All of which must have worn his nerves; and when he came to shoulder the duties involved as the chief legal advisor of Magnate Doheny, with his enormous interests in Mexico, he seemed to get beyond his powers of endurance.

Rowell Sells the Republican

Newspaper men may have been interested last week in what happened to two New York papers of national celebrity, but they were surprised this week at what happened to one of standing right at home. Considering everything, the sale of the Fresno Republican and the outright change of control was the least likely thing to happen in newspaper circles that could have been imagined. In the editorial announcement of the change, Mr. Rowell says: "Readers of the Republican can scarcely be more astonished than were the owners themselves." In a more intimate treatment of the matter he says: "Four days ago I had no idea that I should have any change of plans to make." He states that his plans are not made up for the future, except a tour of the Orient, which he has long had in mind; but that he does not intend to become a "dillentante loafer." Newspaper men, after their habit, are therefore wondering where's the story. Mr. Rowell could not have quit such an important connection, which he had so thoroughly dominated for such a considerable time, because he had another job in view. It is not a violent assumption that pressure was brought to bear which the public outside of Fresno, and outside an inner circle in that town, is not in a way to know. However that may be, Mr. Rowell will be missed in the editorial circle. Not everybody may have been able to agree with him always, but all who are competent to judge will admit that he was a writer of great force and incisiveness; that he is fearless, and that he was always to be reckoned with in the political and other disputations of the state and nation.

New Home for Reserve Bank

All structures on the site purchased for the head office of the Federal Reserve Bank are being razed. The site includes the whole block between Sansome, Battery, Sacramento and Commercial streets. Plans for a new permanent structure were approved last year. The building is to be four stories at present, but ultimately fourteen if required. A law has since been enacted providing for the transfer of the sub-treasury's functions to the Reserve Bank. This added business renders new and ample quarters more necessary, and preparations for the erection of the new building are proceeding. All buildings on the site are being or are to be immediately razed except that now occupied by the bank. The western half of the new building will be first completed and the bank transferred thereto; after which the present structure will be razed and the eastern part erected. The steel for the first unit has been contracted for delivery in November and December. No hint has been given of the use to be made of the sub-treasury building, at Pine and Sansome, erected at great cost and it is believed of a style of architecture that will mitigate against its use for other purposes.

Occidental Site Sold

At last the Occidental hotel site, occupying the block on Montgomery street between Bush and Sutter, has been sold and will be improved. It has lain unimproved since the great fire, now some fourteen and one-half years, and during that time must have eaten itself up in taxes and interest. None but very rich estates could have stood the strain. As a matter of fact, it was owned by heirs of rich estates—the Kellys and Donahoes. It was the late Frank Pixley who referred to "the Donahues and hoes." There is a tendency to confuse them, but they occupied very different social strata in the earlier life of San Francisco. Peter Donahue was a founder, and incidentally for a long time the head of the gas corporation, as well as the California Northwestern Railroad, which his son Mervyn inherited. Joseph Donohoe was a banker, and it is understood that this family considered its stratum to be above that of the other family. However that may be, the Donohoe heirs failed for more than fourteen years to agree as to what should be done with the very valuable piece of real estate which the Occidental hotel used to occupy—to the considerable annoyance of other property owners on Montgomery street, who now hear of the sale and impending improvement of the property with unalloyed satisfaction.

A Mexican Order For Ships

The Pacific Mail, a publication put forth by the publicity department of the great steamship company of that name, says that General Salvador Alvarado, minister of finance in the cabinet of the provisional President of Mexico, arrived at San Antonio, Texas, a few days ago from the City of Mexico, and stated that he was on a three-fold mission to the United States, one of which missions was to ratify contracts for the construction of approximately fifty ships. This would indicate that Mexico is beginning to rebuild with a will. What is interesting about it to the Pacific Coast and California, and the ship-building interests about the bay in particular, is the chance it offers to a great industry built up by the war and particularly able to meet such a demand. And it should be possible for ship-builders here to successfully compete with those of any section of the country. We have several times referred to the friendly relations established by Obregon in his several visits to this city. He takes the reins as president December 1, and it is believed that his regime will establish a cordial relation with the United States which has not been approached since the time of Diaz.

Issue Taken With An Author

Edith O'Shaughnessy's latest book, "Intimate Pages of Mexican History," is attracting a great deal of attention here as giving a closer view of the central figures in the seven years of revolution. The statement that Diaz is only a quarter Indian, however, is challenged. Dr. Forbes, who owns big interests in Mexico, who was intimately acquainted with Diaz and prescribed for him, says that he was a full-blooded Aztec. Huerta indubitably was, and displayed traits of his race. An affecting account of Huerta's last days is given. He was ill of a serious internal trouble, notwithstanding which he came to the border—El Paso—to plot with Orozco an uprising. The United States government arrested him and established a surveillance. What ultimately happened is told in this paragraph: "On a bitter January night a large man with thick, black whiskers, speaking excellent Spanish, knocked late at Huerta's door. He was admitted. He told Senora de Huerta that he was a physician and a great admirer of her gifted and persecuted husband. He asked to examine him, after which he stated that unless an immediate operation was performed, in thirty-six hours he would be among the dead. He so alarmed both Huerta and his wife that they consented to the operation that same night. The black-whiskered stranger then made two abdominal incisions, without anesthetics, and, furthermore, did not sew up the wounds; after which he returned to the night of mystery whence he came. Huerta died three days after the fantastic and fatal occurrence."

The Thrifty Dutch Immigrants

HANFORD, Oct. 9.—THE KNAVE: It was interesting to me to note in a recent issue of The Knave that your attention had been directed to the rather extensive emigration of Hollanders to the United States, and their subsequent attraction to California. There are a good many Hollanders in Kings county, in and around Hanford, and more are coming here each year. They bring with them their old-world virtues of thrift and sobriety, and from working for wages and renting farms soon acquire the more substantial status of land owners in the richest and most prosperous farming districts. Moreover, they usually embrace the earliest opportunity to become citizens, and manifest a keen interest almost from their arrival in local and national politics. The writer of this communication taught a so-called Americanization class in Hanford last year, where instruction was offered evenings in the local high school to aliens who wished to familiarize themselves with American government and history, and, to his astonishment, two-thirds of his rather large class were Hollanders; and this, too, in a community where at least two other foreign nationalities far outnumbered the Hollanders. Moreover, their attendance was punctual and regular, and their progress, as measured in some degree by their final examinations, gratifying in the extreme. Yet so unostentatiously do these immigrants make their arrival among us, and so readily do they become an integral part of the community, that their presence here in any considerable number was entirely unguessed by myself, and I am sure not generally known. AMES PETERSON.

Stories of the Nipped

Submerged stories continue to come to the surface as to heavy losses in the profiteering orgy. Some of those who lost latterly made handsomely at the outset, but in many instances their final losses are greater than their profits. It is said that professional men—lawyers in particular—were nipped in oil. Two well-known political bosses are reported to be heavy losers. The extent of their red-ink experience approaches half a million. Professional men have not fared as well as business men who took a flier. The latter got in early, and realized an increment at first. Professional men did not get in till they saw what was being made by others, and when they took a hand the psychological time had passed. Sugar, wool, cotton, rice and barley were the favorite media, all of which, with the possible exception of barley, have slumped disastrously and left those who expected to vastly increase their substance on a barren reef.

Auditorium Acoustics Improved

The supervisor who held that chicken-pickers had as good a right to enjoy opera as aristocrats who were able to afford reserved seats—argument being on over the proposition to build an opera house by private contribution in the civic center, which failed because of the mayor's veto—now may possibly feel some measure of justification. So far as the contention was that the auditorium was good enough for the production of opera he has been borne out. A season of opera has been successfully given in the great enclosure, though it had been considered by experts and singers that such was impossible. The Democratic convention saw the installation of apparatus by which a voice was made to carry to the farthest confines of the mighty auditorium. This was considered of great importance to certain elements which had gathered on that occasion. It was considered of equal importance that what was done in opera should be heard with a distinctness that would promote the enjoyment thereof, and the apparatus was amplified and improved so that the acoustic fault of the auditorium was overcome, and the fact demonstrated that it is suitable for great performances for which there is no other in the city of suitable size.

Recollections Of Patti

It is rather singular, or at least interesting, that as I was writing of opera here, in a moment of relaxation I should pick up a magazine which opened at a review of Henry T. Finck's book, "The Reign of Patti." Many very interesting facts of this super-prima donna are given. She was paid $4000 for singing "Home, Sweet Home" at the dedication of the Chicago Auditorium. She exacted the same sum for concerts in London, and $3000 for concerts elsewhere, though Mapleson had to pay her $5000 in New York, and that every night, before she set foot on the stage. In South America she earned a million and a half dollars in eighteen months. It is related that she never appeared at rehearsals, her brother-in-law, coach and manager, Maurice Strakosch, taking her place. Her first marriage was engineered, or at least approved, by Napoleon III and Eugenie. Marquis de Caux was an equerry to Napoleon. He was poor, having but $2000 a year, and Eugenie advised Patti to keep on singing so that her husband would be provided for. The marriage, of course, was unhappy, and she got rid of him by dividing her fortune with him, his share amounting to $300,000. Then she married the tenor, Nicolini, and after his death the Swedish Baron Cedarstrom, who was much younger, but with whom she seemed to be happy. Patti was known as a public singer fifty-six years. Her last appearance in San Francisco is well remembered, and though it drew crowds, many who had heard her in her prime wished they had not gone to hear her then. As it was expressed, her voice was a mournful reminiscence.

Centenary of Napoleon's Death

The French residents are already considering organization to celebrate the centenary of the death of Napoleon, which will occur on the 5th of May, 1921. How they still regard their great countryman may be inferred from this early activity and the universal sentiment in France in favor of the observance. The feeling there seems to be unanimous that the occasion should be observed with unusual emphasis, though France is now a republic and Napoleon was the embodiment of the imperial idea. In Paris the ceremonies are expected to surpass any commemoration ever celebrated by a people noted for honoring their heroes and notables. Already a committee has been formed, of which Marshal Foch is the head. It numbers in its membership many of the greatest of France. Also Marshal Haig of England and General Diaz of Italy. General Pershing has been named to represent this country.

Story About Harry Courtaine

Reference to Harry Courtaine on this page two weeks ago has drawn a story from a San Franciscan regarding that talented though unfortunate actor. It seems that Courtaine had got under the dominance of John Barleycorn to such an extent that Manager Maguire failed to take account of him on the weekly pay day, but adopted the plan of paying him every night after the performance. Courtaine set his wits to work to circumvent the manager. He went to a pawnbroker on Keatny street, near Washington, with the proposition that if the pawnbroker would let him have five dollars he would pay double the pawnbroking interest and deliver himself up at six o'clock as surety. The canny pawnbroker knew that the actor would be redeemed at curtain time if his whereabouts was known, and took the chance. Sure enough, at six o'clock Courtaine showed up, when he was duly tagged and numbered as a pledge, after which word was sent to Manager Maguire. As the play then on could not be given without Courtaine, the manager was forced to pay the principal and usurious interest necessary to release the pledge.

A Walking Encyclopedia

Louis Frick, who should be remembered by older San Franciscans as the proprietor of the old California Hotel barber shop, supplies the information that Harry Courtaine died in the East about eight years ago. Louis, who now holds forth behind a chair in the Palace Hotel tonsorial adjunct, still has a number of the Old Guard as patrons. John McCullough, Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth, John T. Raymond and many other members of the old and famous California theater were "shavees" of Louis. He has a most vivid recollection of those days. He is a walking encyclopedia of the history of the old California theater. Not only can he recall the actors and actresses, but in many instances is able to give the casts of the great productions of the celebrated theater's golden era. Louis is celebrated in another way. In the last four presidential years he has been the official barber of the train which carried the California delegates to the National Republican convention.

Close of the Baseball Season

The season of the Pacific Coast Baseball league ends tomorrow, October 17. It has been a fairly prosperous one, but is ending in something of a murk. The betting scandal in superior baseball had its premonition in the piking scandal here. The big league players who threw games received big money. Here they received pitiful amounts; but the disclosures have not been treated with a promptness and decision that would seem to reassure fandom. If there is doubt as to how the disclosures will affect the greater centers of baseball, having been vigorously taken in hand, the doubt must be intensified by the way the matter has been permitted to languish here. It must always be borne in mind that the hold of baseball is slighter here than in the big centers, and that a smaller cause will chill the enthusiasm of the fans. The games of the Pacific Coast league suffer from drafts. No sooner does a player show unusual class than he is called up higher. More of the players of the big league hail from California than from any other state, showing that this clime is especially adapted for developing players, as it is superior in so many other ways. It is notable that the pitchers of the rival clubs in the final game were former California players.

A Historic Hat

Colonel Irish burst upon the landscape last week in a unique and altogether different head covering. It was of the vintage of the late fifties, when statesmen and other notables were pictured in those straight-brimmed, high-crowned beavers, white and furry. This had seen severe usage, and thereby hangs a story, which the Colonel tells. The hat is the one that Horace Greeley wore on his trip to California, nearly sixty years ago. Its battered appearance was due to his experience in the stage coach driven by Hank Monk. The incident is related in Mark Twain's "Roughing It." Horace was apprehensive that he would not get through to Hangtown in time to fill a lecture engagement. He repeatedly expressed his fears. Hank Monk reassured him, and touched up the leaders, with the result that the passengers were severely jolted. There is a picture of the jouncing stage, with Horace's head bursting through the roof, the hat having been given the shape of an accordeon in the process, and Hank complacently advising him to keep his seat, that he would be got through on time. The Colonel came by the historic headpiece in this way: When Greeley arrived in this city, he evidently realized the desirability of replacing the injured hat with a new one, and went to a hatter's and effected the transformation. The battered hat was tagged and laid away as a souvenir. Thirty-five years ago Colonel Irish happened upon it, learned its history and prevailed upon the hatter to sell it to him.

A Distinguished Author Coming

H. G. Wells, the eminent English author, is coming to America to look us over. Something has been published as to his touring some sections of the country, it being understood that he will lecture—and, indeed, it being desirable that he should, as thereby the general public will have opportunity to see and hear him; but nothing has appeared of his intent to see the West, which would embrace California. It is not seen how he could miss this "Mighty Empire of the Pacific," as it was denominated by James G. Blaine. It is worthier of that designation now than it was in Blaine's time, for it has been shown by the census that it leads all other sections as to increase in population, California gaining first place of the forty-eight states in that respect. An effort will be made by the literati of San Francisco to induce the renowned author to come and see us, if he is not so disposed of his own accord. No state in the Union would be more hospitable, intellectually or in a more material way.

Another Who Capitalized An Idea

We have had with us during the past week another visitor who capitalized an idea and reaped from it a tremendous fortune. Perhaps we should not discount business ability and acumen in this connection; but the primary fact is that King Gillette offered the bearded world something that it felt the need of, and though it has had imitators, the first in the field has been able to maintain supremacy. It is probable that others have profited, but none that I have heard of possesses such incidentals as a thousand-acre orange orchard in Tulare and a bank at Lindsay. I get it that Gillette was a barber in Boston when the idea occurred to him. That the implement that has been so generally anathemized in barber shops should have originated in one is interesting in itself. The conclusion is that the originator had no idea of spending his life in the vocation, and was casting about for something that would enable him to make a creditable getaway, when the long-felt want of the bearded pards inspired to invent his device.

Never Touched Andy

Not everybody could have come unscathed out of the fix that Andy Gallagher found himself in. He had rather plainly violated a Federal statute by transporting liquor without official permission, and a municipal ordinance by using a municipal automobile for other than official business. The latter was complicated by the Federal provision for the confiscation of vehicles used for the unlawful transportation of liquor; yet through the maze, which would have daunted one not made of sterner stuff, Andy emerged almost with a halo. He declares it was all the work of those who sought his political confusion. Andy has—as who has not who gets very far in San Francisco politics?—enemies who are ever seeking his downfall. According to his representations they lay for him at every turn. That they do not "get" him is prima facie evidence of political astuteness on his part. The recent occurrence may have had strange features, but everything was regular, says Andy.

RELIEVED WITHOUT OPERATION

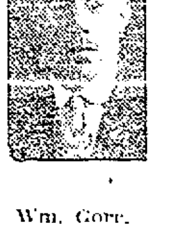
"For nine years I had Bladder Trouble of undescribable condition and found no relief whatever. I was told by the doctors that I must be operated on as there were stones in my bladder. Even though I was over 85 years old, I did not give up, but journeyed to the office of the Fong Wan Chinese Herb Co. I am now entirely free from my long-standing trouble and am in splendid health.

"R. T. WOOD,
"Cotati, Sonoma County, Cal."

LETTER OF GRATITUDE FROM TRADE UNION IRON WORKER



Wm. Gorr.

"For over four years I suffered from Dysentery. I suffered with such great pain and have been unable to work for the past three years.

"I consulted numerous doctors and was treated at various hospitals. Five different doctors wanted to operate to find out what was the matter.

"I was in despair when a friend asked me to try the FONG WAN HERB SPECIALIST, widely known as the most reliable and successful on the Pacific Coast. After four weeks of his herb tea, I am feeling fine and am back at work. I am a trade union iron worker.

"WILLIAM GORR,
"860 Adeline St., Oakland, Calif."

ASTHMA CURED AFTER 11 YEARS OF TERRIBLE SUFFERING

Mrs. Kirkbride.

"Every day for eleven years I suffered from Asthma. I became so bad that I could neither stand up nor lie down. I could hardly get my breath. I had taken treatments from many physicians and tried various compounds without relief.

"Seeing an advertisement of the wonderful cures made by the Fong Wan Herb Co., I began to drink their tea. After taking it for several weeks, I feel like a new woman, and am entirely free from Asthma.

"MRS. H. A. KIRKBRIDE."
"2035 Franklin St., Oakland."

Why the Herb Treatment of the Fong Wan Company is the most successful:

The company offers the experienced service of three reliable and competent herbalists. Fong Wan, with 13 years' experience in Chinese herbs; Dun Foy Woo, formerly of Tenth St., has practiced over 40 years; I. H. Fong came from China two years ago after finishing his studies.

CASE OF CHRONIC ASTHMA BAFFLES MANY DOCTORS

Chronic Asthma, which for seven years baffled American doctors, was helped in three months by treatment with Chan Herbs. Mrs. Spadoni, who was the sufferer in question, tells of her experience in the accompanying testimonial:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

For almost seven years of my life I was a sufferer of chronic asthma. During the period of time I tried many doctors, and sought different climatic conditions, but I am frank to state that I could find absolutely no relief.

After putting myself in the care of Y. L. Chan I found myself gradually improving, and at the end of three months' time during which I treated with him, I found myself completely cured from the ailment with which I was afflicted, namely chronic asthma.

It is now almost four years since you treated me for my trouble, during all of which time I have had no recurrence of the affliction, and during all of which time, and at the present time, enjoy the best of good health.

CHIROPRACTICS CHIROPRACTICS CHIROPRACTICS

CHIROPRACTIC IS FIRST AID

to those who understand—and last aid to those who do not. Thousands of cases which have become chronic and caused months and years of suffering could have been easily avoided had the sufferers but understood the principles of the science of CHIROPRACTIC and called a CHIROPRACTOR as FIRST AID.

DON'T WAIT UNTIL CHIROPRACTIC IS LAST AID.

Don't let disease get a hold on you. CHIROPRACTIC is the natural way to health. It is a certain [illegible] FIRST AID. [illegible] necessary to appeal to it in desperation as a LAST AID MEASURE.

If you don't understand CHIROPRACTIC call and let Dr. Stiles explain this wonderful science to you.

Dr. Stiles has a clinic free to those unable to pay, others at a moderate price. You are cordially invited to attend these Clinics where CHIROPRACTIC is demonstrated and explained. Mon., Wed., Fri., 8:30 P. M. Suite 217.

HEALTH FOR THE WORKINGMAN

If all employers of labor would investigate CHIROPRACTIC thoroughly and find out the increase in efficiency where the workmen have the benefit of regular CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTMENTS, the whole industry of the country would be revolutionized. The workman who has not one hundred per cent health cannot be expected to render one hundred per cent efficient work.

The old adage, "A stitch in time saves nine," holds emphatically true so far as matters of health are concerned. Not until periodic CHIROPRACTIC examinations become the rule—examinations made at intervals of not more than six months—can the ideal of life prolongation come anywhere near being realized.

MAKE YOUR OWN TERMS

We are advised by an out-of-town owner to sell his fine home on the heights for several thousand dollars less than it would cost to build the house to say nothing of the beautiful grounds. One would have to wait for many years to produce the fine ornamental trees, flowers, etc., that's on this property. There are about 12 rooms, elegant hardwood floors, etc. The price is slashed to $9500 (it is a $15,000 property). As little as $1000 cash and balance like rent. ### Opportunity

HAVE YOU EVER HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO INVEST IN THE ORIGINAL STOCK OF AN ACCREDITED BANKING INSTITUTION?

UNLESS YOU ARE A CAPITALIST THE ANSWER IS, NO.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT BANKING INSTITUTIONS EARN? DO YOU UNDERSTAND A BANK STATEMENT? DO YOU KNOW THAT THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS EARNED DURING THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THIS YEAR A YEARLY RATE OF 151.2%?

WOULD YOU LIKE TO PUT YOUR MONEY INTO THE ORIGINAL STOCK OF A BANKING CORPORATION WITH NO BONUS STOCK, WHERE YOUR MONEY WILL RETURN ITS FULL EARNING POWER AND WHERE IT IS JUST AS SAFE AS IF IT WERE IN A SAVINGS BANK EARNING BUT 4%?

A SMALL AMOUNT DOWN SECURES A FORMIDABLE BLOCK OF SHARES. THIS OPPORTUNITY IS LIMITED TO THE SALE OF 300 SHARES TO THE INDIVIDUAL AND IS THE GREATEST OPPORTUNITY THE SMALL INVESTOR HAS EVER HAD.

LEARN THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE RENTAL VALUE AND THE EARNING POWER OF MONEY.

IF YOU HAVE MONEY TO INVEST LET ME EXPLAIN, THEN INVESTIGATE FROM YOUR BANKER. DON'T HESITATE.

DO NOT INQUIRE UNLESS YOU HAVE MONEY TO INVEST.

The column of heights gives the elevation of each tide above or below the plane of Coast Survey Chart Soundings. The numbers are always additive to the chart depths, unless preceded by the minus sign or dash (—), when the numbers are subtractive from depths given on the chart.

Note—In the above tabulation of tides, the daily tides are given in the order of their occurrence, commencing with the early morning tide in the left hand column and the succeeding tides as they occur. On some days the three tides occur, the fourth occurring the following morning.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 16. — The cotton market was weak at the opening today, underselling from Liverpool, the south, from local and Wall Street interests reflecting the British labor situation and growing depression in the textile industry. First prices were 20 to 30 points lower. There was a fair amount of trade buying and short covering on the decline but except for occasional small rallies the market continued easy.

What kind of stocks to buy, also how and when to buy them, is interestingly told in our book, just published, entitled "The Principles of Profitable Investment."

Its 64 pages tell you the vital things about the stock market—how to judge a security—how to make a profit on stocks.

It contains no "tips" on certain issues, and nothing for the man who wants to take a short cut to wealth, but deals with fundamentals. You should read it before investing. Write today. It's free. Dept. 1.

NEW R. R. BUILT IN RECORD TIME

MADDOCK, Oct. 16.—One of the most remarkable pieces of railroad in the United States is the 18-mile line of the Southern Pacific company, the length of Sutter Basin and having its main station at this place, in Sutter county. Such is the statement of Assistant Engineer W. B. Isaacs of the Southern Pacific company, who is now superintending the erection of $50,000 worth of buildings here.

"The Sutter Basin is remarkable, first, because of the large number of sidings," said Isaacs. "It has a siding every mile and a half, with a total of five miles in sidings. The storage capacity is 6000 cars. It was necessary to put down these extra rail lines to take care of the large number of cars of produce which the great basin yields. I doubt if another agricultural district in America has a rail line with so many miles of side tracks.

The rail line is remarkable, too, because of the speed with which it was constructed. Just sixty-six days after Engineer Isaacs ordered the first dirt moved, freight traffic was flowing over the line. During the current season 2000 car loads of food will have been moved from Sutter Basin, much of it bound for the eastern coast of the United States.

A depot for freight and passengers costing $25,000 is now being built at Maddock. The total cost of railroad improvements at this place, not including the side tracks, will be $50,000. The Sutter Basin line is one of the few railroad extensions in the United States since the war began.

KEEP FACTORIES GOING, SAYS MILLAR

J. R. Millar, general manager of the California Cotton Mills in Oakland, replying to a questionnaire put out by Harris, Winthrop & Co., New York and Chicago bankers, and designed to disclose general political, economic and business conditions, is quoted by that firm as follows:

"The majority feel that it would be economy for us, if necessary, to cancel our entire debt with Europe rather than close our industries down and put our people out of employment which is sure to happen under a free trade policy.

"There is more wealth produced in this country through manufacturing enterprises than through farming and that wealth is largely distributed in wages. Unless the wage earners are kept employed we are sure to face dull times whether Europe pays her debt to us or not.

"Banking accommodation is in fair supply for certain industries and occupations while credit is very scarce and high for others. Rates, so far as the writer knows, are somewhat cheaper in San Francisco than in New York."

WOMAN IN BASEBALL SCANDAL

GRAND JURY STARTS PROBE OF CONDITIONS IN THE COAST LEAGUE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—A young woman whose identity is being kept secret was questioned at length today by W. C. Doran, chief deputy district attorney of Los Angeles county, in connection with the Coast League baseball scandal being investigated by the county grand jury.

The woman, beautiful and stylishly gowned appeared at the district attorney's office in response to a subpoena. It is said she was seen several times at Washington Park during the 1919 season, when the clubs playing there are alleged by the district attorney's office to have been enmeshed in a gigantic gambler's ring. Further, it is said she is an acquaintance of several of the players—Vernon, Salt Lake and Portland, under subpoena by the grand jury.

Doran declined to state whether she was connected with the gamblers or whether she would appear before the grand jury Monday, when it resumes consideration of the league scandal

BABE BORTON FIRST WITNESS.

Monday "Babe" Borton, former first baseman of the Vernon club, is scheduled to be the first witness before the inquisitorial body He is expected to testify as to how the Salt Lake club players were bribed, as alleged, to "throw" games so Vernon, last year, could win the pennant. Borton denies the gamblers had anything to do with the bribery of the Salt Lake players

Following Borton on the stand will appear the Portland players under subpoena and who will be compelled to remain in Los Angeles after their team mates conclude the final series of this season tomorrow at Washington Park. These players are. Catchers Del Baker and Art Koehler and "Red" Oldham of the Deirolt Tigers, but last year a Beaver.

Manager McCredie of the Portland club will also wait attendance upon the grand jury, as he did Friday, the first day of the inquiry. There was no session of the grand jury today.

ALLEGES GAMBLERS' RING.

The district attorney's office asserts it will show a big gamblers' ring in absolute control of at least five of the eight clubs of the league last year This control it obtained by bribing at least three and possibly six players on the five clubs Further, charges the district attorney's office, the gamblers instructed the corrupted players deliberately to "throw" games, in consideration of which these same players were "slipped" thousands of dollars.

Coast League baseball, as played last year, is characterized by Doran as having been one of the most colossal bunco games ever unloaded upon the Pacific Coast He afrther asserts under the conditions ruling the league parks last year the sport loving public had no chance whatever of getting a square deal.

Magnates to Testify Soon In Ball Probe

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox, and Charles H. Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers, have been summoned before the grand jury investigating gambling in organized baseball and have signified their willingness to appear next Tuesday when the probe will be resumed, it was learned today.

The exact nature of the testimony expected from the two magnates was not disclosed but it is believed they will be asked regarding reports they have received concerning alleged "throwing" of ball games.

Arnold Rothstein, New York, racetrack owner and a spectacular figure in the sporting world, also will appear Tuesday, it was said today. Abe Attell, former featherweight champion, who is said to have "framed" the deal, whereby eight White Sox players were bribed to "throw" the 1919 world's series to Cincinnati, is said to have used Rothstein's name in putting over his deals. Rothstein is expected to deny before the grand jury any part in the gigantic "frame-up."

Harry Redmond of East St. Louis, Joseph C. Beach and Thomas C Kearney of St. Louis, are other witnesses who will be called to testify when the inquiry is resumed.

Technical High Fifteen Wins From Lowell

By "BUD" MORIARITY.

Coach Andy Hardin's rugby fifteen from Technical high school displayed a keen brand of "go-get-'em" paprika yesterday morning when they outfoxed Lowell high school of San Francisco in a 6-0 game at Ewing field. Field Captain Viveiros led his boys out on the sward with a strong determination to win even if Captain Olds and Dutch Wood had been barred by rivals' protest. Lowell matched up with the purple and gold boys in the scrum, but outbeefed them in the backfield.

Left wing Johnny Edwards went over for the first try after a machine-like backfield passing rush, towards the end of the first half. Dribbling brought the pigskin up within scoring distance. A scrum was called and the Tech hookers got the ball out to the backfield by way of Newton Davis, halfback, from where they went over.

Bill Cowes prevented a try for the red and white adherents in the second half when he fought the ball out of danger on a two-yard lineout. Field Captain Viveiros scored the next three points when he broke through the Lowell backfield for a try. It was not converted. Tech scrum men proved their mettle in this part when they smeared every play of Lowell's [illegible] aided Lowell defense. The San Francisco backfield could not get started to put into use their terrible speed. Wing Forward Avery was responsible for this.

Tech's lineup. Cowes and Bechtel, front rank; Lombardi, lock, Jensen and (Campeau), breakaway; Silva and Crook, rear rank; Avery, wing forward; Davis, halfback, Moriarty, first five; Field Captain Vivieros, second five; Dow, center three; Edwards and McNaughton, wings, Ludders, fullack.

Seattle Takes Second Place In Flag Race

The Seals and Rainiers got five hits apiece yesterday at Recreation park, San Francisco but the men from the north got their wallops when they were most needed so Seattle won a ball game two to nothing. Jim Scott, Bert Cole and Herb McQuaid did more or less pitching for the Seals while Demaree went the route for Seattle Scott lasted two and a third innings and Cole meandered along till the eighth, when McQuaid took charge

The visitors got a run in the second and another in the third and the ball game was over right there. Zamloch, Murphy, Kenworthy, Baldwin and Hasbrook got two hits apiece The victory of the Rainiers put them in second place, as the Angels lost yesterday.

E. J. Hadden And A. P. Crist In Golf Finals

In the semi-finals of the Birthday tournament at Sequoyah yesterday E J Hadden defeated Archie Andrew 2-1 Both players are shooting par golf. Andrew had 3 birdies in the first 9 and Hadden had 2, and also a wonderful 3 at the 12th hole E J had only 11 putts on the last 8 holes played and this, as usual, settled the game in his favor The game was all even going to the 16th, which looked like Andrew's hole all the way. Hadden sliced his tee short and was off the green with his second while Andrew was on for a putt for 3 Hadden's 3d shot stymied his opponent, who conceded the putt to get a chance of a 3 for a win, but overputting the hole he failed to sink the return putt He lost the hole and was 1 down with 2 to go

Andrew was strong with his 2d to the 17th and found an unplayable lie, which gave Hadden the hole and game

The Crist-Valentine game was decided during the week A. P Crist won a hard fought game and now meets Mike Hadden over 36 holes today for the championship of the Sequoyah Golf Club In the second flight yesterday Julius Young defeated C. ## CROCKETT FETE SHOWS LANDING OF COLUMBUS

CROCKETT, Oct. 16—A bit of Italy, transplanted for a day to the United States, was the celebration of Columbus day here last Tuesday. Italian residents were joined by other residents of Crockett in staging a unique fiesta.

A replica of the Bay of Naples had been erected and here the celebration started at 9:30 a. m. "Columbus" in his ship, the "Santa Maria," appeared at the spot where the queen was waiting with her retinue. There was a ceremony of bidding farewell to Columbus and his crew, and the ship then sailed across the lake to the point where the Redmen were waiting to greet the navigator, much as Redmen might have greeted Columbus when he landed at San Salvador.

The parade started as soon as the landing of Columbus was effected and the Redmen had completed their ceremonies. The queen's float came first, followed by the Redmen and Columbus in a float

There were twenty floats representing the various organizations and the departments of the mill

The queen's float was awarded first prize. It was built by the Italian boosters. Other prizes were:

Second prize, warehouse department of the C. and H

Best decorated auto, E H Peterson, first, C. and H. office auto, second

Neatest appearing organization, Eagles.

At 11 30 the Italian consul and G. M. Rolph addressed the crowd assembled in Recreation park.

Promptly at 12 the big barbecue was served in Italian style. Over 1500 people were fed. The two bands alternated in concert numbers while the dinner was being served.

At 2 o'clock the athletic program was staged. The races were given in the main for the small children.

The greased pole was there to be climbed, the winner to get a 25-pound sack of sugar, but no one could be found to do the climbing.

The greased pig contest was exciting, and there is a doubt still as to who was the real catcher.

The California Canoe Club gave the visitors some thrills in their various stunts on the "Bay of Naples"

At 8:30 a replica of Mt. Vesuvius was seen in eruption. The eruption lasted for half an hour The lighting effect was wonderful and the entire town was made a sclear as day from the reflection

At 9 o'clock the two dances started, one at the community auditorium and the other at the community center.

Community spirit is strong in this vicinity and the celebration of Columbus day was made possible by that spirit

Seals and Rainiers to Furnish Last Game Here This A. M.

Although today marks the end of the 1920 season for the Pacific Coast league, there is still enough interest in the race to get the fans out of their beds to watch the Seals and Seattle clubs in play at the local ball park this morning. The clubs will wind up the season with two games today, one here in the morning at 10:30 and the other at San Francisco. Interest is shown in these clubs because they are fighting for second place and the owner of it cannot be determined until after this morning's game, at least.

MARTINEZ, Oct 16—Supplying an automobile for a county school nurse will be undertaken by the various women's clubs of the county affiliated with the Contra Costa County Federation of Women's Clubs, as the result of the federation meeting in Walnut Creek Wednesday afternoon. The discussion of the school nurse problem ended with a decision that each club and Red Cross chapter in the county would endeavor to raise as much money as possible to purchase a car.

Recently Superintendent of Schools W. H. Hanlon announced several candidates for the position of school nurse refused the post with its $1800 salary because an automobile is not provided. ## Pleasanton Vine Season in Swing

RICHMOND Oct 16—This has been a very busy week for the local vineyardists, who have taken advantage of the good weather which has followed so closely the storm of last week Work in the vineyards is progressing well. Motor trucks have been pressed into service and with plenty of box cars on hand. A big tonnage is being moved from this section daily.

The local wineries are all open and receiving all they can handle but the demand for grapes is so heavy that the growers have all they can do to fill the contracts they have signed The work in the vineyards has been very hard since the rains. Had the storm been delayed a few weeks the greater part of the crop would have been cared for and the proceeds would have been greater.

Rain Gives Feed on Ranes Start

BYRON, Oct 16—An inch of rain has fallen in the West Side sections during the week, with a much heavier precipitation in the Vasco hill country Feed is starting on the ranges, and cattlemen are elated as grass was short. Slight damage was done to the fifth cutting of alfalfa lying in the fields In the delta section where corn is being harvested, the rain did not harm. In the bean fields there was no loss.

October rains have generally proved forerunners of wet winters. In 1882, 1883 and 1884, October precipitation was followed by the wettest of winters The same was true, on a less scale, in 1886, 1889, 1894, 1896, 1899, 1900, 1902, 1904 and 1909, every one of these years witnessing an inch to three inches in October, followed by a seasonal fall of more than 15 and up to 18 inches Since 1909 there has been no record of more than a sprinkle in this section in October, so it would appear to be a sign that the country is in for a substantial rainfall, which it needs
